"AS YOU LIKE IT" AND "THE MERCHANT OF VENICE" TO BE GIVEN FOR LOCAL CHARITY ON SATURDAY, JUNE 10.

Arrangements have been completed by Winfield S. Angleman for two outdoor performances of Shakespearian plays on the Casino grounds on Saturday, June 10. Leading members of Frohman's companies will compose the casts and the productions will be given on the Casino grounds in West Seventh street.

It is planned to make the performances the finest that have ever been given in this city. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of either the Children's Home or the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, arrangements now being made for either one or the other to take charge of the enterprise.

Charles MacGeachey, a prominent representative of Frohman, has gotten together an all star east. Herbert Sidney, who played Shylock to Ada Rehan's Portio, in the "Merchant of Venice," will be one of the leading actors to take part in the productions.

For the matinee performance, "As You Like It," will be put on and for the night performance "The Merchant of Venice" will be given. In case of rain the Casino will be used both afternoon and night.

All the scenery, stage effects and paraphernalia to be used will be brought direct from the Frohman houses in New York. The attraction is counted upon to draw big audiences not only from Plainfield but from the surrounding country.

JUSTICE METED OUT TO A NOISY TENANT

JUSTICE THREATENS LANDLORDS IN DISPOSING OF DISORDERLY CASE.

As a result of the raid on Mrs. Annie Madden's house in Dunellen, Decoration Day, Peter Givamont, of Dunellen, and Edward Mercier and George Totten, of this city, were arranged before Justice VonMinden in Dunellen yesterday afternoon. A fight between Mercier and Totten, i which the latter was severely pummeled, caused the raid. Several women were in the house, all more or less under the influence of rum, according to the officers, when the raid was made, but only the men were taken into custody Mr. Madden was ordered to appear as a witness.

Mercier was fined $15 and costs. Givamont was let off with a lecture, Totten was found guilty, but sentence was suspended after the judge had characterized his conduct in strong terms.

The Madden house has been a source of scanda to the neighborhood for some time, it is said, and Justice Vnn Minden scored the woman roundly. He told her that another complaint would lead to her commitment to jail, and advised her to move from the borough.

"It is the only way in which you can be certain to save yourself from jail," said the court. "At the slightest hint of trouble from your place we would place a constable in front of the house and keep him there twenty-four hours a day, and at the first opportunity you would be taken in. And if you come here again you will go to New Brunswick."

The justice gave notice to all landlords in the borugh that the law holds the landlord equally guilty with the disorderly tenant, and he would enforce that phase of the law in every future case.

After the trial the court was given to understand by a brother of the Madden woman' s landlord that she would be compelled to move as soon as it was possible to oust her

Mrs. Howard Surprised.

The presentation was made by Mrs. Robert Hangliter. Music and games were enjoyed and refreshments were served at the close.

NO BAGGAGE ROOM FOR EAST BOUND STATION

JERSEY CENTRAL NOT TO MAKE NEEDED IMPROVEMENT FOR SOME TIME.

Owing to the fact that bids recently submitted were considered too high, the Jersey Central Railroad has decided not to build a baggage room at the East bound station on North avenue this year. The idea was to make an addition at the east end of the station. This addition was to be in keeping architectually with the handsome structure that the company built in 1901.

A narrow track of ground to the south of the railroad property and fronting on Watchung avenue was purchased by the road some time ago and is now being filled in It is interesting to build it up so that it will be gradually sloped from the height of the land just south of the platform at that point and there was some talk of building a baggage room there although the officials have not confirmed that report.

COLLAR BONE BROKEN.

Mrs. J. C. Morris, Guest at Boice-Tappen Wedding, Hurt in Runaway.

Mrs. J. C. Morris, of New Brunswick, mother of L. D. Morris and George R. Morris, who lives here, was injured in a runaway that occurred as Mr. and Mrs. Morris and their son, Parker, started home in a tw-seated carriage from the Boice-Tappen wedding at Randophville last night. The horse, made restless by waiting, jumped suddenly as Parker Morris took up the reins and overturned the carriage, throwing the three occupants out. Mrs. Morris' collar bone was broken. The husband and son were bruised. The horse was captured a short distance down the road. Mrs. Morris was taken to her home, where a doctor attened her.

Dog Was Nailed In.

A bull terrior belonging to Evarts Tracy, of Hillside avenue, which for three days was supposed to have been lost, was found yesterday under a barn on the Tracy place, where it had been nailed in by carpenters engaged in repair work about the property. The dog probably crept under the barn to rest and slept through the workmen's operations. It disappeared on Monday, when the workmen were instructed to stop work for three days, on account of a neighbor's illness. No one went near the barn until they returned to their task yesterday, so the dog called for release unheard.

He Didn't See the Joke.

Not taking the matter as a joke as the perpetrators intended, Emil Dembowsky, of the borough, yesterday had warrants issued for the arrest of John Retzer and John Wirth, charging them with stealing two wheels belonging to he and his daughter. They were taken from the Independent Gun Club grounds, Tuesday, merely in fun but Dembowsky didn't see it that way. The matter was to have sifted out before Justice Smalley last night, but as the principals failed to appear, it is thought Dembowsky realied "the laugh was on him" and let it drop.

$4,000 DAMAGE TO BARN

W. B. Wadsworth's Structure Gives Fireman Hard Fight.

CONTENTS SAVED.

Blaze Probably Due to Spontaneous Combustion or Electric Wires —Loss Covered by Insurance.

Caused either by effective electric light wiring or spontaneous combustion, in all probability the latter, fire broke out in the handsome brick barn on the William B. Wadsworth place on West Eighth street, at 6:30 this morning, resulting in damage estimated at $4,000. The blaze was one of the most stubborn the local firemen have had in many months and they had a three-hour fight before getting it out. Two tons of hay were stored on the second floor and this was either burned or rendered useless, but the remainder of the contents were uninjured.

The blaze was discovered almost simultaneously by members of the family and a passerby, the latter turning in an alarm from box 36. It was then in an upper part and Mr. Wadsworth and his son were able to get out an automobile and the horses and carriages. The interior of the structure is finished off with yellow pine and th smoke from this together with the burning hay made it almost impossible for the firemen to get at the seat of the trouble.

Four lines of hose were laid in and the pipemen were forced to crawl along the floor by degrees frequently having to abandon the fight and return to the outer air. Captain Daley, of No. 1 company, was all but overcome several times and other men were made sick. Despite these drawbacks the flames were confined to the second floor and the roof. The latter will have to be rebuilt and much of the interior work will have to be replaced.

The barn was one of the handsomest in the city and cost originally about $7,000. The furnishings were of the very best and though defective insulation has been mentioned as the origin of the blaze it seems hardly possible as all of the wires are in iron conduits. The coachman left the place at 5 o'clock and at that time everything appeared to be all right. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

WEDDED THE NURSE WHO RESTORED HIM TO HEALTH

PRETTY ROMANCE OF MISS LILIAN THORN AND WALTER H. BUCHANAN.

Back of the announcements received by friends yesterday, telling of the marriage of Miss Lillian Beatrice Thorne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guillermo Thorne, of East Second street, and Walter Henry Buchanan, of New York, is a pretty romance that had its beginning in the Newark hospital last fall.

Miss Thorne was attached to the nursing staff of the institution and in the course of her duties was assigned the care of a patient suffering from fever. He proved to be Mr. Buchanan and while she was strength they became fast friends. Her gentle ministrations while the fever was raging made him a devoted lover and when he left the hospital it was only to return shortly after, not as a patient but as a seeker for the hand of the pretty nurse. She became his wife on April 22 last the ceremony being performed at his home in New York by the pastor of the Fourth Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Buchanan is a native of Ottawa, Can., and is employed by the American Bank Note Company, holding a responsible position. Mrs. Buchanan was graduated from the training class for nurses of the New York City hospital on Blackwell's Island and was assigned to the Newark hospital some time after completing her course.

STATE CENSUS BEGAN THROUGHOUT STATE TODAY

BY FEDERAL COUNT FIVE YEARS AGO NEW JERSEY'S POPULATION 1,883,669.

The work of taking the census in this city and throughout the State began today. This State census is taken every ten years, and takes place in the middle of each decade, so that the State gets an enumeration of the inhabitants every five years, the State and Federal censuses alternating.

The State census comprises little except statistics of population, name, age, place of birth, etc., of each person.

By the Federal census of 1900, the population of New Jersey was 1,883,669, being an increase of 438,736 in a decade. The population by the State census of 1895 was 1,672,942, which showed a gain of 228,009 in the five years after 1890. If the same ratio of increase is maintained, the census when finished this year will show the population of New Jersey to be considerably more than two millions.

PARK CLUB THEATRICALS

Society Folk to Present "A Kettle of Fish."

A TALENTED CAST.

Dean Pratt, late of Daley's Theatre, Has Coached Amateur Performers to a Degree of Proficiency —Given Tomorrow Night.

The farce comedy "A Kettle of Fish," to be presented at the Park Club tomorrow night by local talent, will undoubtedly be one of the social events of the season. The cast, one of the best ever selected for such a performance, has attained a high degree of proficiecy and is expected to delight and amuse the large audience that is sure to attend. The comedy is mirth-provoking throughout and thos e selected to take the different parts are especially well fitted for them.

Dean Pratt, of New York, is coaching the cast and is very well pleased with the results. The time of the play is the present and the place is located in a country town adjacent to New York in the the first act and in New York in the last act. The cast:

Frederick Salmon—A country gentleman—Charles P Lyman.

Paul Turbot—His son-in-law—Harry L. McGee.

Herbert Grayling—Prosecting for love—Effingham Pinto.

Dr. Pollock— Prospecting for himself—C. W. McGee.

Signor Prescatore—Prospect for another—H. O. White.

Crab—A postman—F. O. Ball.

Mrs. Salmon—Salmon's better-half—Miss Mabel VanDeventer.

Maude—Her daughter, married to Paul—Miss Helen Phillips.

Rosa—Her daughter, unmarried—Miss Nanon West.

Minna—A maid servant—Miss Margaret McCutchen.

Tickets for the performance can be obtained at Armstrong's drug store.

"A Little Kettle of Fish" is a version of the well known and popular play "7-20-8," which had so successful a run at Daly's theatre in New York. Those who have seen the rehearsals recognize in Charles H. Lyman, as "Mr. Salmon," a country gentleman with poetic tendencies, the attributes of greatness not heretofore suspected; while in the character of "Mrs. Salmon," Miss Mabel VanDeventer is a model mother-in-law and ambitious wife. Harry L. McGee appears as their son-in-law, and Miss Helen Phillips as "Maud," their married daughter, while the part of their unmarried daughter Rosa, the original of the painting number 728, is most attractively taken by Miss Nanon West, and that of "Mr. Grayling," a gentleman of leisure employing his idle time in the pleasant pursuit of hunting a face, is taken by Effingham Pinto. Neither Miss West nor Mr. Pinto are members of the club, and the entertainment committee, on behalf of the Park Club, is indebted to them for their kindness in assisting.

Henry C. White, as "Signor Pescatore," who in the interest of a certain Italian prince, is also searching for the original Italian; and Clifford W. McGee will evoke continued merriment in his role of "Dr. Pollock," a doctor who "'bought his title in Germany." Miss Margaret W. McCutchen as "Minna," a maid, with a yearning beyond her station, is most successful; and Fred O. Ball makes as good a postman as he does a bowler.

The play has been prepared under the supervision of Deane Pratt, of New York city, the well known coach of the celebrated Amaranth Dramatic Society, of Brooklyn. Pratt was also with Augustin Daly's company for several seasons.

Following the play, there will be dancing and for all those who attend a most enjoyable evening is assured.

Peace Conference at Tsarskoe-Selo. Emperor's Ministers Advise Him to End War—Rojestvensky, Nebogatoff and Enquist Prisoners.

LONDON, June 1.—Special dispatches from St. Petersburg say that a series of conferences is proceeding at Tsarskoe-Selo to determine not only the question of peace, but whether it is advisable to yield to the popular demand for the immediate convocation of a national assembly.

The seriousness of the situation created by the complete destruction of the Russian fleet seems to be fully realized at Tsarskoe-Selo, where the emperor has assembled practically all the members of the imperial family to decide on the course to pursue. All the ministers with the exception of the ministers of war and marine favor the conclusion of peace.

No trouble is anticipated in meeting the payment of an indemnity, as financiers who were not willing to lend money for a continuation of the war are ready to accommodate Russia if money is needed for the purpose of concluding peace.

Some of the members of the imperial family are understood to be urging his majesty to retrieve the situation by making common cause with the people against the bureaucracy.

Tokyo official reports say:

"In the battle of the Korean strait the damages sustained by our fleet were very slight, and none of our battleships, cruisers, destroyers and other ships were lost except three torpedo boats.

"Under imperial command Admiral Togo has been authorized to permit Admiral Nebogatoff to submit to the czar the reports on the battle and a list of Russian killed, wounded and prisoners. The admiral was also authorized to release on parole the surrendered officers of the Nicolai I., Orel, Apraxine and Seniavin.

"Rojestvensky was taken to Sasebo Naval hospital. Admiral Nebogatoff is also a prisoner.

"Rojestvensky's skull was fractured, requiring operation; serious, but not dangerous. Total Japanese losses to date three torpedo boats sunk, three officers killed and about 200 men killed and disabled.

"The Russians lost 22 ships and 7,246 men."

A dispatch from St. Petersburg says:

"Russian cruiser Almaz is the only Russian ship arriving at Vladivostok. Captain reports he saw the Kniaz Suvaroff sink. Rojestvensky was wounded. Safely lowered aboard torpedo boat Buiny. Not yet heard from here.

"Two Russian hospital ships captured and are at Sasebo. Russian officers will be released on parole.

"The flagship Kniaz Suvaroff, the battleships Oslyabya, Navarin, Imperator Alexander III., Borodin and Sissoi Veliki were sunk."

A Tokyo report says:

"The naval battle in the Korean strait, near Orleung island, is called the battle of the Sea of Japan."

Admiral Togo reports that Vice Admiral Enquist was captured with Admiral Rojestvensky. The Russian prisoners, Admiral Togo says, will exceed 3,000.

A survivor of the Admiral Nakhimoff said:

"Only ninety minutes after the firing began a sudden shock was felt under the Admiral Nakhimoff, and she began to sink with great rapidity. My belief is that she either struck a mine or a torpedo. The crew numbered 600 men, a majority of whom went down in the ship, as there was no time to get the men on deck.

"In the engagement fought off Liancourt rocks the Russian battleships were surrounded by Japanese ships, which circled about them, pouring in a terrible fire, and they almost immediately fell into hopeless confusion. Seeing their plight, Vice Admiral Togo signaled from the battleship Mikasa a demand to know whether the Russians were ready to surrender. Our ships complied with the demand."

Marmo Reprieved.

TRENTON, N. J., June 1.—Judge Lanning last night refused the writ of habeas corpus for the condemned man Marmo, but allowed an appeal to the United States supreme court. This will stay the execution of Marmo, who was to have been hanged in Newark today.

WAR ON THE RIVER

Canadian Log Driver Dynamited Van Buren Boom.

AMERICANS THREATENED TO SHOOT

Trouble on St. John River Over Waterway For Driving Logs—Governments Will Adjust Question of Navigation.

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 1.—A special from Van Buren, Me., says that on Saturday last a Canadian log driving contractor blew up with dynamite a sheer boom belonging to Americans in the river St. John and passed up the river with his boats. At the next boom he was met by an armed party of Americans and driven back. The contractor said that he was acting under instructions to clear the river of obstructions to navigation.

Levi W. Pond, the man in charge of the New Brunswick corporation lumber drives and who destroyed the fastening that secured the log boom of the Van Buren Lumber company, a Maine corporation in the upper St. John river, came here last night and laid his side of the controversy before Attorney General Pugsley of New Brunswick and will submit a written statement of the facts in the case to the New Brunswick provincial government. Pond is also seeking legal advice as to action against President Allan Hammond of the Van Buren company, whom he charges with threatening to shoot him.

In discussing the matter last night Pond said that during the present season he had taken three lumber drives past Van Buren. Two of these drives were taken around the Van Buren company's boom on the Canadian side of the river. To get the third drive through the foreman, acting under Pond's orders, "tripped the wings" of the boom and sent the logs down to Grand Falls. Threats were made by the Americans, Pond says, to shoot if there was any further interference with the booms.

Pond and his crew, with several boats loaded with supplies, returned up the river on Saturday, bound to Edmundston, N. B., for another drive. Pond, according to his own story, was armed with a rifle, but when the crew reached the lower boom of the Van Buren company he handed the gun to one of his men while he himself blew up the boom with a dynamite cartridge. Pond had ordered the man with the rifle to fire in case any shots came from the shore, but none did.

Pond said that when he reached the second boom he found the Van Buren company's crew, superior in numbers to his own, on the Canadian bank of the river. Three of the American crew carried rifles. Pond demanded a passage past the boom, but the Americans would not permit this, whereupon he ordered his fireman, who is a constable, to arrest the fireman of the Van Buren crew, the latter at that time being on Canadian soil. Pond said that when the constable advanced to arrest the man he was told by the Americans that if he took two steps further he would be shot. The constable was recalled by Pond and the party at once returned down the river.

The New Brunswick log drivers who were concerned in the dispute over river obstructions say that Allen Hammond, president of the Van Buren Lumber company, and his party were armed with rifles at the time, but that they themselves were unarmed. Levi Pond has made a complaint to the sheriff of Madawaska county and demands that the river be kept free from obstructions at Van Buren, so that his drive of logs can be brought down. The Canadian government will endeavor to prevent serious trouble pending an adjustment of the entire question of navigation by the British and American governments.

Five Killed by Mine Cave-in.

MONTROSE, Colo., June 1.—At least five men were killed and two seriously injured by the caving in of the Gunnison Reclamation mine tunnel. C. Taylor and Fred Groff were pinned under heavy timbers and terribly injured. They would have been drowned but for the efforts of their entombed companions, who improvised a dam to hold back the water which poured into the tunnel for a time. Twenty-one men were rescued uninjured, but exhausted. They were hoisted with ropes through a shaft which had been sunk sixty feet in less than twenty-four hours. The rescuers worked in three minute relays until the tunnel was reached.

Offered to Die For His Father.

CULLMAN, Ala., June 1.—The jury in the case of John Williams, a farmer charged with the murder of State Senator Robert L. Hipp, returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed punishment at death. Williams was sentenced to be hanged July 14. Williams' son, aged twenty, begged the court to permit him to be hanged in his father's stead. Williams shot Hipp while he and a deputy sheriff were attempting to levy upon some of Williams' property. An appeal will be taken to the supreme court.

Gifts For Brides

A Sumptuous Show of Silver

We are having our Annual Sale of gifts in silver for brides-to-be. Preparations for this sale have been progressing quietly for some weeks. Leading silversmiths have given us generous support by selling us high-grade artistic pieces and sets, rare and beautiful, such as they usually confine to the more favored of the exclusive Jewelry houses.

In our show windows and cases in the store you can see today, if not the largest, one of the finest collections of Sterling and Quadruple Plate ever exhibited in Newark. It is a royal line from which to select a gift for the June bride. So easy to find something totally different from anything you have seen before—something that will be certain to delight the recipient.

Take, for instance, this magnificent Candelabra. It is quadruple plate, in butler and gray finish, with applied decoration. It has five lights and stands about 20 inches high. Unique in design, one of the first of this design turned out. Not as expensive as you would expect—$21.00.

Here is a Punch Bowl in quadruple plate, butler and gray finish, beautifully hand engraved and gold lined. Certainly superb. We sell this punch bowl regularly for $38. It may be had now for—$34.50.

This pretty Silver Service may appeal to you. It is in the exquisite butler finish, with applied border, and consists of a tray 16x19 inches and a five-piece tea set. Price complete is $42.75.

Maybe a tilting Water Set would appeal to you as the most appropriate gift you could give. Here is one entirely new and beautiful in design, in butler and gray finish; applied decoration, very massive, for only $16.75.

Sterling Silver Berry Bowls are nice. These, with applied border, gray finish, polished center, are indeed beautiful, and cannot be matched, we think, for the price—$28.

Sterling Silver Bon Bon Dishes in entirely new designs; gray border, polished center, something pretty for those who do not wish to spend so much—only $8.75.

Silver Deposit Vases in entirely new designs and kinds of glass may be had for only $5.95.

We could extend this list of beautiful things indefinitely, but we will not tire you with so many details. Come to the store. See the pieces for yourself.

Cicero Won the Derby.

LONDON, June 1.—Lord Rosebery's Cicero won the Derby stakes of 3,500 sovereigns for colts and fillies foaled in 1902. M. Blanc's Jardy was second, and Chevalier Ginistrelli's Signorina was third; time, 3:11. The distance is about a mile and a half. Nine horses started. The absence of American entries from the great event at Newmarket deprived the race of much of the international character which has made recent Derbys interesting. France was represented by M. Blanc's Jardy. Cicero was ridden by Danny Maher, the only American jockey riding.

American Woman Champion Defeated

LONDON, June 1.—Miss Georgianna Bishop of Bridgeport, Conn., champion woman golf player of the United States, was defeated by one hole in the fourth round of the women's golf championship tournament at Cromper. Her conqueror was Miss Lloyd Roberts. In the third round Miss Mary B. Adams of Boston beat Miss Eachus, Mrs. W. H. Martin (American) beat Mrs. Harland and Miss Pearson beat Miss Ethel Burnett (American).

Williams Tennis Team Won.

BOSTON, June 1.—In the New England intercollegiate tennis tournament here the Dartmouth pair, Wallis and McLane, gave the last year's champions, Smith and Northrup, of Williams a very pretty fight in their half of the semifinal round in doubles and came very near pulling off the match, the games being four all in the third set. The Williams team then braced up and won the next two games and the match.

Clifton Forge at Elmridge.

KANSAS CITY, June 1.—Iole, at 30 to 1, took the first race at Elmridge after a stirring finish, a nose in front of Helgerson. Cloverhampton, at 8 to 1, took the third race cleverly from Melodius. Clifton Forge, favored by a running start, won the fifth race, the feature of the day, handily from Don Domo.

Tenny Belle Won.

ST. LOUIS, June 1.—Interest in the American Jockey club's offering centered in the fifth race at a mile, the horses to be ridden by owners or trainers. Tenny Belle, carrying 141 pounds, with Mr. Fitzgerald up, won.

High Chancellor at Fair Grounds.

ST. LOUIS, June 1.—High Chancellor won the feature race of the card at the fair grounds. The match race between Dishabille and Fireball, scheduled for today, has been postponed.

BONAPARTE TO NAVY

President Appoints a Successor to Paul Morton.

RETIRES TO HEAD NEW YORK SUBWAY

New Secretary Is a Personal Friend of Roosevelt—Eminent as a Lawyer, Is a Civil Service Reformer and For Strong Navy.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—President Roosevelt has authorized the announcement that Charles J. Bonaparte of Baltimore would be appointed secretary of the navy to succeed Paul Morton, who yesterday stated that he would retire July 1 to go to New York to take charge of the plans for the construction of the subway system for operation in connection with the surface lines.

The president also authorized the statement that no other change in the personnel of the cabinet was likely to take place in the near future. Secretary Shaw already has indicated his intention of retiring from the cabinet, probably next February. Rumors of the retirement of Attorney General Moody have been published, but it is understood to be his intention now to continue in the cabinet for a year and a half and perhaps longer.

To all except President Roosevelt's closest advisers the announcement of the selection of Mr. Bonaparte as the head of the navy came as a distinct surprise, although it had been determined on by the president for some time in anticipation of Mr. Morton's retirement. In all the gossip Mr. Bonaparte has not been suggested as Mr. Morton's possible successor.

For many years Mr. Bonaparte has been an intimate friend of the president. So great is Mr. Roosevelt's confidence in him that on many matters of national concern he has sought his advice and counsel. To determine accurately the legal phases of the postal frauds the president designated Mr. Bonaparte and Holmes Conrad to investigate the subject, and on their report he took decisive action without hesitation.

Eminent as a lawyer and as a publicist and a consistent advocate of civil service reform, Mr. Bonaparte has not been supposed to have more than an academic interest in the navy. In the upbuilding of the navy, however, he is known to be in perfect accord with the president and doubtless will carry into effect the views of Mr. Roosevelt in the strengthening of the naval establishment.

Mr. Morton's announcement of his expected retirement followed a conference with the president lasting about an hour. It had been stated with authority that Mr. Morton would retire July 1 provided the president would accept his resignation from that date, and the present statement, therefore, officially confirms what has been known for several weeks. When he retires he will have rounded out exactly one year of cabinet life. He succeeded William H. Moody of Massachusetts, who became attorney general.

Mr. Morton will retire from the cabinet and go to New York to live and will become associated with Thomas F. Ryan. Mr. Ryan is a well known capitalist of New York, who has control of a large portion of the surface street car lines of that city, and proposes to construct a large subway system. He was one of the supporters of Judge Parker in the last presidential campaign.

Albright Art Gallery Dedicated.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 1.—The Albright Art gallery was dedicated in the presence of 10,000 people. The ceremonies consisted of singing by a combined chorus of the Teutonia, Liederkranz, Rangerbund, Orpheus and Guido societies and addresses by distinguished scholars. Ralph H. Plumb, president of the Buffalo Fine Arts society, presided. The exercises began with Beethoven's chorus, "The heavens are telling of the Lord's endless glory; through all the earth his praise is found," sung by the grand chorus under the leadership of Professor Horatio Parker of Yale.

Ex-Mayor Nolan Dead.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 1.—Michael D. Nolan, former Democratic mayor of Albany, one of the pioneer brewers of this part of the state and well known for his activity in politics and in the development of racing at Saratoga, is dead here. He was seventy-two years old. Death followed a long illness and resulted from a complication of diseases. Ex-Mayor Nolan came here from Ireland when a young man. He was a California forty-niner.

Thomas Bordsman Killed.

PENN YAN, N. Y., June 1.—Thomas Bordsman of Dundee was struck by a locomotive and fatally injured near here while walking on the New York Central tracks on his way home. He was taken to a hospital at Geneva, where he died last night. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. George Reynolds of Syracuse and Miss Minnie Bordsman of Penn Yan.

Seaboard Air Line Wreck.

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 1.—In a collision on the Seaboard Air line at Fairfax, S. C., between some freight cars and passenger train No. 66 the passenger train was wrecked and three persons dangerously injured. The engine of the passenger train was ditched and badly damaged and the mail coach almost completely destroyed.

Plainfield, N. J., June 1, 1905.

Now girls, be honest and tell the census man your right age.

A Roosevelt cabinet position is the stepping stone to a $50,000 job. Get Next.

It's getting so now that a man has to hire detectives to watch his bank balance.

By all means legislators should organize a union or the business will lose its most inviting feature. It was $300 in Jersey by down Arkansas way, assemblymen are accused of selling out for a paltry $125. This cut-rate business will have to stop.

James E. Martine stops meditating on "The rise and fall of Democracy as caused by the donkey's kick" to suggest that a Plainfield cop can get all the exercise he needs in patrolling his beat without resorting to physical culture fad at the Y. M. C. A. gym.

Grand chorus: "We have troubles of our own." Nicholas II, John G. Rockefeller, Israel W. Durham, James H. Hyde, Admiral Rojestvensky, Abe Hummel, Mayor Dunne, H. W. Bowen, Thomas W. Lawson, and Frank Gould. Will positively appear daily. See daily papers for change of bill.

Evidently the Elizabeth Times is not familiar with Philadelphia politics when it suggests that the Quaker City should jail some of its crooked politicians to convince them that the reformers mean business. What's the use of putting men in prison when there are courts and governors to let them out.

What's the matter with putting four faces on that Somerset street clock. It is conceded there's as much reason to let the people over towards the park know the time as it is to give that opportunity to the rest of the borough. And while we're registering a kick, let us suggest that the pen shaped weather-vane be restored to its place on top of the flagstaff. It proved to be more than ornamental and is missed by residents who want to know which way the wind's blowing.

Dear old Dr. Eliot, the honored president of Harvard, is loose again and this time he has something to say about the methods in the public schools. In the course of an address at Buffalo yesterday, he said: "The main object in every school should be not to provide the children with means of earning a livelihood, but to show them how to live a happy and worthy life, inspired by ideals which exalt and dignify both labor and pleasure." And again he said: "It is monstrous that the common school should give much time to compound numbers, bank discount and stenography and little time to drawing." If Dr. Eliot keeps it up at that rate he will be in danger of getting an honorary degree from Dr. Harper's foolish factory out in Chicago.

The exposure of boodling and the punishment of the boodlers in Missouri were followed by increased business activity in that State. The re-establishment of honest government by Folk was widely advertised in the news columns of daily papers throughout the country, and as a result new capital and new labor flowed into the State attracted by the prospect of a "square deal." Philadelphia is now being similarly advertised wherever newspapers are printed. The gang has been crushed and a business administation inaugurated. The publicity given to these facts cannot fail to have a beneficial effect upon trade. Outsiders who had almost forgotten our existence have had their favorable attention directed hither. Advertising is as helpful to a city as it is to an individual.——Ex.

TAR AND FEATHER SUSPECTED WOMAN

HUDSON, MICH., SEES WORK OF VIGILANTES.

RIOTERS FACE PRISON TERM

"Avenging Angels" May Be Lodged Behind the Bars as the Result of Their Work — Reason for Dastardly Act.

Hudson, Mich. — Twenty centuries ago, in Jerusalem, a band of vigilantes prepared to take a woman who had been indiscreet without the walls of the city and stone her. Seeking advice from a lowly Nazarene whose teachings the majority of the civilized world now professes to follow, the "regulators" were told to "let him who is without guilt cast the first stone."

On April 19, in the year of the same lowly Nazarene, in this little Michigan town of 3,000 inhabitants, a band of men and women, all of whom, so far as they are known, profess to abide by the laws laid down by Jesus of Nazareth, heaped a worse indignity than stoning upon a woman against whom they had less proof of sin than had the men against the woman they would have mobbed save for the interpretation of the moral law as expressed by the Great Teacher.

On the night indicated, Mae Post, a woman who has lived in Hudson for the greater part of 11 years, was visited in her home, a flat in the business center of the town, by a body of men and women whom the public has since dubbed "avenging angels." Entrance to her home was forced at the point of revolvers, her companions —one her divorced husband, who was visiting her, and the other a man whose friendship for the woman was well known to the people of the town —were kept in submission with revolvers at their heads, while the women "angels" cut off her hair, administered a coat of hot tar and embellished the nasty mess with a storm of feathers. Not content with performing these outrages, the woman who was apparently the leader among the female vigilantes bespattered the walls and floor of the room, the clothing cut from the woman's body and her other wearing apparel with ancient eggs. The vandalism was carried to such an extent that the woman's entire wardrobe was ruined, embryo chickens being found in practically every drawer of her dresser.

The alleged reason for the acts of these men and women, most of them prominent residents of the town and community, was the supposed intimacy of Mrs. Post with Loren Barrett, a well-to-do stockman living near Hudson. Barrett is a married man, and at least three of the band of "avenging angels" were members of his wife's family. Two others were his own brothers.

As a result of the outrage a large crop of suits at law have been started, among them damage suits aggregating nearly $50,000, a divorce suit, and criminal proceedings against four of the members of the mob. In the criminal proceedings, which charge the defendants with rioting, the penalty which the four men who were members of the party face is a term of two years in prison or a fine of $500, or both.

Mrs. Mae Bennett Post, the victim of the "avenging angels," has made Hudson her home since she was about 15 years of age. She has been twice married. Her first husband, a worthless wight named Bennett, whom she married at the age of 15, failed to support her, and she was compelled to earn a living for herself and her baby boy as a waitress in a local hotel. After a few years Bennett died, and following a brief period of widowhood, the young woman married Gordon Post, a musician of Mansfield, O. She lived with Post until about a year ago. Her son had been kept by his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Hodges, in this city. Mrs. Post wished to live near him, and returned to make her residence here.

Her second husband secured a divorce from her on the grounds of desertion, but has, it is claimed, and evidence is offered to substantiate the claim, contributed an amount averaging $30 a month to Mrs. Post's support since the divorce was granted. Friendly relations have been maintained between Post and his divorced wife, and he has on a number of occasions visited her in her home here.

Death to Water Bugs.

It is certainly very annoying to be troubled with water bugs, creton bugs and roaches, but do not despair get a can of

"Randolph's Roach Powder."

You'll find it very effective. It means sure death to every bug that passes through the place where this powder is sifted, and will soon exterminate the whole bug family.

15 cents a can.

HANDSOME FACE RUINED AN UNFROCKED PRIEST.

Chance Reunites Man and Woman, Former Lovers, After Nearly Forty Years.

Paris.—A strange and pathetic romance has been brought to light by the discovery of an aged and miserably clad man and woman, who were found asleep on a bench in the Boulevard Diderot.

They were clasped in each other's arms and looked ill and emaciated.

They were removed to the adjoining police station, where cordials were administered and the couple revived. It was then ascertained that the man, whose name was Jean Lanfret, 68 years old, was an unfrocked priest.

THEY WERE FOUND ASLEEP ON A BENCH.

Thirty-eight years ago he had fallen deeply in love with a woman who came to him as a penitent. She was living apart from her husband, and the priest, in his infatuation, abandoned his sacred calling for her.

A year later the woman left him, and the former priest fell upon evil times. Finally he earned his living as a waiter, but he became ill, and, after many vicissitudes, he found himself homeless and a vagabond, picking up a few shillings now and then as a market porter.

As he sat on the bench on the Boulevard Diderot the other night an old woman, who had been trying to sell a few faded flowers, came and sat next to him, and in her the priest recognized the woman who had abandoned him many years ago.

She also had suffered many reverses, which had removed the last traces of her beauty. Chance had brought her to the bench, and, both suffering from the cold and hunger, they had sunk into sleep as they sat, clasped in each other's arms, until discovered by the police.

BOY WAS A CHAMBERMAID.

Sixteen-Year-Old Youth Piqued at Rebuke Runs Away from Home Dressed as a Girl.

Gloversville, N. Y.—Charles Steele, 16 years old, son of one of the most prominent families of Gloversville, has been masquerading as a woman for three days. A severe rebuke for reckless expenditures caused him to leave home. His parents searched everywhere, and appealed for help in looking for him, but they could get no later trace of him than his appearance in a village store when he purchased a woman's sack.

His identity concealed with a wig and clothes of the latest mode, the boy-girl walked the streets unrecognized and ran accounts with several dry goods establishments for large quantities of woman's apparel, both dress goods and underwear, and with jewelers for trinkets and a gold watch. In the stores where his family was known he had things charged, saying he was Miss Steele.

Hearing that the parents of young Steele were looking for him, a saleswoman, having suspicions, had the proprietor put Steele through a rigid questioning. The "girl" objected, attempted to run away and in the shuffle a wig fell from "her" head.

For three days young Steele had been employed in the Hotel St. Charles Disguised as a woman, he engaged to work as a dining-room girl. Not proving an ideal waitress he was changed to chambermaid.

Doggie Has Teeth Cleaned.

New York.—"Doggies' dehtist." That is the latest. Mrs. Conquest of Boston probably has the distinction of owning the first dog that ever underwent the experience of having his teeth scraped and polished. She brought Muggins, for that is his name, all the way here from Boston to have it done.

Muggins is a Yorkshire and weighs only two and a half pounds. Most of the two and a half is long, wiry hair. He was seven years old on his birthday the other day. Mrs. Conquest noticed that Muggins didn't eat with his usual gusto. She looked him over and found his teeth were covered with carbon and tartar to a frightful degree.

Mrs. Conquest brought Muggins to New York and gave the case to Dr. Andrew Armstrong.

Muggins was etherized, a spool was put between his jaws and his upper teeth were cleaned. He was then revived, and the next day was etherized and the lower set cleaned.

Eagle Whipped by Crows.

Philadelphia.—One hundred crows whipped a big eagle in a fight at the farm of Darlington Beebe, of Westown, and drove it several miles from the place. The crows attacked the king of birds in a body, and at one time had it so exhausted that it alighted in a field and fell over on the ground, though it finally escaped.

SUMMER OUTING HINTS.

Some Conveniences For Travel Both on Land and by Water.

Until women accept and adopt the convenience of man's many pockets they will never be really "advanced." As it is now, women carry their valuables in little hand bags which are easily lost and always a temptation to thieves, their handkerchiefs are tucked in their sleeves and their money in their stockings or in those insecure little purses fastened to their garters, so that the list of "lost and found" grows daily in the papers.

When but one pocket is made it is apt to sag, because it is generally overloaded, but when a dress is made in strict tailor style and properly fitted with many pockets, each adapted to its own burden, their presence could not even be suspected. Such suits need not be ugly. It all depends upon the way the pockets are set in and where. A suit intended for traveling either in the mountains or anywhere away from the comforts of home should be so constructed as to afford a convenient receptacle for many things which are absolutely necessary and which would be a burden too great if all were put into even a bag slung over the shoulder.

In the illustration are two such suits. They do not differ in appearance from others made without pockets. The one in the background has seven pockets, all large enough to be useful. Under the right side of the fold in the front of the skirt is an opening, hidden by small hooks and eyes, and beneath it is a pocket six inches wide by eighteen inches deep. Another of the same size is on the left side, fastened in the same way. Under the third plaits on each side are two more pockets as deep and two more under the sixth folds. All these are made deep, so that whatever is put in them may be hidden by the fullness of the lower part of the skirt. These will hold combs, brushes and the dozen of other small necessaries. Handkerchiefs fill one, and, in fact, whatever one needs is there. At the bust line under the tabs is another pocket made of chamois and so arranged that it buttons firmly. This is for money and other valuables. It is made in three compartments, so that the contents will not form a bunch. It is really not noticeable. Thus all the weight is distributed and one can carry quite an array of things unsuspected. A small pocket in the cape is handy for a handkerchief. The other suit is fitted with an abundance of pockets in the same way.

Mohairs in black, gray, brown or dark blue are better than anything for mountain climbing, but the waterproofed cheviots and other rain proof materials are excellent, since they are strong and light. The trimming is generally composed of tucks, folds and perhaps a very little braid in tabs, but good taste would suggest something that rain would not cause to pucker.

The question of headwear is a large one, and each person is at liberty to choose the most becoming hat, but durability, after all, is a better guide, and the varnished hats of light straw are the best, for even though they are varnished they remain, to a certain extent, porous. Veils are nuisances in real outings, but if any one thinks she really cannot live without a veil she has the privilege of wearing one.

Hosiery for outings should be considerably heavier than ordinary and if possible have white feet. Do not take lisle thread, but choose soft sea island stockings unless you can rise above blisters.

Shoulders were made first to look pretty and next to bear burdens, so the elastics should be fastened to the corset. And, though this is not exactly fashion, do not forget pins, needles, thread, small scissors and thimble as well as talcum powder for the skin and cold cream to allay mosquito bites.

Short capes are very much liked for all kinds of outing. Some dark and flexible material is best, the double faced melton being always stylish. Shoes need to be easy, but not too large, as the foot might be hurt by slipping around in them. Thick soles and common sense heels are best. Canvas tops or all leather can be found, but if for mountain climbing stout shoes with leather leggings are best and a protection against snakes.

What is suitable for mountain is suitable for sea, with the addition of a long, hooded cloak, and the many pockets will be found quite as useful in foreign travel as in our mountains at home. Riding habits for summer are made of thick gray linen, with the addition of a short coat of cloth. Hats are derbies or straw in sailor shape. Boots are worn.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

June 4: "The Making of a Christian; Helping One Another"—Eph. iv, 1-6; Heb. x, 24, 25.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

There is a sense in which it is a good thing to provoke people. Paul in the lesson for the day exhorts us to provoke one another. In some senses there is too much of this provoking, but there is no danger that we shall do too much of that kind which the apostle recommends.

The word provoke has undergone some change in use since the Bible was first translated into English, and that makes it sound a little strange. It actually means to call out. In that sense it is an excellent counsel that is given us. We need to consider each other to call out love and good deeds.

This is so much the fruitage of the new life in Christ that we can never intermit in the smallest degree in it without danger of blunting our sensitiveness to spiritual things.

Then we need to ever be on our guard against the allurements of the life by which we are surrounded lest we forget and give more attention to worldly matters than is wise and so lose our relish and zest in the works of Christ and love for His service.

The need of our fellow Christians is also great, and we should be ever on the alert to give them the heart sympathy essential for growth in the things of the kingdom and also to assist them in everything that may be needed of a temporal nature.

How quickly all jealousies flee when once the heart gets warm toward one in need! How rapidly we grow in divine things when the soul is filled with love and we are absorbed in some scheme for interesting others in the work of the Lord and His church.

It is really wonderful what a transformation in appearance and feeling comes over a person when he gets interested in enlisting others in some enterprise of loving kindness.

It is all too apparent that many Christians are not very much provoked this way. Their minds are so fully occupied with other matters that these things find no little corner for themselves. The result is disastrous to themselves, to those they are associated with and to the cause of Christ in general.

The real revival that is sadly needed is one in which there shall be more real affection felt and displayed toward our fellows. We need to get closer together in work, and then we shall come to know one another better and will see the good things in the lives and characters of those whom we have never half understood or have wholly misunderstood and wronged. There is nothing else that works half so quickly and well in correcting mistakes and misjudgments as to get folks yoked together and pulling to get the same load ahead. We come to see their strength and good nature where we had never supposed they had any qualities to be admired. Perhaps these same elements in them had never before actually been called out by any circumstances in which they had been placed. They may have proved as great a surprise to themselves as to others.

There is many a man who will never amount to much in this world or in any other world unless some one finds him and calls him out and stirs him up—provokes him, in the good sense, to put forth his energies and do something.

When Jesus would do a man a kindness he asked him, "Wilt thou be made whole?" He aroused his dullness, and when the wishing process was set up he said, "Get up," or, "Stretch out your hand," or something to call out the man's own powers and put them into action. God never injects salvation into a man's nature without the co-operation of the man himself.

Then, again, there is much of the work to be done that is far beyond the power of any of us working alone. The great tasks must have the massed strength of many workers. There is picket duty to be done where the single soldier can prove his fidelity, but there is also the movement in mass which calls for no less of skill and endurance.

We need to give good heed to those words at this time no less than did those to whom Paul first wrote.

How shall we do it?

The first thing requisite is to stop and think soberly of the work as it lies at our hand to be done and is yet not done. Then we should carefully look over all the ranks of the workers possible to be enlisted in any service in any manner. We should not stop our enumeration with those who have heretofore done all the work. We need not think that because some persons have never before done anything outside a particular beaten track they are therefore not fitted to do anything new. Of course the far easier plan is to use folks in the same old treadmill way, but that does not solve the problem; it rather complicates it.

You must find the way to do the new thing. If you put your mind to it your mind shall be quickened and illuminated until you shall wonder you have ever been so dull you failed to see the thing which is so apparent now.

The Holy Spirit gives insight to those who seek His help, and His help is indispensable in this work.

Consider! Ah, that is it! Stop long enough from the rush and push to consider. Then you will find out how to get provoked yourself and will get power to provoke some one else. Let the good work of provoking folks this way go on increasingly.

The Denver Convention.

It is estimated that Denver will be called upon to entertain between 20,000 and 30,000 people on the occasion of the seventh international convention of the Epworth League, which is to be held July 5-9, 1905.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 4.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—The making of a Christian; helping one another.—Eph. iv, 1-6; Heb. x, 24, 25.

There is perhaps nothing more important in the development of a Christian than his relation to others. "No man liveth unto himself." God expects us to have a social life. He does not ask His people to exclude themselves in retreats far from the activities of life. We are to live and move and have our being among our fellow men. What our relation to the people of the world should be is therefore a most important question, and more important still is the duty that we owe toward the other children of God. We are to "do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

Mutual consideration is one great duty of Christian people. "Let us consider one another" is the injunction of the writer of the book of Hebrews. We should consider one another's feelings, opinions and frailties. "With all lowliness and meekness, forbearing one another in love," we should "walk worthy of the vocation to which we are called." Meekness instead of kindness, forbearance instead of irascibility and proneness to take offense at every provocation or fancied neglect, should characterize Christians in their dealings with one another. The failure to practice these precepts has caused untold trouble in the Christian church and has stunted the growth of many a Christian.

Christians should help one another. Passive endurance of the weaknesses of others is not enough. We should be a positive help to them that are of the household of faith. Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works, * * * exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." By our example we are to encourage others to love and to serve the Lord, and so far as we can we are to help those who need our help to help themselves and in turn to be a help to others. To incite the Corinthians to charity Paul mentions the liberality of the Macedonians. By our good deeds men will be provoked to goodness, and it should ever be our aim by precept and example to help them on in the service of God.

In helping others we best help ourselves. Christ considered not Himself, but others. He came "not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many." And today because of His self denial and sacrifice He reigns at the right hand of God the Father. Selfishness thwarts its own purpose, while the man who serves others rather than himself has the richest blessing of God upon him. "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

BIBLE READINGS.

Matt. xxii, 35-40; xxv, 31-46; Luke x, 25-37; Rom. xii, 10-21; xv, 1-7; Gal. v, 1-15; vi, 1-10; Eph. iv, 31, 32; II Tim. i, 16-18; Jas. ii, 14-26.

Good Work In Turkey.

American Endeavorers will be rejoiced to hear of the progress that Christian Endeavor is making in Turkey. Our society in Mardin of less than ten members in 1894 has grown until we have an older society of some seventy members. They have interesting meetings every Sunday and are helping in many ways to make the world brighter. They support a little girl in the day school. They have helped the refugees in Macedonia and the girls' school in Erzerum, whose members lost their all when the school building burned last spring. The last business meeting voted to take up some work in Africa.—J. Louise Graf, Mardin, Turkey in Asia.

South Africa's Field Secretary.

Rev. Carl Stackman of Connecticut has recently been appointed field secretary for South Africa and has already entered upon his duties there. Dr. Clark says of Christian Endeavor in South Africa: "In no part of the world has there been greater progress during the past year. Boers and Britains came together in fraternal harmony at a meeting attended by the writer in Cape Town last May."

REV. CARL STACKMAN.

Such is the field where Mr. Stackman will find play for his splendid Christian Endeavor enthusiasm.

Dr. Clark's Message.

The following timely message of Dr. Clark appeared in a recent Christian Endeavor World:

"What are you doing, fellow Endeavorer? What are you planning for? Again I plead with you to mark this pre-eminently as a year of evangelistic effort, of soul winning service. God Himself points the way. Shall we not follow and use every effort to bring to Christ our associate members and our friends who are ouside of the society?"

Evan Roberts and Baltimore.

Mr. Evan Roberts, the leader of the great revival in the south of Wales, which is attracting such worldwide notice because of its unusual power, has been petitioned by Dr. Francis E. Clark as president of the World's Christian Endeavor union to visit and address the Baltimore convention in July, at which something like 20,000 or 30,000 young people will be present. Mr. Roberts has not yet given a definite reply.

HYDE DEFIANT.

Will Make No Peace With Tarbell Faction.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The board of directors of the Equitable Life Assurance society met to receive the report of the committee headed by Henry C. Frick. The number of directors present was unusually large.

James H. Hyde, first vice president, went into the meeting firm in the stand to refuse any peace propositions that permitted Gage E. Tarbell, second vice president, to retain office, according to one in close touch with the entire Equitable tangle.

Those who have been the strongest advocates for a truce to the long and bitter fight waged between the forces of Mr. Hyde and James W. Alexander, the society's president, have broached, it was said, a plan which provides for the present retention of all officials of the organization. To this plan Mr. Hyde is declared to have agreed so far as all but Mr. Tarbell is concerned.

"Mr. Hyde will not become a party to any peace negotiations that leave Mr. Tarbell in any official connection with the Equitable Life," was the declaration by one of his friends.

The report was very long, the reading occupying nearly two hours. At the end of the reading of the report the directors adjourned for an hour, when the discussion of the report was taken up. This conference continued for nearly two hours, when an adjournment was taken until 11 a. m. tomorrow. The report was not adopted, the conference being devoted to a preliminary discussion of its most important recommendations, some of which, it was ascertained, were of a very radical character. When the adjournment was taken Mr. Frick said that he was unable to say when the report would be made public. All the directors at the meeting were pledged to maintain absolute secrecy regarding the report.

TORTURED FOR MONEY.

James Blackwood, at Erie, Pa., Robbed of $700.

ERIE, Pa., June 1.—Three men broke in the door of James Blackwood's residence, a half mile southeast of this city, wired him to his bed and applied burning brands to his feet in an effort to force from him information of the location of a large sum of money.

In wringing his secret from him the desperadoes tightened the wires with which Blackwood was bound to such an extent that the blood spouted from the wounds in his wrists and ankles.

After getting their booty the robbers left their victim gagged and helpless close to the fire which they had started on the floor of his bedroom.

About $700 was stolen. The victim still lies in a very weakened condition and is unable to give any description of his assailants. Blackwood lived alone.

A BOTTLE FROM THE SEA.

Message Picked Up at Dam Neck, N. C., Told of Phantom Sunk.

NORFOLK, Va., June 1.—The following message received over the government seacoast telegraph wires has been posted at the Norfolk weather bureau:

"A bottle containing the following note was found on the beach at Dam neck, on the North Carolina coast, by Captain J. E. Woodhouse of the life saving service:

"'On board schooner Phantom, sunk by outgoing steamer Bodeon. All hands at the top. Vessel slowly sinking. Now at water's edge. Have put off in small boat. J. C. A. JONES.'"

The names of the vessels in the note do not appear in any of the records or maritime register. Captain Woodhouse says the note is in poor handwriting, but readable. No wreckage of any kind can be seen anywhere.

Hay Is Silent.

PARIS, June 1.—Secretary Hay continues to observe a rigorous health regime which prevents him from making or receiving official or social calls. Owing to reports sent to America purporting to give views which he had expressed to friends concerning Russia, it can be stated with his authority that he has not alluded to public affairs and does not intend to do so while he remains in Paris or London, this being one of the strict requirements of the physicians who have conducting his recent cure.

Wearing Black For Russia's Defeat.

CHICAGO, June 1.—Baron A. Schlippenbach, the Russian consul to Chicago, appeared in local business circles dressed in a suit of black and wearing dark neckwear. In this manner he is showing his grief for the Russian disaster in the far east. "I have lost many dear friends in the battle," he said. "I fear that many related to me by ties of blood have also perished." In conformity with continental mourning customs, the baron has also laid aside all jewelry.

Carpenters Acquitted at Dallas.

DALLAS, N. C., June 1.—After a warmly contested trial the jury last night acquitted O. D. Carpenter and his son, Earl Carpenter, on the charge of killing A. M. Kale, the superintendent of a cotton mill at Mount Holly. Kale went to the Hardin mill, owned by the elder Carpenter, in search of hands. The Carpenters ordered him to leave, and in the altercation which ensued Kale shot young Carpenter and was killed by the latter.

War Road, Minn., Has Big Fire.

WAR ROAD, Minn., June 1.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the principal business houses of this town. The total loss is estimated at $150,000, with $61,700 insurance. The heaviest individual losses were: Bones & Lawson, general merchants, $50,000; insurance, $24,000; C. E. Cariquist, general merchant, $30,000; insurance, $14,000.

ALFONSO ESCAPED.

Anarchist Attempt on King of Spain's Life.

SOVEREIGN AND LOUBET UNHURT

President of France and Spanish Monarch Attacked by Bomb Thrower While In Front of Opera House at Paris.

PARIS, June 1. — As the king of Spain, accompanied by President Loubet, drove away from a gala performance of the opera at an early hour this morning an anarchist threw a bomb in the direction of the royal carriage. The projectile struck a soldier belonging to the cuirassier escort on the shoulder and then fell to the ground and exploded without injuring his majesty or the president, who continued their drive to the Palais d'Orsay.

The bomb had been thrown with too great force and passed over the royal carriage and struck the shoulder of a cuirassier and then fell to the ground, where it exploded, fragments of it striking the horses of the soldiers, causing them to bolt and throw their riders. Captain Schneider, who was riding at the right side of the carriage, and Captain Garnier, who was on the left, were both thrown. Fragments of the bomb also struck five persons—a sergeant, two policemen, a woman, who was seriously injured, and a child, who was struck in the eye. One horse of the escort was killed outright, and six others lay about maimed and bleeding.

The force of the explosion was terrific and caused a derangement of the electric lights, which were all extinguished, adding darkness to the scene of confusion. Women and children screamed, and a panic was for a time threatened amid the vast throng until the police succeeded in restoring order.

King Alfonso and President Loubet had been cheered along the entire route to the opera by enthusiastic crowds, the young monarch having completely gained the hearts of Parisians since his arrival here.

The young king after the outrage was seen sitting beside the president in the carriage. He was pale, but apparently calm. Just before the carriage disappeared the king called one of the attaches of the Spanish embassy and sent him back to make inquiries concerning the wounded. Then the carriage drove off to the Palais d'Orsay, hemmed in by troops and cavalry.

MOST FAMOUS FROG DIES.

Batrachian That Had Lived for Fifteen Years with Both Hemispheres of Brain Gone.

The most famous frog in the world has just died, says a recent report. It was the victim of a professor in a university, who in 1899 cut out both hemispheres of its brain. In spite of the operation the frog was in perfect health, and for five years served to demonstrate to the professor's pupils the results of the removal of the brain.

Knowledge and will were abolished and the frog never showed the slightest sign of initiative, his only movements being attributed to muscular fatigue. The eyes were quite uninjured, and the frog could evidently see, but without understanding. Even his favorite food failed to attract him, and every day an assistant had to cram his food down his throat until the reflex action of swallowing took place. When he was touched he moved, and when he was put in water he swam, and if he was placed on his back he rolled over again, but on his own initiative he never stirred.

The poor thing was well known to all scientific men and it seems probable that he died simply of old age, and that his life was in no degree shortened by the operation.

ROBBING TRUNKS IN ITALY

No Other Civilized Country Where the Luggage of Travelers Is So Unsafe.

A traveler just returned from Italy reports that a trunk belonging to one of his party was cut open on the railway between Rome and Genoa, and clothes abstracted to the value of $20. When he consulted the British consul on the subject, states London Truth, he heard that a lady had been at the consulate a few minutes before who had lost the whole of her valuable jewelry in the same way. It is really astonishing that the Italian police and the railway companies between them do not take effectual steps to stop this scandal. There is no other civilized country where travelers' luggage is habitually rifled while in charge of the railway companies as it is in Italy, and the knowledge that this is so must keep many people out of the country, especially wealthy travelers, whom it is the interest of the authorities to encourage. In the meantime I would point out to travelers in Italy that the insurance of luggage against theft is a precaution that should always be taken.

Cyclones in Jamaica.

Terribly destructive though cyclones are there are occasions when they have a beneficial effect. Some little time ago Jamaica was swept by a cyclone from end to end, and the destruction it wrought was estimated at nearly three millions. The community bravely faced the situation, and now recognizes that even a hurricane is not without its blessings. The fruit seasons have been more favorable since the cyclone than experienced for many years past. "A hurricane," says the acting governor of Jamaica, "appears to assist in promoting fertility of the soil. The total destruction of the banana crop and the attention compulsorily given to clearing cultivation have resulted in a yield in the last few months of a much finer grade of fruit than had been exported on so large a scale previously."—N. Y. Herald.

Circuses in Winter Quarters.

A dramatic paper gives the names and addresses of 118 circuses and other road shows which go into winter quarters. Of these, 18 make their homes in Pennsylvania, 14 in Maryland, 11 in Missouri and ten in Indiana, these being the most popular states as winter quarters.—Chicago Tribune.

SNAP SHOTS.

The Toronto, Ont., Daily Star said the other day: "Last Sunday I was near Plainfield in one of my new motors," said Thomas A. Edison to an interviewer. "I was having a fine time speeding along, when suddenly about a quarter of a mile ahead of me I saw a man in a machine rise up, wave his hands frantically, and yell: 'Look out for the police!' So, of course, I slowed down. The joke of it is that the Plainfield police, after erecting a sign to warn motor cars to keep within the speed limit, had fixed a stop watch to the sign, and then, by a series of telephones placed every quarter of a mile, had devised a system by which, as soon as a car passed the sign, the watch marked the time, which was telephoned ahead to the next quarter, and so on, so that it was very easy to find out the exact speed. Then they stationed themselves along the route in plain clothes, waiting to grab the unwary, but the unwary caught on and simply yelled to each other, and the word went back along a line of a hundred autos which slowed down to a funeral pace. I wish you could have seen the faces of those plain clothes men."

MODJESKA RETIRES

FAMOUS POLISH ACTRESS WELL LOVED BY AMERICANS.

Exiled from Poland Seeks Home in New Land—Her Professional Career and Interesting Personality.

Modjeska is a woman of charm. Modjeska is a woman of rare courage.

The two generations that have observed her work on the American stage will emphatically agree with the first statement; those that know something of her attitude toward the oppressors of her country will not contradict the second.

For ten years Modjeska played leading lady at the Imperial theater in Warsaw, but political troubles caused her to leave the home land for distant America. One of a colony of unusually talented people, exiles from Poland, she came to Anaheim, in southern California. It was a sort of Brook Farm experiment, their country life and community life there; and, as in the Brook Farm experiment, the company was a most brilliant one. First and foremost there was Modjeska; a co-experimenter Sienkiewicz, author of Quo Vadis; Paderewski, who needs no explaining. Financially the experiment failed, the company disbanded. Modjeska then sought to retrieve the fortunes of the family in San Francisco, her husband, Count Bozenta, who was ill, spending part of his time in the south in the endeavor to gain health.

San Francisco did not pay much attention to this talented woman, theatrical managers looked upon her with a certain suspicion,, were wary of a lady of title seeking a career as actress. At the time a "fake" Russian princess was in the city, and her assumptions were not accompanied by any superior talent. But Modjeska had three qualities that make for success; possession of talent, belief in herself, and indomitable energy. She at once set to work at study of the English language, and in three months and a half mastered the parts of Cleopatra, Adrienne Lecouvreur, Juliet and Ophelia. She spoke with an accent, but her accent was adorable.

It was a hard matter to get a manager to give her a hearing, but finally one was coralled. Modjeska read for him the last act of Adrienne Lecouvreur, "and made such an impression he begged to bring John McCullough, who was then a theatrical manager, to hear her. She was at once booked for a two weeks' engagement at the California theater.

That was in 1877. The first night she played to a small house, but enjoyed a triumph. Her teacher of English, Miss Josephine Tucholsky, says of this first appearance: "There never was anything seen like it, I think, in a San Francisco theater before nor since. People stood up, they cheered, they cried, they wanted to stampede upon the stage and shake the hand of this woman who had made their emotions the plaything of her genius."

Thirty-eight years Mme. Modjeska has acted in English, playing in this country and in London, and to-day her admirers, a multitude, are slow to concede that she shows signal loss of power. She has played many parts in her time; in tragedy of "Marie Stuart," and in "Camille," winning laurels, as Ophelia, Lady Macbeth and other leading Shakespearean parts, displaying the delicacy and finish of her art.

When resting from her professional duties, Modjestka seeks the seclusion of her beautiful California ranch; for it is in that western state, where first she sought refuge, where her American triumphs began, she has established her home. The Count and Countess Bozenta dispense here a generous, gracious hospitality, and indulge in their hobby, country life. Among her fruits and flowers the actress has spent her waking hours when the round of theatrical duties was finished, and doubtless here she will pursue the days of her hard-earned rest.

For she has this year taken farewell of the stage, at the great benefit performance given her lately in New York she made her last bow to the public. It is with regrets her long-time friends see her withdraw from the stage she has graced and given prestige to, but all must grant she has earned her holiday.

A generous woman, ever glad to give a helping hand, is Modjeska, and to-day not a few that have risen to high place point to her as patron and inspiration. She helped Paderewski pursue musical studies at Vienna; under ner auspices Jean and Eduoard de Reszke first appeared at a concert. But while she is a warm friend, she is also an outspoken enemy of oppression; and her denunciations of Russian tyranny has made it wise to live in exile from Poland.

REV. DR. AND MRS. A. H. LEWIS CELEBRATE THE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY OF THEIR MARRIAGE

WEDDING JUBILEE OF SABBATH RECORDER'S EDITOR AND HIS WIFE, SERVES AS OCCASION FOR A FAMILY REUNION.

The observance of the golden wedding anniversary of Rev Abram Herbert Lewis, D D., LL.D., and his wife, Augusta Johnson Lewis, at their home in West Seventh street, today, is an event of more than usual interest to the many friends of this couple. Coming to this city in 1880, when Dr. Lewis assumed the pastorate of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, continuing as such until he was pastor of the first Seventh-Day Baptist church in the city of New York, where he took post-graduate studies in Union Theological Seminary, making a specialty of church history. From 1876 to 1880, he filled the chair of Church History and Homiletics in Alfred University. In 1880, he became pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church of Plainfield, N. J. ,in charge of which

DR. A. H. LEWIS.

1897, both the doctor and his wife have a warm place in the hearts of all who know them.

Not only because of his pastoral work here, but for the part he has taken in advancing the principles of his denomination, has Dr. Lewis become widely known throughout the country. He has always stood for sound principles in religion and municipal affairs, frequently being called upon to speak in defense of both. His position in the cause of temperance is also well-known. Mrs. Lewis has also been a valuable help to her husband, being highly cultured and educated and even during the past five years of her illness, her mind is as active as ever.

The couple is surrounded today by their five daughters, one son he continued until 1897. He was then elected corresponding secretary of the American Sabbath Tract Society, and a year or two later, was assigned to the editorship of the Sabbath Recorder, continuing also as secretary, which position he still holds.

Dr. Lewis began work as a specialist upon the Sabbath and Sunday question, as early as 1860. His first book was published in 1870, since which time, a number of books have come from his pen. Among them are: "A History of the Sabbath and the Sunday in the Christian Church;" "A History of Sunday Legislation from 321 A. D.;" "Paganism Surviving in Christianity;" "Swift Decadence of Sunday,', a volume on homiletics, etc. Dr.

and their grandchildren and the celebration, although a quiet one, was marked by a family dinner at which Mrs. Lewis was present.

Dr. Lewis was born at Scott, Cortland County, N. Y., Nov. 17, 1836. Mrs. Lewis—Augusta Melissa Johnson— was born at Natic, near Providence, R. I., Aug. 6, 1837. They were married at Berlin, Wis., June 2, 1855. They pursued preparatory and collegiate studies at Ripon College, Ripon, Wis., and at Milton College, Milton, Wis., from 1856 to 1861. Their studies were continued at Alfred University until 1863, at which time, Dr. Lewis graduated from that institution. Mr.s Lewis spent the latter years of school life in art studies.

Dr. Lewis entered his first pastorate, Jan. 1, 1864, taking charge of the Seventh-Day Baptist church at Westerly, R. I. In 1868 and 1869 Lewis became widely known as editor of the Sabbath Outlook, from 1882 to 1894. That periodical gave special attention to the history of the Sabbath and Sunday question, and the scholarly character of the magazine gave it a national reputation, in theological circles. Dr. Lewis was also associated with the late Aaron M. Powell, of Plainfield, N. J., as a writer and speaker upon social purity, and kindred reforms. An address upon "The Sacredness of Fatherhood," delivered by him before the National Purity Congress, held in Baltimore, in 1896, attracted such attention that he was called to repeat it in Philadelphia, New York and Boston, during the winter of 1896-7. He is now engaged in literary work, with occasional addresses before conventions, etc.

Mrs. Lewis has always been in close

GEO. B. CORTELYOU'S COUSIN IN CASTS

SHE WILL TAKE LEADING ROLES IN SHAKESPEARIAN PRODUCTIONS HERE.

In securing members of the Frohman force to compose the cast of the two outdoor performances of Shakesperian plays on the Casino grounds, June 10, the management has been especially fortunate in gaining the consent of Miss Cortelyou to assume the leading roles. Aside from the fact that she is a cousin to George B. Cortelyou, Secretary of Commerce, and one of the most beautiful women on the stage, her ability as an actress won commedation from the most severe critics. She is especially proficient in emotional roles and during the time she has been under Mr. Frohman' management she has scored several distinct triumphs.

Th remainer of the cast will be of the same calibre and the performances given promise to be of the very highest order. Though Winfield S. Angleman has charge of the arrangements the company will appear under the auspice of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home.

REPENTANCE WAS NOT GENUINE, SAYS COURT

DIVORCE HAS BEEN RECOMMENDED TO MRS. MARY TOTTEN FROM A.W.TOTTEN.

Vice Chancellor Bergen has filed an opinion in the Court of Chancery at Trenton in the suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Mary Totten against her husband, Abram Willard Totten, overruling the defendant's plea of condonation of the alleged offense and recommending that the divorce be granted. The question of alimony is left for a further hearing.

The parties to the suit reside in Middiebush, Somerset County, and Totten is the son of a former sheriff of the county. The co-respondent named was Miss Sara DeHart, organist of a church at Franklin Park. Totten was precentor in the same church.

Mrs. Totten charged her husband with infidelity with Miss DeHart on numerous occasions in 1903 and 1904. Totten put in a novel defense. He admitted unfaithfulness to his marriage vows with Miss DeHart during 1903, but claimed he was reconciled with his wife in December, 1903, and that they lived together until June, 1904. This was held to condone the offense admitted and remove all ground for divorce. Any offense after the reconciliation was denied.

The vice chancellor's opinion concludes: "The wrongful intercourse having been established in this cause, my conclusion is that the defendant, by his subsequent conduct, demonstrated that his repentance was not genuine, and his associations with his paramour in June and July, 1904, was of such a character as to overthrow the condonation and entitle the petitioner to the relief she seeks."

A DAMAGING ADMISSION.

Feiring Lost the Horse Suit by a Statement in Cross-Examination.

In Justice David D Smalley's court, yesterday afternoon, a six man jury awarded Charles A. Peterson $145 in his suit against Augustus Feiring, Sr. It took them an hour and a half to reach the verdict.

Peterson sued for $45, the amount paid Feiring for a horse, upon which the People's National Bank, of New Brunswick, held a mortgage at the time of purchase. Peterson was compelled to give the horse up as the bank instituted a replevin suit against him. Feiring's counsel, Walter L. Hetfield Jr, contended that as Peterson did not defend the replevin suit it was clearly established that this horse was the one covered by the chattel mortgage, but upon cross-examination of Feiring by V. W. Nash, Jr., counsel for Peterson, Feiring admitted that he had advised Peterson not to defend the replevin suit and he would settle with him.

Investigating Bribery Charges.

The Mercer County grand jury on Wednesday at Trenton investigated the charges made last winter that there was bribery in the Legislature in connection with the passage through the House of Assembly of the Morris Canal abandonment bill. No report was made and none is likely to be made until later in the week, when the grand inquest will be concluded. A number of Trenton and other newspaper men were examined yesterday as to the sources of stories which they published last winter.

BANKRUPTCY ORDER AGAINST C. L. HYDE

Railroad President Takes Action to Recover $50,000 From Wealthy Resident.

HYDE IS MYSTIFIED.

Son of the Late Millionaire Declares He Was Not Served With Papers by U. S. Marshal After Automobile Chase.

Friends of Charles L. Hyde, formerly of New York and Tuxedo, now of Central avenue, this city, will be surprised to learn that an order in involuntary bankruptcy has been obtained against him in the United States District Court at Trenton, N. J. He himself said last night that he too, was surprised to hear of it. He also declared that he had not been served with any order in such a case.

New York papers say that Mr. Hyde was served by an U. S. Marshal after a lively chase in an automobile in this city yestedday.

Mr. Hyde declared to a reporter for The Daily Press last night that he had been in this city all day yesterday and had not been served with any papers in bankruptcy and neither had he seen any U. S. Marshal. In addition he declared that he knew of no bankruptcy proceedings pending or about to be started against him by anyone.

He had the appearance of being very much surprised over the story.

"It's all tommy-rot," he declared.

The order in involuntary bankruptcy, which marks the climax of litigation that has been in the courts for nearly five years, was obtained by Snowden H. Marshall of the firm of Battle & Marshall of 170 Broadway, at the instance of Charles L. Spier, who is president of the Staten Island Midland Railroad and a director and officer of a number of other corporation interested in traction and land enterprises in Richmond.

Mr. Hyde, who was a member of the banking firm of Hyde & Jackson, now defunct, since 1900, has been a defendant in various actions brought by Mr. Spier, who had been interested with Mr. Hyde and William R. Garrion, son of Commodore Garrison, in a typesetting machine. Mr. Spier in that year brought suit against Hyde in the Supreme Court in Trenton, under the allegation that Hyde had failed to render a proper accounting regarding the profits realized in the enterprise, and in fact had appropriatd all the profits to his own uses, in all some $150,000, of which Mr. Spier claims one-third.

Mr. Spier won the case and a judgment was then issued against Hyde or $50,642 and $1,132 costs. A judgment was also issued against Garretson for $6,770.

In the involuntary bankruptcy petition it is alleged that Hyde, shortly after the judgment had been obtained against him, mortgaged his Tuxedo house, valued at $150,000, to his father-in-law, C.W.Godfrey, who is a member of the firm of Drexel, Morgan & Co., and that soon after the death of his wife a year ago, he sold it to Henry B. Redmond, a Wall Street banker, and moved to Plainfield, after first covering up all his assets in this State.

Mr. Hyde is considered wealthy. He is the son of the late Charles Hyde, of this city, who made $6,000,000 as a pioneer in the oil industry, and for whom Hydesville, Pa., was named. From him Mr. Hyde is said to have inherited real estate valued at $400,000. His wife, who was Miss Godfrey, daughter of a former partner of Drexel & Co., of Philadelphia, died a year ago and after hat Mr. Hyde parted with his fine home at Tuxedo and since then has been living in this city.

Weightman Will Contest Begins.

The will of the late William Weightman, of Philadelphia, involving sixty millions of dollars, has been set aside by the Orphan's Court for consideration and the fight for its distribution of the estate is now on. The contest is of importance locally from the fact that Aubrey Weightman, one of the grandchildren who may benefit, married Miss Fanny Cox, of West Seventh street.

Quietly Wedded.

Miss Ethel Benson, daughter of Martin Benson, of Grove street, and William Harding, of the borough, were quietly married last night. The ceremony was performed at the groom's home by Rev. Dr. C. W. Parsons, of Grace M. E. church, and was followed by a reception.

Miss Whitney's Recital.

Miss May Vincent Whitney gave a charming recital at Carnegie Music Hall, in New York, Wednesday. A criticism will appear in The Daily Press tomorrow.

E. G. SPENCER QUITS SURROGATE'S OFFICE

RESIGNS AS DEPUTY IN SOMERSET CO. OFFICE - G. W. ANDERSON SUCCESSOR.

With the end of the present week, A. Gloyy Spencer, who has been connected with the Surrogate's office of Somerset County ever since his father, the late H. Newton Spencer, of North Plainfield, was elected Surrogate of Somerset County, will end his services there, having tendered his resignation to Surrogate William J. DeMond.

Mr. Spencer was deputy under his father until the latter's death when he was appointed to fill out the unexpired term as Surrogate. Since Mr DeMond was elected Mr. Spencer has been serving as deputy.

It is rumored that George W. Anderson, a lawyer having offices in Newark and Somerville, and whose home is at Bound Brook, will succeed. When asked about his possible appointment as deputy Mr. Anderson would not deny that he was to have the position.

German Marine Band Coming.

Arrangements have been finally completed whereby Plainfield will be one of the cities to be favored with a visit by the famous German Marine Band on its limited farewell American tour prior to their return to Berlin. Herr Louis Kindermann, the skillful director and some fifty musical experts and famous soloists are included in the organization and is the original, and only German Marine Band, and the same one that created the musical furore of the exposition at St. Louis. Arrangements will probably be completed, which are now pending, for a prominent German society of this city to interest themseves in this event and the result will no doubt be a packed house at the Casino on Wednesday, June 7

COUNCILMANIC WORK FOR MONDAY NIGHT

NO SPECIAL BUSINESS TO OCCUPY CITY FATHERS' ATTENTION.

Having considered and disposed of a great deal of important business thus far this year, it now looks as though the summer months will be quiet so far as municipal affairs are concerned. The only important matter to be considered at present is that in reference to the issuance of $13,000 worth of bonds for furnishing the new High School, and it is quite likely that the members will dispose of these as they did the last issue at private sale. It has been found more to the advantage of the city to do this, as a better price is obtained than if they are publicly disposed of. They will run from 1908 to 1920.

It is possible that provisions may be made to issue these bonds at the Common Council meeting on Monday night. This will give the Board of Education the entire sum necessary for erecting and furnishing the new building and will obviate any delay in the progress of the work. It is hoped to have the building ready for occupancy when the fall term opens.

The matter of municipal collection and disposal of garbage is laid aside for the present owing to the Legislative action, and it is not expected that anything will be done with it this year. However, the members expect to take the question up in the future and act favorably on it.

The street sprinkling matter is now settled, all of the carts being in use and the work is being done to the general satisfaction of all concerned.

So far as is now known there is no special business to be considered at the June meeting and the session is quite sure to be occupied with matters of a routine nature. This is not regetted by the members who feel as though they have been obliged to put in an unusual amount of time during the first half of the year.

Later on it is expected that Mr. Tyler will introduce the question of a pension system for the police department, but it is not believed that it will require any great amount of time or talk to put such a system into effect if it is thoroughly understood and its provisions are just and equitable to the policemen and the city.

WORK OF WOMEN'S CLUBS

Monday Afternoon Club Represented at State Federation.

A CHARTER MEMBER.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall's Part in the Organization and Growth of the Women's Societies.

The semi-annual session of the State Federation of Women's Clubs was held at Passaic yesterday and among the organizations presented was the Monday Afternoon Club, of this city. The delegates from here were Mrs. F. O. Herring, president of the local club, and Mrs. Josiah Brown and Mrs. F. D. Warren. Mrs. Florence Howe Hall and Miss Harriet French, also of this city, attended the meeting. All are actively interested in the Monday Afternoon Club and women's club work generally.

The meeting of the Council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs is to be held in Atlantic City on Wednesday and Thursday of next week. It recalls the fact that the Monday Afternoon Club, of this city, was one of the charter members of this association.

In 1889, Sorosis called a convention to meet in New York to consider the question of a union of the Women's Clubs of the United States. The result was the formation of the General Federation with Mrs. Charlotte Emerson Brown, of New Jersey, as president. Mrs. Charlotte Emerson Brown was appointed chairman of correspondence to help on the work in the various States.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Madison avenue, was appointed chairman of correspondence for New Jersey, and held the office for six years. Durng Mrs. Hall's term of office she served as a member of National committees. She was charman of the department of literature, and presided over its sessions, at the Biennial held at Louisville, Kentucky, in 1896.

Mrs. Hall was one of the promoters of the State Federation of New Jersey, which received a strong impetus toward formation, at a luncheon given by the Monday Afternoon Club, of Plainfield, during Mrs. Hall's presidency, in 1892. While the Monday Afternoon Club is no longer directly connected with the General Federation, it is affiliated with it, through the State Federation of New Jersey. Mrs. Hall was vice president of the State Federation for two years, and director and chairman of the department of education for three years.

MRS. FLORENCE HOWE HALL.

A COSTLY MISTAKE.

Partially Constructed Building to be Razed—Plans Read Wrong.

Through a mistake in the reading of plans the building being erected for Mrs. Charles Graves at Liberty and South Second streets, will have to be torn down. The construction has progressed rapidly but it has been found that the foundation should have been started eighteen inches lower as the roof is to conform with a building adjoining. Various means were adopted to overcome the trouble but without result and the work of "beginning all over" has commenced with the razing process.

As the structure was about half finished, the loss to the contracting mason will be quite heavy.

Prof. E. H. Lewis to Speak.

Prof. Edwin H. Lewis, of Chicago, who is in this city to attend the fiftieth wedding anniversary of his parents, Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Lewis, of Seventh street, today, will speak at the Seventh-Day Baptist church tomorrow at the usual hour of service.

PRIZES FOR PUZZLE SOLVERS.

A Great Scheme Whereby Every Correct Answer Will Win a Reward.

The greatest prize scheme for puzzle solvers ever offered by a newspaper is that inaugurated recently by the Sunday North American, of Philadelphia. For a long time that paper has been presenting, each week, a puzzle for young folks, and has been offering a long list of prizes. But the answers grew to be so numerous that many boys and girls were, of necessity, disappointed. It was not possible to make a list of prizes to keep up with the increase of correct answers.

Something new had to be invented.

Now, did you ever hear of a puzzle contest in which nobody is disappointed?

Then it must be Polly Evans' new Weekly Puzzle Contest for hers is the only one anywhere in which nobody is disappointed.

Think of it—nobody disappointed!

If you answer a puzzle incorrectly, you do not look for any reward, of course; but if you answer it correctly, it is but natural that you should expect to be rewarded, and that you should feel disappointed if you find you are not rewarded.

That is what Polly Evans always thought, and she spent many an hour trying to devise some plan of prize-giving that would mean no disappointed boys and girls.

At last—just a few weeks ago—an idea occurred to her! The North American approved of it at once, and the result is that, since April 15—the day the plan was first announced—there have been no disappointed children in Polly Evans' Puzzle Contests.

For, thanks to her new system of prize credits, Polly Evans is now able to reward every boy and every girl who answers her puzzles correctly.

In brief, the plan is as follows:

You answer Polly Evans' puzzle correctly. You may send your answer on as many coupons cut from the puzzle page as you please. Polly Evans rewards you with a prize credit for every coupon you send. If you send five coupons to one puzzle you get five prize credits. If you send one, you get one credit.

In exchange for your prize credits you get your choice of hundreds of fine prizes described in the illustrated prize circular which Polly Evans sends by mail at the end of each month to every prize-credit winner.

Besides rewarding you with prize credits, which are exchangeable for prizes, Polly Evans also awards to the 300 or 400 finest appearing coupons special prizes and surprises, which are announced with each weekly puzzle.

And in order to encourage you to earn as many prize credits as you possibly can Polly Evans offers month handsome grand special prizes to the two boys and two girls who win the highest and next number of prize credits respectively during the month.

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

sympathy with her husband in literary and pastoral work—a helper, indeed. In the summer of 1889, she assisted him in literary research, in Europe, mainly in London and Berlin. Among the treasures of his private library, are several well-filled note books, in her hand-writing, which are prized the more highly now, since she has been unable to write, because of paralysis, for nearly five years past.

Doctor and Mrs. Lewis have five daughters and one son, all of whom are living, and are in attendance at the golden wedding of their parents. The oldest daughter, Addie Lena, is the wife of Dr. W. L. Russell, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., who is medical inspector of the insane hospitals in the State of New York. They have three sons, Paul Lewis, Ernest Frederick, and Blake. The son, Edwin H. Lewis, Ph. D., is at the head of the department of English literature in Lewis Institute, Chicago. He is the author of several text books, and a writer and lecturer on literary themes, already well and widely known. His wife, Elizabeth Locksley Taylor, is a niece of the late Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry, of Plainfield, N. J. They have two children, Herbert Taylor, and Janet Locksley. The second daughter, Grace Edna, is the wife of James H. Parsons, president of the Parsons Water Purifying Company, of Chicago. He is a successful business man. They have one daughter, Louise. The third daughter, Mary Anna, is the wife of Benjamin F. Langworthy, an able and rising lawyer in the city of Chicago. They have two daughters, Frances Lewis and Marygold McIntosh. The fourth daughter, Louise Augusta, is the wife of James Everitt Kimball, of Plainfield, N. J. Both he and Mrs. Kimball are well known in Plainfield, in literary circles, and as church workers. They have two children, Margaret and Lewis Everitt. The youngest daughter, Eva Minette, is the wife of B. W. Spencer, of Chicago. Mr. Spencer was with Roosevelt at Santiago. He is now connected with the Sprague Mercantile Agency in Rochester, N. Y. They have one daughter, Benita.

Although Mrs. Lewis has suffered from complete paralysis of the right mo or center, and almost absolute paralysis of the speech-making center of the brain, for nearly five years, she has taken keen interest in current affairs, and special interest in the celebration of her golden wedding. Her case is an unusual one, from the medical standpoint; since. Although she is helpless, except slight use of the left hand, her general health remains good and her mental faculties are unimpaired. Because of Mrs. Lewis's health the celebration was not elaborate. Many congratulations came to hand through the mails.

You are right, Mr. Bondholder, Jersey's new law against taking water out of the State does not apply to what a New Yorker can squeeze out of the stocks floated here.

Fair Commission Disbands.

The St. Louis World's Fair commission, of which James T. MacMurray, of this city, is a member, has held its final meeting. NO REGULAR PASTOR FOR HOLY CROSS NOW

TEMPORAY SUPPLIES FOR PLACE VACATED BY REV. MR. DOWNEY.

Rev. William Montgomery Downey, who has been rector of the Church of the Holy Cross during the past five years, and who recently resigned left town this week with Mrs. Downey. During the summer they will live on Long Island. Mr. Downey's plans for the future have not been decided upon, but it is not likely that he will resume preaching for the present.

Mr. Downey was called to this city as the rector of the Church of the Redeemer, the congregation being composed of a number of the parishoners who had left the Church of the Holy Cross while Rev. T. Logan Murphy, was its rector. Afterward Mr. Murphy retired and through a community of interests the two congregation came together again and Mr. Downey continued as the rector, succeeding Mr. Murphy. He was successful in his work and through his efforts the parish continued to grow until it became an influential one.

Mr. Downey's successor has not been chosen and for the present it is the purpose of the officers of the church to have supplies from Sunday to Sunday until the parish unites on someone for the place. Those in charge of getting supplies have not yet announced the names of the preachers.

Work of Vandals.

As a result of miscreant acts of a gang of hoodlums that has sought to make all sorts of use of their summer cottage on the mountain during the winter and spring months, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Herring, of Park avenue, have been compelled to abandon their plans to occupy it this season. The vandals took out the windows, as well as all of the furnishings and boarded up the doors. No amount of warning seems to have had any effect on the rascals. Ever since the King's Daughters' baby camp has been located on the mountain, in the vicinity of the Herring cottage, it has suffered more or less from such depredations and those in charge have on several occasions been obliged to ask for police assistance.

Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Schomp, of West Front street, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. D. S. VanPelt, of Harlingen.

The first rally of the local Christian Endeavor since the reorganization, a few weeks ago, was held in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, last night, there being a large representation from the various societies in this city, New Market, Dunellen, Washingtonville and Scotch Plains.

The meeting opened with a song service conducted by David E. Titsworth, Miss Jessie Utter at the organ. Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the church, had charge of the devotional service and as president of the Union, Fred. Lounsbury, Jr., presided at the rally.

A short business session was held for the purpose of adopting a new constitution and bylaws. These were copied from the constitution and bylaws of the United Endeavor Society and with a few minor changes to meet local conditions were adopted.

The address of the evening was delivered by Rev. J. T. Sproull, of Arlington, president of the State Christian Endeavor Union. After congratualting the local union on its reorganization and wishing it success, Mr. Sproull gave an excellent talk on the subject of the "Quiet Hour." In this connection he told of the great need of the quiet hour for Endeavorers to prepare them for Christian service. He made a number of practical suggestions of much help to the Endeavors, offering many new thoughts which if followed will result in the accomplishment of greaet good to the Union and each individual society.

At the close of the meeting there was a social time and handshaking. During the summer plans will be formulated for next winter's work and it is hoped to make the union a progressive one Arbitration Conference Condemns Battleship Vote.

ROOSEVELT'S DISPUTE WITH SENATE

Indorse The Hague as Permanent Court In International Disputes. Would Educate Public Sentiment to Support Treaties.

LAKE MOHONK, N. Y., June 2.—Representative Charles E. Littlefield of Maine, Henry B. F. Macfarland, president of the board of commissioners of the District of Columbia, and Oscar S. Straus, a member of the permanent Hague court, were the principal speakers before the Lake Mohonk international arbitration conference.

Mr. Littlefield's subject was the differences arising between the United States senate and President Roosevelt regarding arbitration treaties. He dwelt upon the technical points involved in the controversy and declared that while the senate had acted within its strictly constitutional rights in the case the president had performed his duty to the cause of international arbitration in withdrawing the treaties from further consideration.

Mr. Littlefield referred to the vote at the last session of congress authorizing the construction of the two new battleships at a cost of $7,000,000 each and said he was not of the number who approved that appropriation. He would sooner have voted $7,000,000, he said, for a new building for the United States supreme court in Washington, a greatly needed work, which would also add to the beauty of the national capital.

Mahlon N. Kline, chairman of the committee on international arbitration appointed by the Philadelphia Trades league, read a series of recommendations from a report adopted by the business men in the conference and addressed to all business organizations and commercial bodies of the United States. These recommendations are as follows:

First.—The indorsement of the wisdom of the establishment at The Hague of the permanent court for the pacific settlement of all international disputes that may be submitted to it.

Second.—The appointment of committees within the respective commercial bodies where that has not already been done for the advocacy of the principles of international arbitration.

Third.—The education of general public sentiment so as to secure the adoption by the United States of arbitration treaties with other nations.

President's Southern Trip Oct. 17.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—President Roosevelt intended to begin his southern trip early in October, but within a day or two he has concluded to postpone his departure until the 17th. The trip will consume about two weeks. It is the president's intention to visit many of the important cities of the south, including Richmond, Va.; Raleigh and Charlotte, N. C.; Atlanta, Ga.; Jacksonville and perhaps Tampa, Fla.; Birmingham, Tuskegee, Montgomery and Mobile, Ala.; New Orleans, La., and Little Rock, Ark. The trip will end at Little Rock, and the president and party will return directly to Washington from that city.

White Wings Delegation at Albany.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 2.—A delegation of 117 employees of the New York street cleaning department, headed by Assemblyman Hartmann and Thomas O'Brien, called on Governor Higgins here and asked him to bring before the proposed extra legislative session the Hartmann bill, increasing their salaries and giving them other privileges. This measure was passed on the last day of the session, but vetoed by Mayor McClellan when it was too late for its resubmission to the legislature.

Held For Libeling H. B. Hyde.

DENVER, Colo., June 2.—George J. Kindel, manufacturer here, was arrested on a charge of having criminally libeled Henry B. Hyde, founder of the Equitable Life Assurance society, by printing his picture in a circular between those of two outlaws over the inscription, "Kindel's Gallery of Dead Cheaters." Refusing to sign a personal recognizance bond, Mr. Kindel was lodged in jail, but later was released without bond.

Renewing the Forests.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The United States bureau of forestry has begun three extensive projects under its forestry planting operations for the season. Fifty thousand trees are to be planted in the Pike's Peak forest reserve, 300,000 along the lines of the Delaware and Hudson railroad, planted in co-operation with the railroad company, while a similar co-operation with the Northern Pacific railroad is under way.

F. O. Reinhart Won Golf Honors.

PATERSON, N. J., June 2.—Prominent golfers from all parts of the state of New Jersey assembled at the North Jersey Country club links to take part in the sixth annual championship of the New Jersey State Golf association. In the medal play, qualifying round, F. O. Reinhart of Princeton and Plainfield won the honors, with a score of 77.

Mount Olive Power House Wrecked.

MOUNT OLIVE, N. C., June 2.—A severe wind, rain and hail storm has swept over this section, unroofing buildings and laying crops in waste over a wide area covered by the path of the storm. The power house of the electric plant in this city was partially wrecked.

WITH A GOLDEN KEY

President Opens Oregon Exposition From the Capital.

SENT MAGIC TOUCH 3,000 MILES

Message Had Previously Come That Lewis and Clark Memorial Exhibition at Portland Was Waiting Roosevelt's Action.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—In the presence of a distinguished assemblage, including all the members of the cabinet except Secretary Hay, who is in Europe; associate justices of the United States supreme court, members of the diplomatic corps and invited guests, President Roosevelt pressed the telegraphic key which sounded the chimes in the government building and started the machinery of the Lewis and Clark centennial exposition at Portland, Ore.

The ceremony took place in the east room of the White House. The hour set for it was 4 o'clock, the intention being to start the machinery of the exposition in motion at 1 o'clock, Portland time.

The arrangements for the ceremony were complete. In the southwest corner of the east room, on a mahogany stand, was located an exquisitely mounted gold telegraph key. It was the instrument which was used by P. V. DeGraw, now fourth assistant postmaster general, in receiving the president's message at the opening of the Louisiana Purchase exposition on April 30, 1904, and presented to Mr. DeGraw at that time. On the roof of the White House was stationed a first class sergeant of the signal corps of the army, who at the sounding of an electric gong at his side was under instructions to drop a flag which was to be the signal for the battery located on the white lot south of the White House to fire a national salute of twenty-one guns.

At the moment when the White House ceremony was to have begun Vice President Fairbanks was delivering his formal address in Portland at the opening of the exposition. Until he had concluded his speech President Roosevelt could not start the machinery. At 4:20 p. m., Washington time, the speech was finished. The parlor doors of the east room swung open, and the president, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and Secretary Loeb, entered. The approach of the president was announced to the assembled guests by a fanfare of trumpets. Immediately the orchestra of the marine band, stationed in the vestibule, began the inspiring strains of "Hail to the Chief." Standing near the stand bearing the telegraph key, with his naval and military aids facing him, President Roosevelt addressed the assemblage briefly as follows:

"Ladies and Gentlemen—I have just received from Portland a telegram from President Goode of the Lewis and Clark centennial exposition sending his greetings and stating that the exposition management are waiting for me to touch the button which will ring the chimes in the United States government building and start the machinery of this exposition.

"The exposition marks the feat of exploration a century ago which was the first step in the expansion of this republic westward across the continent, the most important step in changing a straggling line of seaboard commonwealths into a mighty continental nation. It was one of the epochs of our history and it is eminently fitting that it should be commemorated by the exposition at Portland as is now being done. Such expositions will, I firmly believe, bring the nations of the earth ever closer together and enable us all to work together in peace and in harmony for the future of mankind."

The president then said: "I now open the Lewis and Clark exposition," leaning forward at the same instant and pressing the gold key which sounded the chimes and started the machinery 3,000 miles away.

The Lewis and Clark centennial exposition is a monument to the memories of Captains Merriwether Lewis and William Clark, who a hundred years ago blazed the trail which opened to the world the Oregon country.

Strike Leader Charges Bribery.

CHICAGO, June 2.—Charges of bribery against an officer of the Employers' Teaming company were made here before a grand jury by President Shea of the Teamsters' union and by Albert Young, formerly president of the same organization. Young and Shea said that they were offered $10,000 two years ago to bring about a strike of the teamsters employed by Sears, Roebuck & Co., which is a rival concern of Montgomery Ward & Co. They said that they refused the money, and the strike was never called.

Chilean Congress Opened.

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 2.—President Riesco opened congress with the usual ceremonies in the presence of the diplomatic corps, military and civil authorities and a great concourse of people. The president in his address said that the situation of the country was satisfactory. The treaty with Bolivia recently signed here, in which the German emperor was named as arbitrator of any difficulty arising in the execution of the convention, was read by the president in enthusiastic terms.

Princeton Boys to Build Theater.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 2.—The Triangle club, Princeton's dramatic organization, has just closed a successful season. The management has announced that nearly $3,000 will remain after all expenses have been met. This will start a fund to build a suitable theater here. The club produced "The Pretenders" this season.

CRITERION STAKES.

Flip Flap, Backed at 20 to 1, Got the Feature at Gravesend.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Flip Flap, backed from 20 to 1 to 10 to 1, won the Criterion stakes, the feature of the card at Gravesend. Shaw broke Flip Flap in front and, making the pace, won easily by two lengths. Three favorites won. Inquisitor, who was coupled with Marshmallow in the last race and favorite, threw O'Neill on the way to the post. The horse was soon caught and was returned the winner. Summaries:

ENGAGES COUNCIL.

Discharged Policeman Reports for Duty After Being Told His Services Are Not Required.

Under advice of counsel, Peter Hamilton, the patrolman who was dismissd after eighteen months' of probationary service, reported for duty last night as usual, in full uniform. Hamilton intends to make his dismissal a matter of test in the courts, and is preparing for a legal battle to a finish.

He was given to understand two weeks ago that he would be dropped on the first of the month, and yesterday morning, when he came in from post, Sergeant Fredrickson informed him that Chief Kiely did not not desire him to report last night. Hamilton said he wanted full and formal notice from the chief himself, and after consultation with Counsellor Codington and Attorney W. G. DeMeza, his lawyers, he reported as usual at inspection last night. He got his notice.

Hamilton's next step, it is said, will be to cite the Chief and the Council to appear in court to show why they should not be compelled to appoint him a regular officer. It is Hamilton's contention that he is protected by the State civil service statutes, and that he cannot be removed without a hearing, on charges. He is getting up a petition among the business men and prominent property holders, to be presened to the Council, asking that he be retained on the force. He is said to have secured lot of signatures among substantial citizens.

It is said that if Hamilton loses in his offort to compel the police committee to retain him, he will claim pay as a special officer, at twenty-five cents an hour, for the full term of his service as a probationer. If he won that action the city would have to give up a lot of back pay.

THEY WANT COMPENSATION FOR FRANCHISES

Piscataway Citizens Argue Against Gifts to Corporation.

AT PUBLIC HEARINGS.

Col. Hine Says P. S. C. Wont Pay $1,000 for Gas Main Privilege —Water Company Kicks at $2,000.

Corporation greed and intriguing methods were roundly scored at a public hearing held by the Piscataway Township Committee yesterday afternoon, on the application of the P. S. C. for a gas main franchise through the township Water Company's franchise. The committee wants the P. S. C. to pay $1,000 for the privilege of laying pipes, and has offered the water company its choice between paying $2,000 or having the franchise revoked. The company is accused of getting its franchise by trickery and of attempting to conceal its real aims and purposes. H. K. Bird, a large real estate owner in Dunellen and Piscataway, and a leader in the fight to prevent the giving away of franchises, fired a bomb at the water company by offering to take the water franchise himself for $1,000 down, and submitted maps showing the exact location of the plant he would put up. Nobody, including the men who represented the company at the hearing, knew or would tell where the P. S. C. plant is to be.

The meeting attracted a good deal of attention in South Plainfield and New Market, and leading citizens of each place were present and spoke. The hearing was held in the parlor of Thornton's hotel. Township Committeeman Nelson Giles presided. Township Counsel W. A. Coddington, of this city, was present to answer questions as to the laws involved.

The P. S. C. franchise came up first. Among its clauses are three which provide that the quality and price of gas shall be the same as in Plainfield and North Plainfield, that the company shall furnish, at cost, all new or second hand ranges, water heaters or any other fixtures that the consumer may desire; and, finally, that it shall pay $1,000 for the privilege of laying and maintaining its mains.

Col. Hine, chief stalking horse for the P. S. C. in franchise hunts, opened the discussion at Chairman Giles' invitation.

"The ordinance as drafted by the Council is satisfactory," said the Colonel urbanely, "with two exceptions among the clauses. Now, clause No. 6, which provides for the installation of all sorts of fixtures by the company, whenever requested by a consumer, at cost, means more, I am sure, than your counsel or your committee intended. We are willing to sell ranges and heaters at cost, as in other localities, but we think it is too much too ask us to give consumers gas-logs, parlor heaters or other fixtures of that kind.

"Paragraph No. 11, gentlemen, which provides for a payment of $1,000, I tell you frankly is prohibitive. We have, as you know, just entered the borough of Dunellen, at the request of citizens of that place. It occurred to the company that it might be well at this time, while our men are in this neighborhood, to connect our Bound Brook and Plainfield plants, so that a breakdown at either end would not be followed by cessation of service in the territory affected. Residents of Lincoln, hearing of our intention to ask for the privilege of that connection, asked us to divert our line to their place to serve them with gas. We planned to run our line through there in response to that petition, and for no other reason. It is our intention to lay mains throughout the township. It is the intention of the company, as provided for in the ordinance, to make connections when requested by petitioners representing 100 feet of pipe. This is not a territory where the company can anticipate any considerable consumption of gas, and the character of the population precludes the idea that it ever will contribute a profitable amount of business.

"We would like to make this connection, and it would help the community, but it is not a matter of sufficient importance to the company to pay $1,000. I do not want to seem arbitrary, but if that condition is to be imposed, gentlemen, I must frankly say that I am wasting your time and you are wasting mine."

"The time has gone by to give franchises away," said Mr. Bird. "If this franchise is worth nothing, let's keep it until it is."

"I am opposed to granting perpetual franchises for nothing," said Stanley Day. "If they cannot pay let 'em stay outside. Anyway, no franchise should be granted in perpetuity. A franchise should not be granted for longer than ninety-nine years on any terms.'

"There are franchises and franchises," said F. Percy Vail. "This franchise isn't much. Let them have it. We'll get back at 'em in taxes."

"The Standard Oil Company paid for the privilege of laying its pipe line," commented Edson Davis, "and there is no reason why the P. S. C. shouldn't. Let us be as strict in dealing with township property as with our own."

The question arose here as to whether the franchise granted the P. S. C. a monopoly de jure. Counsellor Coddington said it didn't.

"No competition is likely," said Dr. M. J. Whitford. "This is an age of combination, not competition. All franchises should be paid for; the time for giving them away has passed."

S. D. Drake said with characteristic emphasis that there was no mistake in giving away franchises. He said public utility corporations always boomed communities.

"I have here a petition from people of Lincoln," he said, "representing $1,000,000 in wealth. They want the gas there."

Clerk Day read the petition. Mr. Bird's disrespectful comments on the wealth represented by the signers called a rebuke from the chair.

C. E. Kelly echoed Mr. Drake's contention that franchises ought to be given away. He figured that the taxes paid the community. He opposed limited franchises, because the corporation would find itself at the mercy of lawmakers when its lease expired. Nobody laughed at him.

Answering Dr. Whitford's contention that, as the community developed the roads, the P. S. C. had no right to use them without compensation. Col. Hine closed the discussion with some earnest remarks on the share corporations have had in developing the Northern part of the State.

The water matter was taken up immediately. Practically the same speakers gave the committeemen their views on that franchise, and the tone of the remarks was much the same as in the first hearing. The situation that confronted the citizens was this: The committee, in February, granted what the members thought was simple permission to form the Piscataway Water Company. They learned later, when Counsellor Coddington looked over the ordinance, that they had granted a franchise giving the township to the water company. The company representatives convinced the committee, when taken to task, that they didn't know a misunderstanding had taken place, but the committee promptly had two ordinances prepared; a repealer of the one passed and one compelling the company to pay $2,000 for laying pipes.

As soon as the chairman called for discussion, Mr. Bird handed in his offer and maps showing the location of his water plant. He backed the proposition up with a $250 forfeit check. He said frankly that he didn't want the franchise very badly, but that he could take it and demonstrate that there was lots of value in it.

"Give me that franchise for $1,000," he said, "and I wouldn't have to visit more than three Wall street offices to get all the capital I need for a plant."

F. J. Faulks, a Newark lawyer, and Robert Carson, of New Brunswick, one of the incorportors of the company (which has a nominal capitalization of $10,000), was presented the company. Mr. Faulks explained the objects of the company.

He didn't see why the company should pay for a franchise, because the Plainfield Water Company, under the State law, could come into the township and lay pipes and take all the water it wanted without any regard to the township authorities. He called the citizens' attention to that fact that water service made more and lower-priced insurance available and that other benefits would accrue from the P. W. C.

Mr Carson, in the course of his remarks on the many benefits to be derived from water service, intimated that the company would fight to the last ditch in the courts to retain the original franchise. He devoted some time to explaining why the franchise wasn't worth paying for.

"It seemed to me," observed Dr. Whitford, "that if the franchise isn't worth paying for it isn't worth expensive litigation. Mr. Carson's statements are hard to reconcile."

"I am sorry that the committee didn't know enough to see what it was granting in the first place," said Stanley Day, "but now that it

YOUNG MISSES HELP THE FRESH AIR HOME

NET $75 AT ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN AT C. W. HOLLAND'S HOME.

Under the auspices of nine young women from the city and borough for the benefit of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, a successful entertainment and sale was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Wesley Holland, 740 West Seventh street. It was originally intended to hold the affair on the lawn, which had been attractively decorated with Japanese lanterns and bunting, but the rain interferred and it was necessary to continue it on the porch of Mrs. Holland's home.

A decided feature of the affair was a short play entitled "The Paying Off of Emma," which was presented by the Misses Marion Rocap, Alice Rowland, Alveretta Holland, Mary Rushmore, Frances Perkins, Gwendolyn Gough and Marie Dickenson. The play was written by Miss Frances Perkins, aged twelve years, and it made such a hit that the young women were obliged to repeat it several times.

In addition to those taking part in the play Miss Jean Saunders and Miss Elizabeth Hawthorn, assisted in the sale of fancy articles, candy, ice cream and cake. All of the young women wore Japanese costumes. During the play their mothers took charge of the several booths and tables. About $75 was realized for the Home. The ice cream which was left after the sale was sent to the Children's Home.

"A KETTLE OF FISH" WAS VERY AMUSING

AMATEURS DISPLAY SOME FINISHED ACTING AT THE PARK CLUB.

Amateur dramatics never scored higher artistic success than that eached by the cast of "A Kettle of Fish," a three act farce comedy, at the Park Club last night.

The play was well staged, and the cast exhibited no rough spots in any situation. The lines were not only well read, but the bits of stage business were always apt and pat on the second. A full house greeted the performance, and applause was frequent and generous.

So well balanced was the cast that it would really be very hard to note contrasts in point of finished acting. Charles H. Lyman, Effingham Pinto, Clifford W. McGee, H. C. White, Miss Mabel Van Deventer, and Miss Nanon West in the leading roles, were lacking nothing essential to the full strength of the situations.

CHILD BEATER PUNISHED.

Pluckamin Woman Must Pay $120 for Cruel Acts.

Some of the offenders convicted in the Somerset County Courts this term were up before Judge Schenck at Somerville yesterday for sentence. Mrs. Meribah Stage Parks, of Pluckamin, who was convicted on three indictments for cruel and abusive treatment of her three stepchildren, Alfreda, Lizzie and Emma Parks, was fined $40 on each count. Mrs. Parks may not be able to pay the fine and in that case she will be confined to the county jail for four months.

Charles Kiszonak, of Raritan, convicted for illegal liquor selling, was fined $150.

Henry Brown, of Bound Brook, larceny, was sent to the county jail for thirty days.

Mr. Casey's Latest Composition.

James W. Casey, the well known musical composer who is at present visiting in Plainfield, has recently had issued by his publishers, the Essex Music Co., of New York, a new song that gives promise of exceeding in popularity his world-famous, "Sing Me a Song of the South." It is entitled "Sing Me the Songs of Dixie Land" and is being featured in New York by the Knickerbocker Quintette and the Trocadero Quartette and in Philadelphia by Robert Emmett Lennon, of the Royal Imperial Band.

They Wedded Secretly.

Miss Mabel Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart,, of New street, and Harry Bolmer, of the borough, were quietly married in Brooklyn on Tuesday night. The relatives of the bride and groom knew nothing of the marriage until their return, when they showed a wedding certificate

FOR FURTHER WIDENING

Borough Council Takes up Somerset Street Improvement

OWNERS ARE READY.

Ordinance to Close Unused Portions of Summit and Fairview Avenues Passes on Third Reading.

The first active step toward the further widening of Somerset street, from Jackson avenue on, was taken by the borough Council at its meeting, last night. A resolution was introduced by Councilman VanWinkle in which it was stated the matter would be considered provided a petition, signed by the freeholders, be presented to that effect. The property owners are ready for the improvement to begin and the necessary petition will be offered at a meeting to be held in the near future.

The ordinance to close the unused portions of Fairview and Summit avenues beyond Westervelt avenue, was passed on its third reading and now goes into effect. The vote on adoption was unanimous, while none of the property owners affected offered objection.

In the way of routine business, the Board of Education asked that officers be assigned to have special charge of truancy matters and requests that crosswalks be laid at Watchung and Mountain avenues. Several manufacturing concerns submitted bids for the construction of the proposed combination chemical and hose wagon for thefire department, Mr. Krewson asked that $1,000 be borrowed for general purposes and Mr. Lee offered a resolution that a committee be appointed to prepare resolutions on the death of the late John Valiant, a former councilman.

Mayor Smalley reported that he had appointed August Wolf a special marshal and Walter Emmons a call man in Hose Company, No. 2, both being confirmed. The mayor also said that he had verbally offered the Board of Health the use of the rooms over the police station for meetings and that there had been a verbal acceptance. On motion of Mr. Arnold, it was voted to buy 150 feet of twelve inch pipe for use in connecting a catch basin on Stone street and Mr. Arnold was given instructions to give residents of that thoroughfare second notices that they must put down flag walks within thirty days or else have it done by the borough.

Mr. VanArsdale, for the police committee, reported that during the month there had been twenty-three arrests and a total of $53 in fines collcted.

AMENDS MARTIN ACT.

Law Signed Yesterday Discourages Speculation.

Governor Stokes has signed Assembly bill No. 76, introduced by Mr. Pennington, of Essex, which materially affects the method under which bidding for property offered by municipalities for sale, under the Martin act, or unpaid taxes or assessments, is conducted.

The law is in the interest of bidders of moderate means, and is designed to discourage promiscuous speculation in Martin act property by persons who have made speculation of that nature practically a business. The means taken to accomplish this is to restrict the amount upon which interest is chargeable to redeeming property owners, to the actual extent to the citys liens on the property.

Clay Bird Tourney.

Neaf Apgar, of this city, was among the contestants at the first annual clay target tournament of the North Branch Gun Club on the grounds at North Branch Thursday afternoon with a large crowd of sportsmen present from all parts of the country. Twelve events were shot off, and excellent scores were made. Mahlon H. Rupell, of the North Branch Club, won the bulk of the money.

Searchight Found the Shawl.

If the two little girls who advertised a lost dress in the want columns of The Daily Press the other day will call at the office they will find it ready for them. The missing article was returned by Dr. L. S. Pocock, the Somerset liveryman in one of those vehicles the shawl was left by them. Like all wide-awake Plainfielders he reads the want columns of The Daily Press.

TRAMWAY MANAGER A NORTH PLAINFIELDER

H. J. M'CORMICK IN CHARGE OF STREET RAILWAY IN ENGLAND.

The Cheltenham (England) Chronicle and Glouchestershire Graphic, under date of April 1, contains an extended and interesting account of the opening of the Cheltenham Tramways, linking Charlton and Leckhampton, two important places. The event is of unusual interest here as Henry J. McCormick, general manager of the Cheltenham and District Light Railway Company, from its start and superintendent engineer of its extensions, formerly resided in this city and was employed by what is now the Public Service Corporation. He married Miss Nellie VanWinkle, daughter of William VanWinkle, of Park place, the borough.

The opening of the extension was was marked with imposing ceremonies in which many prominent officials took part. "It was a civic opening," says the account, "for the Mayor set the car going and then little Master Joseph McCormick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. McCormick, presented the Mayoress with a bouquet of choice flowes. On the return to the Municipal office, Mr. McCormick entertained the party to tea. The cars began running regularly, with a twenty minutes' service on Wednesday."

Accompanying the newspaper is a magazine on the front page of which there is an excellent picture of Mr. McCormick.

PLAINFIELDER'S SUCCESS BEFORE THE FOOTLIGHTS

WALTER SHERWIN NOW WELL UP IN THE THEATRICAL WORLD.

Walter Sherwin, of East Second street, who has been playing the part of "Valentine" in Porter J. White's "Faust" company, closed in Ashtabula, O., last week, and has returned to Plainfield for his summer vacation. During the past winter he presented the character over 200 times in the western and southern states. Though but a very young man, in fact one of the youngest who was ever trusted with the role of "Valentine" in so large a production as that carried by White, the press of the country has been unanimous in its approval of his interpretation. The New York Mirror, a representative theatrical paper, recently devoted a lengthy account to his work, embellishing it with his photograph in costume.

Sherwin was always fond of the theatre and his early dramatic "education" was secured at Music Hall. He studied dramatics in a New York school and secured his first engagement with the Burrel Comedy Company, a repertoire organization that frequently visited this city.

He remained with it two seasons and since then has been with several organizations. He played "Surly Jim" in the well known melodrama "Saved from the Sea" and in the season of 1903-'04 gained prominence in the theatrical world by undertaking a dual part in the scenic melodrama, "Over Niagara Falls," which had a long run in New York city. He made a quick change each night from an excitable Frenchman to a stolid, stoical Indian and did it so cleverly that few in his audiences knew it was the same actor.

Goethe's immortal work had appealed to him from his younger days and when an engagement was offered him in the White company he quickly accepted. He was already familar with the part of "Valentine" and from the first night he acted it his interpretation was acceptable. He improved rapidly and when the season ended last week he was asked to report for rehearsals again next August. He has other plans in view, however, and the coming year may see him with some other organization as several metropolitan managers have been seeking his services.

Patteson. Captain John Hall will be incharge of the local delegation.

SEWER PROJECT DROPPED

Mayor Smalley Says Borough Should "Bide A Wee."

FAVORS TRUNK OUTLET.

Declares Borough Will Gain By Waiting and Watching the City Experiment With Its System.

Through pointed remarks made by Mayor Smalley at last night's Common Council meeting, the agitation to begin preliminary work for a sewer system in the borough, it is believed, will in all probability remain dormant for a year at least. Chairman Arnold, who has been especially active in the matter and who has been assisting in the postal card canvass to learn the sentiment of property owners, asked that something be done at once but the remaider of the councilmen did not back him up after Mayor Smalley spoke.

Mr. Arnold stated that it is now costing the borough residents twice as much for cesspools as it would for a sewer system and that though the question of making the improvement aad been talked of for two years nothing had been done. The mayor expressed a willingess to see North Plainfield up-to-date in this respect but he declared that it would be far better if nothing was done for another year in order to more fully consider the various method of disposal.

"The Plainfield system is all right," he said, "but still it is not a success because it is too near town. We would build an independent plant of this nature at a cost of $75,000, but I think it would be far better if some plan could be devised whereby Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen and could unite in building a pipe line to tide water."

The Plainfield septic tanks seem to be working satisfactorily, in fact I understand the Council is to build additional beds at a cost of $15,000, still it wont hurt us to hold off for a while and let them experiment further. Personally ,I want to wait another year, though I believe the lack of a system is retarding the borough in its growth, but if the Council will motion to have a committee appointed to arrange for a public meeting, I shall assist so far as possible."

No one cared to make the motion and the matter was allowed to drop without further discussion.

SCHOOL CHANGES.

Board of Education Not to Continue Lease on Epworth House.

As previously announced, the Board of Education at the close of this school year, will give up the lease of the Epworth House on Monroe avenue, which is being used as a kindergarten, and the children who have been going to school there will be put in the Irving School, while some of the older pupils will be sent to the Whittier School.

It is intended to hold half sessions for the younger children at the Irving School, it being impossible to give them proper time and attention considering the crowded conditions. It was hoped that the new High School would bring the much-needed extra room in the over-crowded quarters in the other schools, but it appears that there will be no change in conditions in the West End school.

The programme to be presented is arranged with a view to meeting all tastes, and includes heavy as well as light and popular numbers, all presented in a masterly manner.

TRIP IN AN AUTOMOBILE

A Little Tour to Newburgh Covers Seventy-Eight Miles.

THE ROAD IS GOOD

How the Journey Can be Extended for a Day or Two—What is to be Seen.

Automobilists in Plainfield, who have a hobby of taking extended trips in their machines, will find a journey to Newburgh a particularly delightful one. The Auto Bulletin, which has just made its initial appearance at Newark, gives the route and it is herewith reproduced:

"The early part of this month we started from Plainfield, going by the way of Scotch Plains, Springfield, South Orange, Montclair, Paterson, Ridgewood, Suffern, Tuxedo, Turners, Highland Mills, Vails Gate, and Newburgh. Distances, Plainfield to Springfield 9 miles, to Paterson 28 miles, to Suffern 44 miles, to Tuxedo 52 miles, to Highland Mills 65 miles, to Newburgh 78 miles.

"The road the entire distance is especially adapted for automobiles. We found it in splendid condition, and good time can be made, except where the speed limit prescribes a slow pace. For three miles before reaching Suffern the road is especially rough, rutty, and stony, and is the poorest stretch of road between Plainfield and Newburgh.

"Should the automobilist wish to extend his trip for day or two no more delightful route can be selected than up through the Berkshire Hills. Crossing the river at Newburgh take the road to Poughkeepsie by way of Woppingers Falls. A part of this distance is over the new State road, which is one of the finest in this section of the State. Distance from Newburgh to Poughkeepsie 16 miles. From Poughkeepsie take the road to Washington Hollow, thence to Amenia, Sharon,, Egremont, Great Barrington; from that point going by way of Housatonic Valley over good roads to Pittsfield, Mass.

"From Newburgh to Poughkeepsie 16 miles, to Washington Hollow 27 miles, to Armenia 39 miles, to Sharon, 44 miles, to Egremont 55 miles, to Great Barrington 74 miles, to Pittsfield 93 miles. The entire distance from Newburgh to Pittsfield, Mass., is over roads that are above the average for county thoroughfares, and with only a few exceptions for short distances an even steady speed can be maintained, except where hills are encountered. In that section of the route near Armenia and Sharon a number of steep hills will be encountered, especially the hill known as "Armenia" hill, which is a long, winding, and rocky road. Beyond this section the country road lies through a delightful farm district with scenery that is well worth the extended trip.

"In Newburgh, Mason's garage on Broadway affords ample facilities for supplies, repairs or other accommodations. In Pittsfield, Mass., the Central Automobile Station is probably one of the most commodious garages in Massachusetts, and all necessary repairs for supplies can be secured at moderate cost, and the tourist will be guaranteed satisfactory and courteous attention.

"As Berkshire County is famous for its delightful scenery and attractive rides, the tourist will find Pittsfield and its vicinity a most delightful place to spend a few days in touring. Most of the roads are in good condition and favorable for automobiles, although quite a number of hills will be encountered in this section of Massachusetts."

Attack Police Commission.

City Clerk Kenah was served with a subpoena by Judge Gilhooly. He produced all records covering the appointment of the commissioners.

Elizabeth Wants More Firemen.

The Elizabeth Council appropriated $2,400 for the purchase of a site for a new fire tower, and also for a prospective engine house. An addition of sixteen men to the department was asked for by the fire commissioners, It was explained that the call system could be done away with by the increase. To run the department next year $72,670 was asked for.

BLAZE IN PITTSBURG

Old Avenue Theater Was Entirely Destroyed.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE ENDANGERED

The Audience Left Without Panic, and No Lives Were Lost—Prompt Work of the Firemen Saved Spread of Flames.

PITTSBURG, June 3.—One of the most exciting and spectacular fires that has visited Pittsburg in recent years broke out in the Avenue theater and before it was subdued had completely destroyed the Avenue theater and partially wrecked the Grand Opera House adjoining, but fortunately no panic resulted, and no lives were lost. The loss will reach $150,000, which is fully insured. The cause of the fire is believed to be traceable to crossed wires.

The Avenue theater was probably the oldest show house in the city and recently had been used for vaudeville. The Grand Opera House is partially under the same roof. The Avenue theater had been closed for several weeks, and no one was in the building except the watchman, but in the opera house a matinee performance was in progress when the fire broke out. The house was about half filled, but through the prompt and systematic work of the employees the audience was got out without the semblance of a panic. Indeed the majority did not know there was a fire until they reached the street. Several women fainted when they came to realize what might have happened.

For some reason there was considerable delay in getting engines to the scene, and when the firemen finally reached it dense smoke and flames were belching from every window on the Fifth avenue front and the side next to Smithfield street. The heat was intense, and for a time it looked as though the Associated Press office, which is located on Fifth avenue just opposite the burning building, would be compelled to vacate its rooms. The Newell hotel and the Antler hotel, opposite the Avenue theater, suffered considerable damage from broken windows, resulting from the great heat. Employees of the hotels and firemen kept water constantly playing on the fronts of the buildings and in that way saved them from burning. The guests of the hotels prepared themselves for a quick exit, but were saved this trouble by the good work of the firemen confining the flames to the one building.

The Avenue theater building was erected in the fifties and was valued at $75,000. It is completely ruined. It belonged to the Sarah C. Miller estate, the heirs of which are Mrs. Thomas Carnegie, her sisters, Mrs. F. C. Nimick and Mrs. M. T. Fuller, and her niece, Miss Jean C. Bradley, all of New York. Harry Davis was the lessee of both the Avenue theater and the Grand Opera House. His loss will be in the neighborhood of $75,000. The damage to the opera house, which was caused mostly by water, will represent probably $25,000.

Calve's Voice Hushed.

LONDON, June 3.—It is stated in operatic circles that Emma Calve will never appear in public again. The voice that charmed millions will never be heard in opera or concert again because of a rupture of one of the vocal cords. Mme. Calve was booked to open the season of popular opera at the Waldorf theater in rivalry to the Royal opera. She did not appear at the initial performance, but wrote a letter of apology and said she hoped to be able to appear soon, but she is in a physician's care in France, and her voice is so husky that she speaks in a whisper. Her friends are hopeful that the report is exaggerated.

"Old Man" Hope No More.

NEW YORK, June 3.—James Hope, known on the criminal records as Jimmy Hope and "Old Man" Hope, the notorious Manhattan bank burglar, is dead at his home here. For two years he had been in ill health and unable to do any work. The Manhattan bank burglary, which Hope engineered, was perhaps the greatest bank robbery that ever occurred, the thieves getting away with $3,000,000 in stocks, bonds and money. Little of this has ever been recovered.

The presentations in the diplomatic circle included General Stewart L. Woodford of New York, former minister to Spain, and Mrs. Woodford; Mrs. Ogden Mills and the Misses Beatrice and Gladys Mills of New York.

Big Fight In Macedonia.

WHY NOT END WAR?

President Roosevelt Advises Russia to Sue For Peace.

HORRORS OF NAVAL BATTLE TOLD

Nebogatoff Condemned For Surrendering His Ships—The Causes of Rojestvensky's Defeat—Details of Losses.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—President Roosevelt has struck a blow for peace in the far east. In a conference at the White House with Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, the president expressed the earnest hope that Russia would forthwith conclude peace with Japan. Prolongation of the war, he believes, will not result in victory for the Russian arms and can only serve to increase Japan's demands and render more difficult the drafting of a treaty of peace which the czar as well as the mikado can sign.

The president spoke, he said, as the friend of Russia no less than of Japan and on behalf not only of the Washington government, but in the interest of humanity. Until his words have reached Tsarskoe-Selo and have been communicated to Emperor Nicholas in the friendly spirit in which they were uttered their effect cannot be estimated. Soon after reaching his embassy Count Cassini began the preparation of a dispatch to his government. Throughout the diplomatic corps there is a strong hope that the conference marked the first step toward peace, but the general opinion is that weeks may elapse before even preliminary negotiations can be begun. Diplomats express the hope that Emperor Nicholas will receive the president's words as the advice of a government which for years has been Russia's traditional friend and will weigh it accordingly.

Appreciating the natural feelings of the ambassador on such an occasion, the president began the conversation by a frank personal expression of sympathy for Count Cassini.

The president informed the ambassador that he earnestly hoped for an early peace in the far east and that in expressing this hope he voiced not only his strong personal sentiments and those of his government, but he believed these were held by all of the powers. His opinion was that it would be a mistake for Russia to continue the war. In addition to the suffering entailed by the naval conflict, he did not believe that Russia has anything to win in prolonging hostilities.

What Japan's probable peace terms would be the president was wholly unable to say, but he did not hesitate to express the opinion that, difficult as these conditions might prove in the light of such a victory as that gained in the Korean strait, they would increase in severity with every day that a state of war continued. Unless Russia has substantial hope of administering a decisive defeat to Japan in this war the president believed it would inure to the interests of the St. Petersburg government to conclude peace at once.

The ambassador was deeply touched by the sincere cordiality of his reception and the frank and friendly manner in which the president spoke. He said that he could not see, however, that there was anything in the present situation, unfortunate as it undoubtedly was, for his government which necessitated Russia's suing for peace. As to territory, he pointed out that China and not Russia had been the loser, for even Port Arthur was held only under lease. On the sea Russia had nothing more to lose.

Thus the conversation continued for more than half an hour, being characterized throughout by frankness and friendliness. Later on when the ambassador has heard from his government after communicating the president's views and the president's willingness to render Russia any service possible in initiating peace negotiations with Japan he will communicate with the president.

When Count Cassini leaves Washington for St. Petersburg early in July he will be the bearer of a personal message from the president to the emperor.

Tokyo dispatches say that it is planned to bring the captured Russian battleship Orel to Yobosuka, where the emperor will visit her.

A remarkable story is in circulation concerning the wounded on the Orel. It is said that at the opening of the fight 300 men were killed and wounded and that the groans and shrieks of the wounded exercised so harmful an effect that it was decided to throw the mortally wounded into the sea.

One hundred and forty, it is said, were thrown overboard. Those slightly wounded were then fastened to the mast to prevent their interference with the fighting of the ship.

It is impossible to obtain any confirmation of this story, but later reports indicate that the crew of the Orel fought with desperate bravery throughout the day previous to their surrender. The hull of the vessel is shell marked, and many of her guns are smashed and dismounted.

The reported sinking of the Russian cruiser Jemtchug in the recent naval battle has been confirmed. A telegram from Sasebo says that Admiral Rojestvensky stated in an interview that he hoped to clear Tsu island in a fog, but a sudden southwestern gale cleared the fog and revealed the presence of his fleet.

The Japanese losses in the battle of the Sea of Japan were 113 officers and men killed and 424 officers and men wounded. The completion of the revised list shows that the losses were fewer than the original estimates.

The flagship Mikasa was the heaviest loser, losing 63 killed and wounded. The losses were distributed among the ships of the fleet as follows: Mikasa, 63; Adzuma, 39; Sikishima, 37; Asashi, 31; Fuji, 28; Idzuma, 26; Nisshin, 27; Otawa, 26; Kasaga, 26; Tsushima, 19; Asama, 15; Naniwa, 17; Tokiwa, 15; Yakumo, 11; Chitose, 6; Idzumi, 10; Kasuga, 9; Hashidate, 5; Niitaka, 4.

The casualties on the destroyers and the torpedo boats were eighty-seven. Commander Togo was wounded on the Idzuma.

The cardinal causes of Rojestvensky's defeat have been the subject of general discussion at Tokyo. One Japanese expert gives the following analysis:

"First.—An imperfect reconnoissance and incomplete, faulty and misleading intelligence.

"Second.—An imperfect battle formation, which in itself that Rojestvensky did not expect to meet Togo off Tsushima.

"Third.—The weather, the direction of the wind and the sunlight were unfavorable to the Russians, Togo having the sun behind him and firing with the wind, while the Russians had the sunlight in their eyes and fired against the wind.

"Fourth.—The Russians wasted their ammunition and eventually ran short. It is believed that the surrender of Nebogatoff was necessary because his ammunition had been expended.

"Fifth.—The marked inferiority of the Russian gunnery."

St. Petersburg dispatches this morning say that feeling in the admiralty against Rear Admiral Nebogatoff continues to run high, the majority of the naval authorities being deaf to the appeals of the few who insist that the admiral's action in surrendering his warships should not be condemned until the circumstances become fully known. The majority say they could forgive anything but surrender and point to the precedent set in the case of the Russian warship Raphael, which in 1820, during the Russo-Turkish war, struck its colors to three Turkish ships which surrounded it.

Nicholas I. meted out a terrible punishment to the officers and crew of the Raphael, ordering that all of them should be shot after their exchange and directing that the ship being recaptured, its infamous history should be blotted out by the total destruction of the vessel.

CASTRO OPENS CONGRESS.

Message Says "We Had Slight Difference With United States."

CARACAS, Venezuela, June 3.—President Castro read his message to congress. He said in part that the Venezuelan government had maintained good relations with foreign countries in the degree their respective representatives desired.

"With the United States," he continued, "through causes foreign to our will and without the least responsibility on our part, we have had a slight difference, but the discussion of the questions seems to have made the facts clear to the American government, judging from the measures the said government lately passed in favor of our good and cordial friendship. These questions refer to the Bermudez and Orinoco companies. The latter have already been adjudged under the protocols, but nevertheless Mr. Bowen desired a new arbitration. The government could not accede to this as the sovereignty and independence of the republic were involved."

TRADE CONDITIONS.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Report of Week's Business.

NEW YORK, June 3.—R. G. Dun's weekly review of trade says that much warmer weather is needed to restore normal conditions both in trade circles and on the farms. A little weakness is noted in pig iron, but most lines of finished steel are in good demand. Other leading branches of manufacture are making favorable reports.

Foreign commerce at this port for the last week was also favorable. Bank exchanges at New York were 63.4 per cent larger than in the same week last year, while at other leading cities there was an increase of 17.2 per cent. Failures for the week were 198 against 211 last week, 234 the preceding week and 220 the corresponding week last year.

BLUE RIDGE, Ga., June 3.—J. L. An eyewitness reports that J. L. Galloway struck Ewing, and George Galloway interfered in the fight which followed. The Galloways drew their knives, and Ewing drew his revolver, resulting in the instant death of J. L. Galloway and his brother's death an hour later. Ewing was cut seriously, but it is not known whether his wounds will prove fatal.

REPORT IS REJECTED

Equitable Directors Throw Out Trick Measures.

WOULD STRIP HYDE OF HIS STOCK

Harriman Refused to Comment on Statement That There Was a Plan to Put Society's Assets Into Hands of Standard Men.

NEW YORK, June 3.—A new alignment of the parties concerned in the controversy in the Equitable Life Assurance society appeared to have been established when the directors' meeting began. An interest friendly to Mr. Hyde declared that the chief object of the meeting was to effect some arrangement whereby the report of the Frick committee could be defeated and withheld from publication. This plan, it was said, had the support of President Alexander and his friends.

On the other hand, it was said every member of the Frick committee as well as several of the known conservatives in the board opposed such a plan. It was said that if the report was voted down every member of the committee and a number of directors would tender their resignations and that the report of the committee would be made public by the retiring directors.

A conference between Mr. Hyde and his friends and attorneys was held before the directors' meeting, and it was noticed that neither E. H. Harriman nor Jacob H. Schiff attended it, although up to the time of the presentation of the Frick report it was believed that Mr. Harriman and Mr. Schiff were strong supporters of Mr. Hyde. George J. Gould, however, attended the conference in Mr. Hyde's office.

After a short session the directors took a one hour adjournment. The session was taken up principally with statements made by President Alexander and Vice President Hyde, opposing the adoption of the Frick report.

E. H. Harriman, one of the committee, when asked if he had anything to say regarding the published memorandum accusing him and other financiers of conspiring to throw the control of the assets of the society into the hands of the Standard Oil capitalists, said he had not a word of comment to make.

The accusation referred to, which is being given wide circulation by its authors, whose names are not made public, claims substantially that the report of the Frick committee in its findings against President James W. Alexander, First Vice President James H. Hyde and Second Vice President Gage E. Tarbell of the Equitable represent a conspiracy engineered in the committee by Henry C. Frick, E. H. Harriman and M. E. Ingalls to turn over the society to the Standard Oil interests.

The positive results of the directors' meeting were the rejection of the report of the Frick committee by the very large majority of 24 to 13, the resignation of Mr. Frick from the board of directors and the passage of resolutions embodying the following:

"That a chairman of the board be created with plenary powers over all departments and affairs of the society.

"That a nominating committee consisting of D. O. Mills, John A. Stewart, A. J. Cassatt, T. Jefferson Coolidge, August Belmont, J. B. Forgan and Robert T. Lincoln be requested to report at a meeting of the board to be called on Wednesday next a candidate for chairman.

"That James Hazen Hyde be requested within three months to divest himself of the control of the stock of the society on such terms and conditions as shall be satisfactory."

The momentous question that confronts city folk in June July and August is: "Where shall I spend my vacation?" The decision of all questions that have to do with spending is largely influenced by advertising. The resorts whose attractions are most widely heralded will claim the attention of the greatest number of holiday-makers. The next problem is the selection of a notel or boarding place. Again the advertisments prove a determining factor. The summer resort man who wants to entertain the public must issue a public invitation. People hesitate to go where they are not certain of a welcome.—Ex.

It does seem surprising to learn that the Jersey Central has postponed a much needed improvement at the East bound North Avenue station because the bids were too high. As a matter of fact the railroad company can get work done as cheaply as anybody else and in the long run generally much cheaper. Why then delay making an addition to the station for the accommodation of baggage? More than double the amount of baggage is shipped on east bound trains than on those moving west and under the present arrangement naturally much inconvenience is encountered by local patrons of the road Plans have been made to build a handsome station at Cranford and proper arrangements have been made to handle the baggage on the east bound side of the tracks. It is not unreasonable to say that if the company can afford to give such accommodations to Cranford, it can well afford to make such an improvement here where it does more passenger business than possibly anywhere along the line.

Several queries were put regarding the location of the plant. Both Mr. Faulk and Mr. Cadskin said they didn't know; the matter was in the hands of an engineer. There is a general idea that the company is really engaged in a scheme to pipe water from outside the township to other places, merely using the township as the Standard Oil Company does in piping oil.

Mr. Kelley voiced the general idea when he declared that there was a general jar of deception about the company's whole proceeding. None of the citizens present spoke a word in favor of granting the franchise.

THREE NEW BRIDGES FOR UNION COUNTY

$1,700 APPROPRIATED FOR THE PURPOSE BY BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS.

The building of new bridges throughout the county and the repairing of some that had deteriorated from wear and time was the principal topic of consideration before the Board of Freeholders Thursday afternoon. The sum of $1,750 was appropriated for the erection of three new iron bridges, and a number of committees were appointed to consider the repairing of several bridges, or the replacing of them by new structures the committees to report at the next meeting of the board.

Director Hubbard, of this city, and Secretary Ryno were not present at the meeting, the former having been ill for the past three days.

A communication was received from the Charity Organization Society, of Elizabeth, asking that a room in the county court house be given to the society as a meeting place, desired compensation being offered for this. It was stated that the society was a quasi-public corporation, allied with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. It was referred to the committee on public grounds and buildings.

A Valuable Publication.

The passenger department of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has published the 1905 edition of the summer excursion route book. This work is designed to provide the public with descriptive notes of the principal summer resorts of the United States, with the best routes for reaching them, and the rates of fare. It contains all the principal seashore and mountain resorts in New England, the Middle, Southern, and Western Statse, and in Canada, and over seventeen hundred different routes or combinations of routes. The book has been compiled with the greatest care, and altogether is the most complete and comprehensive handbook of summer travel ever offered to the public. The cover is handsome and striking, printed in colors, and the book contains several maps, presenting the exact routes over which tickets are sold. The book is profusely illustrated with fine half-tone cuts of scenery at the various resorts and along the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad. This very interesting book may be procured at any Pennsylvania Railroad ticket office at the nominal price of ten cents, or, upon application to George W. Boyd, general passenger agent, Broad Street station, Philadelphia, Pa., by mail for twenty cents.

WEAVER'S AX AT WORK.

Civic Officers Step Down and Out at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, June 3.—At the quest of Mayor Weaver, Alexander Colville, Jr., assistant director of public safety, and William H. Baker, assistant director of public works, handed in their resignations and were immediately succeeded by new men.

After the mayor had received the resignations he appointed Thomas W. South, a former police magistrate, to fill the position vacated by Mr. Colville and Thomas L. Hicks, a former postmaster of this city, to take the place made vacant in the department of public works. The salaries of the assistant directors are $4,000 a year.

The changes in the assistant directorships was not unexpected, as it has been rumored ever since the chiefs of these departments were changed that the assistant director would also be asked to resign. Mr. South has until within a year or two been prominent in the Republican organization. Mr. Hicks before being appointed postmaster under the first McKinley administration was chief of the bureau of highways and a member of the councils. He has an intimate knowledge of city finances.

The director of public safety has issued an order that hereafter all absentees from duty in the police and fire departments, whether through sickness or other cause, shall have proportionate amounts deducted from their pay.

In carrying out the wishes of the mayor that the police shall keep out of politics the director of public safety also issued an order that a report be made to him of the number of voters registered from the home of every member of the police department. At every election within the last few years complaints have been made that large numbers of illegal voters have registered at the homes of policemen.

PROUD OF HIS RACE.

Baron Kaneko Used to Wince When Called a Yellow Man.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The New York Nippon club, a social organization of the Japanese in this city, had a house warming at its new quarters at 44 West Eighty-fifth street. Of course the affair was a jollification over the great naval victory in the Korean strait, and the house warming feature was of necessity incidental. The principal speakers were Baron Kentaro Kaneko and M. Takahashi, Japan's financial agent in the United States and Europe.

"When I was a student at Harvard," said Baron Kaneko, street boys used to point at me as a Chinaman, and I confess I used to wince when I was told I belonged to the yellow race. But I am proud of it now. The yellow race is crushing Russian bureaucracy.

"But let me add the war should not puff us up. After the war we must do all we can to improve our good relations with the United States, and this club should be a factor in such a programme. America has given us great sympathy. Any anxiety it may have on the score of the Philippines must surely be groundless so long as Japanese children go on memorizing the fact that it was Commodore Perry who opened Japan to western civilization. So long as the Pacific ocean shall flow these two countries will be friends."

Higgins Declined Baker's Request.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 3.—Governor Higgins declined to call an extraordinary session of the supreme court, requested by District Attorney William B. Baker, for the purpose of trying Henry Manzer, who is said to have confessed the murder of Cora Sweet, a twelve-year-old girl, at Scriba, Oswego county, last Sunday.

The Inhabitants of the Township of Fanwood by their Township Committee, do enact as follows:

Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person, persons or corporation within the Township of Fanwood, to have, make or conduct any travelling or other shows, merry-go-rounds, circuses, theatrical performances, plays, exhibitions, concerts or skating-rinks within the said Township without first obtaining a license therefor from the Township Committee of the Township of Fanwood.

A Wonderful Saving.

The largest Methodist church in Georgia, used 32 gallons of L. & M. mixed with 24 gallons of oil, thus making paint cost about $1.20 per gallon. They calculated to use 100 gallons of other paint. Saved about $80.00, and also got a big donation of L. & M. Dealers gladly sell L. & M., because their customers call for it, and say they used it 12, 14 and even 30 years ago.

Don't pay $1.50 a gallon for linseed oil, which you do in ready-for-use paint.

Buy oil fresh from the barrel at 60 cents per gallon, and mix it with L. & M. Paint.

It makes paint cost about $1.20 per gallon. Sold by

SHIRT WAIST SUITS.

A Large Assortment of Materials For These Useful Costumes.

Almost every thin material is used for shirt waist suits except foulard, which is very much out of the running. Voile and mohair are favorite materials and pongees both in natural and dyed colorings. In mohairs the prettiest pastel checks are seen that have no end of wear to them. Chiffon taffetas in tiny broken checks and hair lines are also good. All these fabrics make up into most satisfactory summer traveling dresses.

Silk shirt waist suits have changed a great deal since last year, and a number of them have the chemisette in one form or another introduced on the waist. Little round or square necks are much liked, and on surpliced waists the V shaped chemisette is seen.

An attractive way of making a shirt waist suit is with several circular flounces from the knees down. The gored upper skirt has tucks run up and down, panel fashion, on each side of the front and back widths. The waist worn with this skirt is tucked back and front in panel effect. The shoulders are plain, and stitched bands of the material in a broken line define the yoke and tiny square neck. The yoke and cuffs may be separate or attached.

The graduation dress of white organdie herewith illustrated has a skirt with a deep hem, above which are a row of tucks, a wide band of Irish lace headed top and bottom with valenciennes lace and another row of tucks. The full bodice has this lace trimming put on as a collar about the shoulders and crossed, surplice fashion, in front. The gown is worn over a slip of banana yellow silk.

LINGERIE ITEMS.

Hints For the Fashioner of Dainty Handmade Underwear.

A very attractive corset cover is made from a wide, swiss embroidered piece of ruffling a yard and a half long. More fullness is allowed for the fronts, and at the sides the plain part of the ruffle is slightly curved to fit well over the hips. A ribbon is run at the top of the ruffle drawn up and tied in a pretty bow in front. Ribbon straps keep the cover in position and tie in a bow on the shoulders. Wide beading run with ribbon may finish the cover at the waist, or the gathers are put into a fitted basque of muslin.

In some of the smart lingerie shops in Paris colored batiste is used for underwear. Pale flesh colored batiste in beautifully hand sewed gowns and chemises are among the prettiest of the foreign bridal sets.

Beautiful all over embroidery, with insets of lace, is one of the exquisite new trimmings of the summer. All lace and embroidery costumes are the smartest of the season. Often hats, gowns and parasols are all made of the lace or English eyelet embroidery.

The camisole or corset cover in the cut is made of fine long cloth. Cluny insertion in a waved pattern trims the fronts. The round neck is drawn up with two rows of beading run with wash ribbon and edged with a lace ruffle. Beading also adorns the center plait on each side, outlines the tiny basque and draws in the waist fullness.

FRIEND OF STANLEY SPENDS 14 MONTHS IN AFRICA.

TAKES TRIP FOR RESEARCH

Mrs. French Sheldon Tells of Her Remarkable Expedition in the Congo Free State—Customs of the People.

London.—Mrs. French Sheldon, who is now in London, has just told something about the adventures that befell her on the remarkable expedition in the Congo Free State, from which she has just returned.

The motive that took this intrepid American woman explorer off to the dark continent for the second time was entirely different from those which have inspired most of her other expeditions. The three exciting trips around the world made by Mrs. Sheldon, like the famous journey through savage east Africa that earned her the friendship of Henry M. Stanley and Paul Du Chaillu, not to mention a fellowship in the Royal Geographical society, were undertaken partly through a love of research. But the painstaking journey Mrs. Sheldon made through the Congo Free State at her own expense to see for herself whether things there were as black as they were painted was quite another affair.

At first she simply thought she'd like to go to the Congo to catch butterflies. The Free State is a famous place for butterflies, and Mrs. Sheldon, besides being explorer, physician, novelist, sculptor, playwright and a few other things, is an ardent entomologist. But once started thinking about the Free State, it struck this venturesome American that she would like to know, if only for her own satisfaction, whether all the stories of atrocities practiced on the natives there—of some being flogged to death and the hands of others cut off because they didn't bring in rubber enough—were true, and if so whether these things really were done, as has been asserted so often, at the command of Belgian administrators.

Mrs. Sheldon has exposed her life so many times in different parts of the globe that she has got used to being surrounded by dangers, and it proved rather difficult to make her dwell on the perils of one kind and another that accompanied almost every step of her journey through the Congo State, expedition through East Africa, however, it was probably the most hazardous as well as about the most difficult journey ever attempted by a woman.

Begun in October, 1903, Mrs. Sheldon's investigating expedition did not come to an end until the last days of last December, and it wouldn't have been finished then had not the explorer met rapids in Congoland, the consequences of which forced her to return to England. There was, however, hardly a corner of the Free State which she had left unvisited.

Whenever possible she traveled by the state steamers, which go up the Congo once in two or three weeks. One of the privileges granted her by King Leopold was the right of having these steamers stopped at any port for two hours; but, of course, her visits to the interior of the country had to be made on foot. In this way she covered hundreds of miles, and it speaks well for her constitution that she never lost a single day and was never attacked by fever or any other of the ills that ordinarily beset travelers in Africa.

A lot of her traveling had to be done through swampy districts, and for days together she and her native carriers marched through water that was often waist deep. While on her march Mrs. Sheldon was clad in white duck, and she says that except at such times as she was wading through the swamps she kept herself as immaculate as Capt. Kettle himself. Her caravan usually numbered about 100, including four or five native soldiers, and with the exception of their leaders every member of the expedition was a cannibal. Whenever she was in the neighborhood of a government post Mrs. Sheldon, of course, accepted the administrator's hospitality, but when in the wilds she slept in her tent with only two of the native soldiers keeping guard. Mrs. Sheldon was armed with a Lee-Enfield rifle and an American revolver, with both of which she is a dead shot.

She had the liveliest kind of a fight with a wild cat, or leopard cat, as it was called in the Congo. The explorer was sitting near a window in a village dwelling, when the cat jumped down upon her from the branches of a tree outside, alighting on her shoulders and entangling its fore paws in her hair. No one was near and Mrs. Sheldon was badly scratched before she succeeded in shooting the animal with her revolver.

In spite of the fact that she penetrated into the most savage parts of the Congo district, especially those on the old caravan routes, where the blacks have been made degenerate and brutish by the drink supplied to them by traders, she never was molested. She seems to have made a really extraordinary impression on the natives, the more so as there are practically no white women in the Congo and the blacks regard their own women merely as chattels. Mrs. Sheldon, however, they dubbed "Bibi Baana Penba," which means "white woman master," and in some districts she was given the title "Bibi Bula Matari," which the natives apply to all officials of state and which means "rock breaker." It was first given to Henry M. Stanley, who blasted his way through part of the Congo Free State.

Mrs. Sheldon learned more about the Congo women than probably any explorer ever did before. "I found out lots about them," said Mrs. Sheldon, "by getting them to help me catch butterflies. After all, I did quite a lot of butterfly-hunting and have brought back some beautiful specimens. The women took a delight in helping me and had no idea how closely I was studying them all the time."

What impressed her most about these women was the fact that, in spite of the contempt with which they are looked upon by their "men folks," they are physically rather more than their equals. They act as carriers, side by side with their husbands, and work for the state in making roads and on the coffee and cocoa plantations and in potteries. Only when sickness comes along do they prove less robust than the men, and Mrs. Sheldon thinks that this is because none of them is allowed any meat, the men keeping it all for their own use.

The chief object in life is to contribute to the comfort of their lords and master. Mrs. Sheldon says that often while on the march her women carriers, even though burdened by heavy loads, made a point of keeping well ahead of the main body, so as to arrive beforehand at the stopping place to find water, get fires burning and have food prepared before the men arrived.

"The women of many tribes," said Mrs. Sheldon, "are keen votaries of fashion and show an elegance in the manner in which they wear their clothes and in arranging their hair that a civilized woman might envy. They are martyrs to many tribal customs, one of them the wearing of enormous brass collars weighing from ten to twelve pounds. Around their ankles, too, they have from two to four equally heavy and cumbersome brass or iron rings.

"And not only are they so fastidious as to their own personal decorations, but they bestow constant care on the decoration and valeting of their husbands, and among some of the tribes the men's coiffures are as elaborate as the women's."

Incidentally Mrs. Sheldon mentioned the simplicity of divorce proceedings among the Congo natives. The Belgian administrators insist on their being legally married, and a certificate is given in every case. But when a man and wife decide to separate they just tear up the certificate and that constitutes the divorce.

STROLL IN RAIN IS LATEST CAPITAL FAD.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and Companion Walk Washington Streets Oblivious to Downpour.

Washington.—Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, of New York, who gave a party a few years ago at which all the guests were required to appear dressed to imitate some animal, has given Washington something more to talk about. Apparently Mrs. Fish has given it out that it is bad form to allow a storm to break up one's plan to take a walk.

The other day, while it was raining pitchforks and hammer handles, Mrs. Fish and a companion sauntered down Connecticut avenue, one arrayed in a rose-colored reception gown and the other in a tailor-made suit. Neither had an umbrella or other protection. Nor apparently gave they a thought to the fact that to ordinary mortals a severe storm prevailed. They loitered along Connecticut avenue from Dupont circle, the center of the fine residence district, down to the shopping quarter, stopping to look into every shop window.

When they reached a Turkish bath room they appeared to believe they were wet enough and disappeared therein. The feat is too much for the comprehension of Washington. Capitoline society has not been able to figure out whether it is bad form to permit a rainstorm to break up a walk or whether it was simply a case of being caught in the rain and coming to the conclusion that a little more water would not make the dresses any greater wrecks.

DAYS OF THE GIANTS GONE

Skeletons of Ancient Times Which Showed Men Were of Enormous Stature.

The past was more prolific in the production of giants than the present. In 1830 one of these giants, who was exhibited at Rouen, was ten feet high and the giant Galabra, brought from Arabia to Rome in the time of Claudius Caesar, was of the same height. Fannum, who lived in the time of Eugene II., was 11½ feet in height.

The Chevalier Scrog in his journey to the Peak Teneriffe found in one of the caverns of that mountain the head of a giant who had 60 teeth and who was not less than 15 feet high. The giant Faragus, slain by Orlando, the nephew of Charlemagne, according to reports, was 28 feet high. In 1814 near St. Gernad was found the tomb of the giant Isolent, who was not less than 30 feet high. In 1590 near Rouen was found a skeleton whose head held a bushel of corn and which was 19 feet in height. The giant Bacrt was 22 feet high.

In 1623 near the castle in Dauphine a tomb was found 30 feet long, 16 feet wide and eight feet high, on which were cut in gray stone the words "Kentolochus Rex." The skeleton was found entire and measured 25¼ feet high, ten feet across the shoulders and five feet from breastbone to the back.

But France is not the only country where giant skeletons have been unearthed. Near Palermo, Sicily, in 1516, was found the skeleton of a giant 30 feet high, and in 1559 another 44 feet high. Near Magrino, on the same island, in 1816, was found the skeleton of a giant of 30 feet, whose head was the size of a hogshead and each tooth weighed five ounces.

A Vengeful Lover.

Friend—Well, your old love has married your rival, I see.

Discarded Suitor (fiendishly)—S'death! I've got even with him! They will quarrel the first week, fight the second, and separate forever in the third.

Friend—Great snakes! What have you done?

Discarded Suitor—I presented the bride with one of those little fluffy, red-eyed, snarling, barking pet dogs.—N. Y. Weekly.

His Reasons.

"No, I haven't got along very well in life," says our friend, the dentist. "You see, I have seven children, and the expense of raising them is something great. Then, business hasn't increased as I expected it would."

"Too many mouths to fill," we commiserate.

"Yes; and not enough teeth to fill," he adds.—Judge.

In Wall Street.

Broker—We see some very strange cases in "the street." That seedy-looking old chap over there used to be worth a million dollars.

Friend—Gad! And now he is "busted," I suppose?

Broker—Oh, no. Now he is worth two million dollars. It wouldn't be a strange case at all if he was "busted."—Judge.

The Wretch.

The Mother—So you and Jack have quarreled, have you?

Young Bride—Yes, m-mamma, and he c-called me harn n-names!

The Mother (trying to soothe her)—Never mind, dear. He didn't mean it.

Young Bride—Y-yes, he did! He s-said I was a reg-regular icicle!—Chicago Tribune.

In Harmony.

"Yes, sir," says the ice-dealer; "the price of ice will be much higher next summer. You see, there has been a poor ice-crop this winter."

"But you deal in artificial ice," argues the patron.

"Certainly. Necessarily, I have to put up an artificial excuse."—Judge.

SPOOKS OUST A KENTUCKY FAMILY

A MENIFEE COUNTY DOCTOR MOVES BECAUSE OF GHOSTS.

AGONY OF SITUATION AWFUL

After Terrible Experience in Home Which the Neighbors Said Was Haunted Physician Gives Up and Vacates Premises.

Louisville, Ky.—One of the most puzzling enigmas that students of psychic phenomena have tried to unravel today is puzzling scholar and neophyte in the lore of mysticism. Not only has this marvel amazed those who delight in revealing the fact that many "miracles" are due only to some person's wonderful imagination or morbid thoughts, but it has also driven from a home of luxury a family that found itself unable to solve the personality, or, rather, the nonpersonality, of a ghostly visitant.

Dr. Joseph King moved with his family into a beautiful country residence near Rothwell, Menifee county, Kentucky. Gossip of the wives of the countryside had never connected with the mansion, practically rebuilt by the physician, even the slightest tinge of mystery. Superstitious babblers had never hinted of the customary accompaniment of nocturnal ramblers from the nether world—the sound of clanking chains and occasional flashes of light that came from a portion of the house known to be unoccupied.

But the quiet life of the happy family soon was changed. Three days after the house was occupied Dr. King was awakened by a cold, clammy object placed upon his face. What it was he could not tell, and a careful search of the house by himself and the rest of the family failed to reveal traces of anything unusual. Dr. King describes the sensation of his first awakening thus:

"Like the touch of a lifeless hand!"

Thereafter he was often roused from sound slumber by the feeling that there was resting on his face the hand of a corpse.

That was only the beginning of the ghostly visitations, and almost nightly occurrences of the same sort finally drove the family out.

CAREFUL SEARCH FAILED TO REVEAL ANYTHING UNUSUAL.

The members of the household were frightened by noises such as could be made by planks sliding along the floor and then dropping with a sudden crash. Sitting at the fireside the children would be frightened almost into convulsions by the crash of a heavy object falling upon the floor behind their backs.

A section of the roof would seem to fall off in the night and gates and doors would slam, but no one was ever seen. Song and conversation were heard in the wee hours of the morning, but no traces could be found of the owners of the ghostly voices. Evidently the ghosts were of a modern make, for in the songs snatches of ragtime mingled with selections from classic operas.

Ghostly footsteps were heard to cross the floor at all hours of the day, while mysterious gavels seemed to be rapping upon the table for order as the family sat down at their meals. Canes were pounded upon the floor in the presence of the King family, but no one could be seen. For a year this went on, until the health of Mrs. King was so affected that her husband feared further residence in the house would cost her life. Then the decision to move was made.

It was rumored that the former owner of the house had been a believer in spiritualism. When approached by Dr. King she admitted that spirits had been called back to the house by her. She declared that she had summoned the spirit of her dead husband, as well as that of a murderer hanged many years before in Menifee county, and expressed the belief that these uncanny visitants were causing all the trouble.

Many residents of the county have heard the noises and corroborated the stories told by Dr. King. Many have even assisted in the hunt for the ghosts, but in vain.

Weds Woman He Robbed.

Ames, Ia.—Fred Alyn, of Denver, Col., was arrested here the other day on the charge of stealing diamonds valued at $1,500 from a woman by the name of Ray Charlton, also of Denver. On being searched the jewels were found sewed up in the waistband of his trousers. The woman has been in the city several days waiting for the arrival of the suspect, as she had learned that he was expecting mail at the post office. Upon the return of her jewelry she withdrew the charges against him on condition that he would marry her, which he agreed to. They are both theatrical people.

CHILDRENS HOME OPEN.

Handsome House Inspected at Public Reception.

The opening of the new Children's Home Thursday afternoon was attended by a throng of people. Every part of the handsome structure was pointed out and closely observed and the universal comment was that the appointments had been planned with great care.

The gift of $10,000 from the family of the late James Clark made the erection of the building possible and it is now thought it will serve the needs of the institution for years to come.

Among the members of the board who assisted at the reception were Mrs. Horace Kimball, its president; Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. George H. Babcock, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Mrs. Ruth Leonard, Mrs. W. W. Dunn, Mrs. Frank Rowley, Mrs. J. B. Yerkes, Mrs. J. C. Peck, Mrs. George D. Hallock, Miss Ella Serrell and Miss Everitt.

LITERARY.

Mayor Dunne, of Chicago, General O. O Howard, Charles Warren Stoddard and Dallas Lore Sharp head the list of contributors to the June National Magazine. Mayor Dunne's theme is "Chicago and Municipal Ownership," and he declares there are ninety millions of water in the stocks of the Chicago street railways that will never be paid for by the city. General Howard's paper, illustrated, deals with the Lincoln Memorial University in the Tennessee Mountains. Mr. Stoddard, in "Rudyard Kipling at Naulakha," quotes many of Kipling's letters—vividly personal and picturesque—to illustrate Kipling's methods of literary work.

HANDSOME EDIFICE FOR WARREN CHAPEL'S FLOURISHING CONGREGATION

WARREN CHAPEL.

(Courtesy Crescent Avenue Church Messenger.)

The new Warren chapel, for which ground is soon to be broken at Watchung and Fairview avenues, will be the handsomest structures of its kind in the city. It is to be of rough faced stone and is to cost $30,000 which does not include the purchase price of the lot, $2,800, already paid for.

Of the total expense, twenty-six persons have already subscribed $13,653, and a contract has been signed to sell the present chapel for $2,000, leaving $17,147 still to be raised

The plans for the structure, which have been drawn by Architect A. L. C. Marsh, call for a building having two large rooms, one for church services and the other for Sunday-school. The appointments will be in keeping with the architectural appearance and the congregation will have a home of which they might well be proud.

The designs here shown are kindly loaned by the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Messenger, of which W. D. Murray is the editor-in-chief.

FRIENDS PRESENT A PURSE OF $200

TOKEN OF ESTEEM FOR DR. AND MRS. LEWIS AT GOLDEN WEDDING.

The reception given by Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Lewis, of West Seventh street, yeterday afternoon, to their old parishoners, was largely attended. Owing to Mrs. Lewis' condition she could not participate, but Dr. Lewis and his daughters received. The home was decorated with roses and daisies.

A feature of the golden wedding celebration was the presentation to Dr. and Mrs. Lewis of a gold purse of $200 as a mark of esteem and appreciation. Dr. Lewis made a happy recognition of the gift in a few remarks at church on Sabbath morning.

Today Dr. Lewis and his entire family leave for Watch Hill R. I., where they will spend the summer at their cottage.

PASTOR WILL STAY.

Dr. Jackson Learns How Highly His Congregation Regards Him.

Rev Dr. E .E. Jackson, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, colored, will not accept the call. extended to him two weeks ago, by his old cogregation of the Zion Waverly place Baptist church, New York. The warm expression of esteem that greeted him from the deacons, the Sunday-school, and other organizations of the church ast night, at his seventh anniversay service, decided him to stay with his present charge. He has been with Mt. Olive church longer than any preceding pastor.'

A ballot on the question of Dr. Jackson's departure was taken after Deacon Brown had read his colleagues' appreciation of the pastor, and the congregation, numbering nearly 500, were unanimous in voting that he stay.

Honor for Dr. Chambliss.

CIRCLED THROUGH AIR; LANDED ON HIS HEAD

BOY HURT IN ACCIDENT AND HORSE HAD TO BE SHOT.

A rubber-tired runabout, drawn by a thin, nervous-looking mare, came down East Front street, between Watchung avenue and Washington street, at a fast clip shortly before noon today. A young man on the seat was shaking the lines over her back in apparent excitement. Whether he was trying to slow the mare down or urging her on those who noticed him couldn't tell. Joseph Kingston's mason wagon stood in front of Bartle's stone yard, near Washington street. There was plenty of room for the runabout to get by the wagon, but the former struck the heavier rig with a crash that was heard all over the block.

Howard Sharp, the young man in the runabout, described a circle in the air and landed on his head in the roadway. The runabout turned over completely, and the mare was flung against a tree. She dropped back with a broken leg and an injured spine. Kingston's wagon was turned on its side.

Sharp was taken to the hospital in an unconscious state. They said at the institution that they couldn't tell how badly he was hurt. He is employed by Stonewall Jackson, a horse dealer, of Somerset street. He is twenty-two years old, unmarried and lives on Somerset street.

The mare lay in agony for a half hour until a veterinary had had a chance to see her. Then Chief Kiely had her shoot.

At the hospital this afternoon it was said that Sharp has concussion of the brain and his condition is serious.

FIND WIDOW OF MAN WHO SHOT A GIRL

MRS. FRANK HUBER WRITES FROM CINCINNATI.

A letter from Mrs. Frank Huber, widow of the man who shot Louise Kraemer and killed himself in Fanwood a week ago yesterday, was received by Chief Kiely this morning. Mrs. Huber lives in Cincinnati, and wants to know how she can obtain what valuables her husband left.

She said in the letter that she learned of her husband's death through an article in the Cincinnati Enquirer but Chief Kiely has learned that a man named Zimmerman, a friend of the family, wrote her of the tragedy from Newark. Huber, the letter says, deserted her and his four children four years ago in Cincinnati.

A Conductor's Stupidity

The engineer of the 6:59 east bound local makes it a practice to run his train so far ahead of the North avenue station that the engine is over the Watchung avenue bridge and as a result passengers lose their train frequently. This morning, his train pulled up past the station and two persons sitting on the benches to the west end of the station hurried to get aboard, but before they could do so, the conductor gave the signal to start. They called to the baggagemaster, but the latter declined to stop for them It turned out that the two patrons of the road lost connection with the Albany day boat as a result of the stupidity of conductor who permits the engineer to run past the station.

PARK AVE. PROPERTY BRINGS $375 A FOOT

Big Figure is paid for 80 Feet of Boice Runyon Business Tract.

TO SPECULATE.

J. G. MacLaughlin the Purchaser—Width of Street to be Sixty-five Feet.

John G. MacLaughlin, of the borough, has purchased for speculative purposes, a portion of the Boice, Runyon Company property on Park avenue, adjoining that of the property recently purchased by Charles W. McCutchen. The property has a frontage of 80 feet and a depth of 150 feet. According to the terms of the deal, Boice, Runyon & Company will remove their office to a point next to the railroad embankment. Between sixty and seventy feet will be cut off the lumber and coal sheds to give Mr. MacLaughlin's purchase the required depth. The consideration was about $30,000.

Between the property of the company and that purchased by Mr. MacLaughlin, there is reserved a space of twelve feet as a perpetual right-of-way. It is authoritatively stated that neither Mr. McCutchen nor The Plainfield Trust Company have anything to do with this deal.

According to the ordinance which provides for the widening of the avenue, between Second street and the railroad, the width is to be sixty-five feet and the sidewalk twelve feet.

It is understood that Mr. McCutchen intends to begin soon the erection of a modern building, stores and offices, on his property.

The Plainfield Trust Company expects to begin work on its building tomorrow morning, it being generally understood that the Common Council will adopt on third reading tonight the ordinance providing for the widening of the avenue and establishment of building lines.

HOLIDAYS GRANTED TO THE POLICEMEN

EACH COP TO GET TWO DAYS OFF IN A MONTH.

On recommendation of Chief Kiely, the police board has consented to allow the men on the force two days' vacation in each month. Owing to lack in the numerical strength of the department, the holiday play was abandoned two years ago much to the regret of the men, who felt that they should be allowed the same privileges as accorded the fire laddies.

Chief Kiely's recommedation was approved by Chairman Tyler and the memebers of the board and under the arrangements the chief will designate the days for time off. The scheme will not be put into operation, however, until after the regular summer vacation are ended. The first of these annual vacations will be begun in two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Runkle and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Runkle, gave a charming reception at their home in West Eighth street, Saturday night, which was attended by about 200 friends. The affair was of double significance, it being the twenty-fifth wedding anniversay of Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Runkle, and marking the home-coming of their son and his bride from their wedding trip.

One of the delightful features of the evening was the incidential vocal music, solo and quartette, by Miss Grace Carroll, contralto, of this city; Miss Chapman, soprano; John Young, tenor; Frederick Wheeler, bass, and Victor Harris, accompanist, all of New York.

Among the guests from out-of-town were Miss Randolph, of Morristown, and Robert Farlee, of New York.

N.J.'S G.A.R. ENCAMPMENT

Annual Session to be Held at Trenton Thursday and Friday.

LOCAL DELEGATES.

Winfield Scott Post to be Represented — Trenton Citizens Make Big Preparations.

Department Commander James M. Atwood, formerly of this city, has issued orders relative to the thirty-eighth annual encampment of the Department of New Jersey. G. A. R., to be held in Masonic Temple, Trenton, Thursday and Friday, June 22 and 23. Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of this city, will be represented by its past commanders and Andrew Cox and J. Worth Coddington.

The State Department headquarters will be established at the Trenton House.

The encampment will convene in Masonic Temple Hall at 10 o'clock, June 22. Post commanders will report promptly on their arrival to this committee and receive the number of encampment badges for their delegation.

A rate of two cents per mile from every point within the State has been established by the Traffic Association, and card orders for transportation at this rate may be obtained from the local ticket agent of each railroad.

Commanders are requested to notify headquarters at the earliest date of the probable strength of their posts in attendance at the encampment, and whenever practicable posts are requested to report as such, bringing with them their flags and banners. For this purpose a committee, composed of some of the leading citizens of Trenton in every business and profession, has been organized and are preparing a splendid greeting and entertainment for the expected comrades and the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary Association.

The city will be artistically decorated and brilliantly illuminated at night, facilities for sight-seeing will be provided by means of automobiles and carriages, an entertainment of high-class vaudeville will be tendered in the Taylor Opera House the evening of the first day, and his excellency, Governor Stokes, his honor, Mayor Katzenbach, and Past Commander-in-Chief Thomas J. Stewart, of Pennsylvania, have promised to deliver addresses on that occasion.

Beautiful souvenirs, the products of Trenton's pottery industry, will be distributed to the members of the encampment and the delegates to the convention of the Woman's Relief Corps and the women of the Grand Army of the Republic, and many other evidences of the hospitality and patriotism of the citizens will be made manifest.

PARK CLUB PROGRAMME FOR INDEPENDENCE DAY

FIREWORKS AND A DANCE TO BE THE ATTRACTIONS.

In accordance with the custom of previous years the members of the Park Club are preparing for a glorious celebration of Independence Day. The affair will be under the direction of the entertainment committee. It is proposed to give a fine display of fireworks, to be followed by dancing in the clubhouse. Owing to the limited space avilable, the committee has decided that it is necessary to restrict the attendance to the members, their families, associate and junior members, their out-of-town guests, all of whom will be expected without further invitation.

The plans as now arranged are to have the fireworks begin about 8 o'clock and last one hour. During the next hour there will be general sociabilities and the dancing will begin at 10 o'clock and last until the small hours of the morning. There will be music during the entire evening. The patronesses for the affair include Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. George D. Hallock, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. Augustus W. Kleinecke, Mrs .Townsend Rushmore and Miss Munger.

It is also expected that there will be tennis play on the club courts during the day and a tournament will undoubtedly be arranged by those interested in the game.

Princeton Students to Build Theatre.

The Tziangle Club, Princeton's dramatic organization, has just closed a successful season. Nearly $3,000 will remain after all expenses have been met. This will start a fund to build a suitable theatre in Princeton. The club produced "The Pretenders" this season.

CRUELTY TO NEWBURGH

Plainfield Adds a 6-4 Game to its Season's Clean Slate.

BECK AN ARTIST.

Not Until the Fifth Did the "All-Nationals" Visit the Home Plate—Conroy Contributes a Three Bagger—Ancient History.

Some of Bill Beck's nerve went on exhibition Saturday afternoon. Bill pulled himself out of some tight places with a comparatively whole skin. The nine lithe and graceful gentlemen known as the Newburghs, alias All-Nationals, didn't take as much comfort out of the exhibition as the breathless multitude. It kept them two runs from glory, 6 to 4.

As our noble band was four runs to the good and Newburgh didn't have anything in that direction when the fifth round opened, Bill wasn't prepared for any sassiness from the honored guests. Conroy took a mean advantage of Bill's lull and pasted the toy for a three-sack trip. Bill's chagrin can be imagined. He got on his job immediately and Gorman, colliding with the Beck coolness, fanned dismally. Cheers from the populace, and hope rampant. Hope got a belt that nearly laid it flat when Rube Oldring went after Steinman's turf-ripper. Rube got so much mixed with the ball that Conroy was swinging on the front gate and Steinman rested on a cushion before he untangled himself. Bill was pained at Rube, but he didn't reproach him. He just took the burden all on himself and fanned the next two men. Bill is O. K.

Our heroes made six grievous slips, and the other parties to the competition went one better. Bill made three himself, and helped considerable in putting Newburghers where they could do damage to our eclat.

After Lamar made an easy out in the third, Bill slashed a screamer into left for one sack. Cosgrave shoved one at Conroy, and Con flung it away without any regard to the location of first base. Cossy went on after Driscoll, who was sprinting for Beck, and both of them came in on Wolf's untamed chuck to third in an effort to choke Dave at the bag. Oldring and Connolly died easy.

Next round, Pete Cregan did the airy and graceful, but Kiernan dented center for a sack, stole second and went on to third by virtue of Wolf's high fling to second. Leonard fouled out. Driscoll plumped one to the good in right, and Kiernan reported at headquarters. Klett didn't grab Dave's contribution with proper emphasis and Dave travelled to third before the globule was retrieved. While Barberick was gracefully twisting his arm about for a fancy fling Dave snooped up three-fourths of the way toward home and came down under full steam before the leather thing was turned loose. Wolf had to dig the ball out of the dirt and never even tried to head Dave off. Popular hysteria compelled Dave to pull his forelock. Pete Lamar expired without agony, Conroy to Donahue.

Next try the other bunch got busy, as hereinbefore touched upon. In our half of the furious struggle Beck succumbed, third to first; Cosgrave got a pass, stole second, likewise third; Oldring did nothing but wave his hat, but Connolly singled to right, and Cossy loped in. Cregan halted festivities with a tender little bump to Barberick.

In the seventh our heroes faced a blow-up, but escaped by virtue of Bill's sang froid and some amendatory hustling. Conroy, first up, popped to Mike Leonard. Then Bill got jarred cruel. Gorman banged into right field for a sack, and Steinman followed with a bump into center, sending Gorman to second. Bill became over-zealous and monkeyed with a ball he had no business to touch, and McGrath landed safe on his mishandle. Bases full and one out; outlook dull and gloomy. Things brightened when Bill whiffed Hoag, but they slumped again on Barberick's rap into the diamond. Bill thought he could handle that and made the same mistake as before. Gorman came in and the sacks still groaned beneath a full complement of unworthy Newburghers. Here's where Bill's frigid foxiness shows. Keeping his eye fixed firmly on all the bases at once he made energetic and bewildering motions with his salary arm at all of them. Steinman succumbed to the hypnotic effect of the agitated arm and fell into a trance two feet off third. What happened to him was plenty, and removed the haunting fear of the scorer from the mind of the breathless populace.

Newburgh scored twice in the next inning, but it wasn't such a threatening display. Cox, next in to take Klett's place in the sixth, singled to left. Wolf bunted out a

LITERARY.

A tale told of a Kansas minister, a great precisionist in the use of words, whose exactness sometimes destroyed the force of what he was saying. On one occasion, in the course of an eloquent prayer, he pleaded:

"Oh Lord! waken Thy cause in the hearts of this congregation and give them new eyes to see and new impulse to do. Send down Thy lev-er or lee-ver, according to Webster's or Worcester's dictionary, whichever Thou usest, and pry them into activity."—"Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree," Everybody's Magazine for June.

Germany's Artists.

The musically inclined portion of our populace are no doubt anxiously awaiting the engagement of the famous German Marine Band and Herr Louis Kindermann, its masterly director, which is announced for Thursday night at the Casino. Among the various bands now touring this country, there is perhaps none that can boast of as extensive a repertoire of selections, and which includes grand and comic operatic, also classic and popular music, all of which is played with equal perfection. This is the same grand organization that created the musical furore of the St. Louis Fair, and is composed of fifty artist musicians and celebrated soloists, representing Germany's best and most skillful musical academy graduates. The organization is now on a triumphant transcontinental tour, which is limited and calls for concerts at the principal cities and musical centers only, prior to their return to Berlin next November.

ENQUIST ESCAPED

Russian Admiral, With Three Swift Cruisers, at Manila.

OLEG, JEMTCHUG AND AURORA SAFE

Roosevelt's Plea For Peace Discussed at St. Petersburg—Result Hangs on Czar's Decision—Warships Unable to Proceed.

LONDON, June 5.—A Manila dispatch says that Rear Admiral Enquist, on his flagship the Aurora, together with the cruisers Oleg and Jemtchug, which were supposed to have been lost in the great battle with Admiral Togo, have arrived safely at Manila.

Special dispatches from St. Petersburg say that President Roosevelt's tender of his good offices to bring about peace is received with general favor in the press and by the public there, and a desire that some steps should be taken toward securing an honorable peace is increasingly manifest.

The Russ declares that the president's offer should be commended as an act of friendship tending to bring out Japan's terms of peace and Russia's acceptance of an offer which would not mean surrender on humiliating terms. The paper maintains at the same time that negotiations, if begun, must be direct and that there must be no intervention by other powers.

The Bourse Gazette says that Russia must make the best possible use of the friendly offices of the United States and Great Britain.

President Roosevelt's plea for peace is under discussion in St. Petersburg. It has the moral support of all the great powers, including France, and of all the czar's ministers except two. The emperor has not yet decided what course to adopt.

One of the emperor's most influential ministers declared emphatically that the emperor had not yet changed his position with regard to the prosecution of the war on account of the destruction of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet.

"Everything depends on the will of my imperial master," the minister said.

Rear Admiral Train, on board his flagship, the battleship Ohio, with the battleships Wisconsin and Oregon and the cruisers Raleigh and Cincinnati, was outside Manila, near Corregidor island, maneuvering when the Aurora saluted with thirteen guns, and the Ohio answered.

Admiral Train and his squadron accompanied the Russian vessels to Manila.

Rear Admirals Train and Enquist conferred in reference to the Russian warships of his squadron. According to an unofficial report, Rear Admiral Enquist asked for fourteen days' time in which to repair, coal and provision his vessels. It is said further that he alleges that the ships are unseaworthy and are damaged below the water line. Rear Admiral Train will probably appoint a board to investigate the condition of the Russian vessels. Both he and Rear Admiral Enquist are working in harmony.

Thirty-four seriously wounded Russian sailors were placed in the Naval hospital at Cavite. Rear Admiral Enquist left the scene of the fighting before the battle was finished, and he did not learn the final details until he reached Manila.

A Shanghai report says that the British steamer Buling has arrived there towing in a Russian destroyer which was found helpless north of Shawaihan with three crews aboard. She had been drifting for six days with 180 men on board and water sufficient for only one day left and with very little food. The vessel is damaged forward. Her crew has already been transferred to the Russian transport interned at Woosung.

At Sasebo Vice Admiral Togo visited Vice Admiral Rojestvensky at the naval hospital and expressed his sympathy for the admiral's wounds. He praised the desperately courageous fight of the Russians and expressed his hope that Vice Admiral Rojestvensky would soon be able to return to Russia. Rojestvensky was deeply moved by the admiral's words and thanked him. He congratulated Japan on the courage and patriotism of her sailors and said it lessened his regret and the sorrow of defeat to know the high character of the victors.

At St. Petersburg it is reported that all noncombatants have been ordered to leave Vladivostok.

A Nagasaki report says on good authority that all the Russian naval prisoners in Japan will be sent home.

A Sunday Talk of Peace.

WASHINGTON, June 5. — Baron Speck von Sternburg, the German ambassador, spent two hours in conference with President Roosevelt at the White House last night. As he left the White House at 11 o'clock the ambassador said he could not discuss the subject of his talk with the president, as it related to matters of entirely confidential character. There is every reason to believe, however, that much of the time was occupied with a discussion of the general question of the war between Russia and Japan and the possibility of peace. The ambassador in response to a direct question regarding the prospect of peace said that so far as he knew there had been no progress in that direction in the past twenty-four hours.

CECILIA AT BERLIN

Crown Prince's Intended Consort Enters German Capital.

MANY ANCIENT CUSTOMS OBSERVED

Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin In Unique Procession Is Acclaimed by Her Future Subjects as Young Kaiser's Fiancee.

BERLIN, June 5.—The Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin on making her public entry into the German capital received a welcome such as has seldom been given to any princess. Hundreds of thousands of her future subjects saw her for the first time, and they received her according to a carefully wrought out programme.

It is the sincere belief that she is not only the betrothed wife of the crown prince, but his sweetheart. As the chief burgomaster said in welcoming her, the people of the city hoped her life would be rose strewn as was the pavement over which she drove. The crown prince, who, following tradition, led his company of foot guards over the route of the procession an hour before the duchess entered the city, was also splendidly received. He acknowledged the cheering by saluting with his sword at every second step.

Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, who is also princess of the Wends, arrived with her mother, the Grand Duchess Anastasia; her brother, Frederick Frances, the reigning grand duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, his wife and a numerous following. The empress and crown prince, the latter's five brothers and the little Princess Victoria met the party at the railroad station and breakfasted with them in the Chateau Bellevue, where the Duchess Cecilia rested with the empress before entering the city.

In the procession forty mounted postmen, in accord with old custom, rode in advance, followed by 100 mounted master butchers in evening suits and opera hats. Most of them were men of ample figure. The master butchers hold a patent from 1666 guaranteeing them this privilege.

Twenty mounted trumpeters, preceded by a squadron of the First dragoons of the guard, in light blue tunics and wearing black helmets, and three six horse court equipages followed. These vehicles were driven by postilions and were occupied by the gentlemen in waiting of the empress and the future crown princess. They were separated by half a squadron of the garde du corps from an eight horse state carriage containing the Duchess Cecilia, sitting on the right of the empress. The duchess' mistress of the robes, the Baroness von Tiele-Winckler, was seated opposite them.

The young duchess wore an evening dress of pink silk muslin cut decollete and trimmed with lace. The skirt, which was embroidered with loose roses, had a deep flounce of point d'angleterre lace. The duchess' shoulders were bare and she wore a tiara of diamonds.

The richly gilded carriage in which the duchess sat composed, although flushed with the emotions of the hour, was an odd looking piece of workmanship new in the year 1793, when the future Queen Louise of Prussia, then a girl of seventeen, made her state entry into the city through the same gate.

In advance of the equipage walked two tall grooms in blue and gold, and beside each of the eight black horses was a groom in scarlet and gold livery. The harness was of silver and fastened to the horses' heads were plumes of black and white ostrich feathers. At the city gate the chief burgomaster of Berlin, wearing the heavy gold chain insignia of his office, stepped forward and read a brief address of welcome. The duchess thanked the burgomaster in a few simple words and the procession began to move again, the artillery at the other end of Unter den Linden firing twenty-four guns.

The American ambassador, Mr. Tower, and Mrs. Tower and the British ambassador, Sir Frank C. Lascelles, were in the party. Large parties of Americans were in the offices of Dr. George O. Webster and Dr. George Watson, on either side of the Brandenburger gate, while the American embassy staff was at the embassy offices on Unter den Linden.

All the visiting princes and princesses dined with Emperor William and Empress Augusta Victoria last night in honor of the Duchess Cecilia and the Crown Prince Frederick William, who are to be married tomorrow.

Five hundred persons were either overcome by the heat or injured in the crowds which came to view the entrance of the Duchess Cecilia into Berlin. Thirty-six of them are in a serious condition.

Search For Sheriff Post Vain.

CATSKILL, N. Y., June 5. — The searching parties which have been scouring the woods in quest of Charles A. Post, sheriff of Greene county, who has been missing since June 1, have returned, having found no trace of him. Sheriff Post did not have a large amount of money on his person, and no one believes he has met with foul play.

Gibbons Against New Woman.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Cardinal Gibbons has thrown down the gauntlet to the woman suffragists in an address before the graduates of Trinity college, an institution here for the higher education of women. He said, "A woman should be satisfied with her feminine privileges and not demand the rights of men."

BOSTON, June 5.—Boston and New York s[illegible]even in the games on the South E[illegible] grounds, Boston winning the first by 2 to 0, Young pitching against McGinnity. Wiltse and Elliott pitched for the visitors in the second game and Williams for Boston.

It was Young's eighth victory of the season in eleven games pitched. He has landed both of the victories Boston has gained over New York, and he is the first one to shut out the Giants this season, while in the last two games he has pitched against them they have scored just once. Young has landed eight of the fifteen victories gained by the locals and has undoubtedly saved them from dropping into the last position.

Only three hits were made off Young's delivery, and he fielded his position grandly and received a great ovation from the spectators, being applauded repeatedly for his effective work and superb fielding.

Three times in the game the visitors had a man on third, and once a try for the rubber was made, but in vain. McGinnity pitched a fine game, and the defeat of the champions cannot be laid at his door, but rather to his support.

The second game was a walkover for the visitors. Owing to the absence of Raymer out of the game on account of the critical illness of his wife Boston was without a spare outfielder, and it was necessary to put in Wilhelm, who held the first three balls sent to him, but fell down on the fourth, and this led to the scoring of three runs by the visitors in the third inning and gave them a lead which paved the way for an easy victory by a score of 8 to 3.

Pittsburg Won Both Games.

CHICAGO, June 5.—Chicago Nationals were outclassed in all departments and lost both games. The first game was a hard hitting contest, in which the visitors bunched hits, while Chicago's hits were made with two out or when the bases were unoccupied. Score, 8 to 2. Pittsburg won the second game by hitting Lundgren at will for the three innings he pitched. Schulte made a record by getting seven hits out of eight times up. Score, 5 to 4.

Yale's Day of Sorrow.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 5.—Yale's nine suffered humiliating defeat here at the hands of Princeton by the score of 18 to 2, and yet a host of Yale men and baseball enthusiasts insist that their judgment that Yale ought to win was well founded. A series of unfortunate circumstances followed each other and showed a sudden and complete reversal of Yale's form and poor judgment by the captain in handling not only himself, but his men.

Broke Even In Double Header.

ST. LOUIS, June 5.—St. Louis and Cincinnati Nationals broke even in a double header. Cincinnati won the first contest by batting McFarland freely. Score, 8 to 1. Thielman held Cincinnati at his mercy in the second game, allowing three scattered hits, and won his game in the fifth inning on a triple which scored Burke and tallied on Shannon's single. Score, 2 to 1.

Ward Golf Champion.

PATERSON, N. J., June 5.—John M. Ward, captain and champion of the Montclair Golf club, twice champion of Staten Island and at one time or another holder of other minor titles, added still another to his list by defeating W. M. Sinclair of the South Orange Field club 5 up and 3 to play in the final for the New Jersey state golf championship at the North Jersey links.

Rockaway Polo Players Won.

HEMPSTEAD, N. Y., June 5.—On the field at Meadow Brook the crack polo four of the Rockaway Hunt club lowered the colors of the quartet of the Country club of Westchester in the match for the Westbury Challenge cup by a score of 7 to 5¾ goals. The game was played without handicaps.

Spoke the Missing Apache.

LONDON, June 5. — The steamship Minnetonka reports that she spoke the American bark Apache, the belated contestant in the transatlantic race for the German emperor's cup, 250 miles west of the Lizard at 7 o'clock Sunday morning.

Chicago Met Defeat.

CHICAGO, June 5.—Cleveland Americans defeated Chicago 4 to 2 in a sixteen inning, hard fought game. Cleveland bunched hits in the last inning and won the game.

St. Louis Cinched the Game.

ST. LOUIS, June 5.—St. Louis Americans cinched the game with Detroit by scoring nine runs in the first three innings. Score, 9 to 0.

Three Accidental Deaths.

WASHINGTON, June 5. — Three deaths resulting from accident occurred here. Lawrence Owens and Jettie Carrington, both eleven-year-old white boys, were drowned in a pond near the filtration plant. They were paddling on a raft, fell overboard and were drowned before help could reach them. Alice Hurley, white, aged thirty-four, died from the effects of burns received in an explosion of a gasoline stove.

BY HIRED ASSASSINS

Conspiracy to Murder Charged Against Strike Leaders.

HOLDOM AND PARRY TO BE VICTIMS

Cornelius P. Shea Arrested For Statement That He Had Been Offered $10,000 as Bribe to Call a Strike Against Big Firm.

CHICAGO, June 5.—That murder of public officials and employers would be committed under the orders of certain labor leaders to accomplish their personal ends was the most startling development in connection with the present investigation of strike "graft."

Charges to this effect were made that Judge Jesse Holdom of the Cook county bench and D. M. Parry of Indianapolis, late president of the National Manufacturers' association, were to have been the victims selected to fall by the murderous hands of hired assassins.

Judge Holdom's firm ruling in defense of law and order during strikes and Mr. Parry's open defiance of unionism were given as the causes which made them the marked men for the revenge of certain labor champions.

Another development was a reported offer of the employers by John C. Driscoll, recently secretary of the Chicago Coal Team Owners' association, to furnish, for $10,000, sufficient evidence to send some of the leaders of the present strike to the penitentiary, thereby making it possible to settle the labor controversy.

This is believed to have been the scheme which was frustrated after the employers had laid a trap to catch the conspirators.

Cornelius P. Shea, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, was arrested on a charge of criminal libel preferred by Robert J. Thorne, general manager of Montgomery Ward & Co.

Shea was arrested on a capias issued by Judge S. H. Bethea of the United States district court following the filing of a suit by Thorne, who, in addition to making the charge of criminal libel, asks for damages to the amount of $25,000 from Shea. The suit is based on interviews given out by President Shea to the newspapers and on statements he is said to have made to the effect that he had been offered $10,000 by Mr. Thorne to call a strike against Sears, Roebuck & Co., which is a large house in the same line of business as Montgomery Ward & Co.

Mr. Thorne denies all of the alleged statements of President Shea.

"The employers have again blocked a settlement," said President Shea. "Their objection to the men wearing union buttons and a refusal to agree not to discriminate against the strikers is all that prevents the calling off of the strike."

Child Found In Mountains.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., June 5.—Cuddled beneath a huge rock in the mountains a mile from her home in Mount Tabor little Mabel Kirsheim was found almost exhausted by a girl who was gathering flowers. The child is two and a half years old. Mabel had been missing from home since Friday. Hundreds of residents of Mount Tabor searched the mountains with lanterns in an effort to find her, and the police of surrounding towns have been looking for her.

Alfonso In Paris.

PARIS, June 5.—The last day of King Alfonso's sojourn in Paris comprised an ample programme, including a service at the Spanish church, a visit to the Museum of the Louvre and the witnessing of the grand steeplechase at Auteuil, where 125,000 persons were present. The king left at midnight from the Invalides station on his journey to London. The track was guarded from end to end by armed troops. King Alfonso left $5,000 for the poor of Paris.

Governor Mason Buried at Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., June 5.—After reposing in a cemetery vault in New York city for many years the remains of Stevens Thompson Mason, first governor of the state of Michigan, called the boy governor, were interred with appropriate ceremonies in a stone lined grave in Capitol Square park in this city, where stood the state capitol when Governor Mason was the chief executive of Michigan.

University Oarsman Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, June 5.—Robert C. Crowell of Worcester, Mass., stroke of the University of Pennsylvania varsity crew, is dead in the University hospital of typhoid fever. He had been ill more than three weeks. Crowell was twenty-one years of age and was a senior at the university. He was stroke of the freshmen and sophomore crews and made the varsity crew in his junior year.

An Irish Exposition.

NEW YORK, June 5.—An Irish exposition is to be given at Madison Square Garden in September for the benefit of the great Hibernian institute building to be erected on Fifth avenue in this city. Industrial exhibits will be the chief feature of the exposition. Scores of wood workers, stone workers, weavers and other workmen will be brought from Ireland.

Ships Badly Mixed In Fog.

Plainfield, N. J., June 5, 1905.

For hot air consult Charley Denman.

Yes, Mary, the census man was horrid mean, but he knew you were past sixteen.

If "later advices" don't soon stop coming in, we will be convinced that Togo met the whole earth and smashed it to smithereens.

The West End Avenue Philosopher says that the Plainfield team will keep on winning until some team comes along and beats it.

Correspondent in an exchange complains against uncomfortable seats and shabby looking trolley cars. Bet he never rode in the smoking car of a Jersey Central local.

The prevention of "dull days" at the store is quite within the power of the merchant—but to recover from their effects is not so simple. You would have a dull day in your kitchen at home if there were not enough fuel to cook a meal with. Publicity is the motive power of stores.—Showalter.

The Daily Press calls the attention of its readers to a stirring story of life at an army post in the Philippines begun in this issue. It is from the pen of Brigadier General Charles King, the most brilliant writer of army stories in this country and is entitled "Found in the Philippines." The tale is told in eighteen chapters and is well illustrated. We are sure it will prove fascinating and fully up to the standard of the stories of fiction presented to our readers in the past.

That reliable exchange, the Westerly, R. I., Sun, of which George H. Utter, governor of Little Rhody, and a former Plainfielder is the publisher, has some sensible suggestions to make regarding graduation day exercises in public high schools. It says incidently: "A tendency to ape college commencement exercises, especially the social side, has been noticeable within recent years, with the result that the individual expenses of the last two weeks of the school course have been so increased that the parents have felt the burden. Many of them have privately expressed themselves in regard to the matter but hesitated to take a public position because a certain pride prevented them. The pupils should strive to make a graduation day one of pleasure to all their classmates, and any method that makes the day a burden to others should be done away with. The parents should exert their influence and not foster a spirit of excelling others. Simplicity of dress is easily attained and in a public school is most becoming."

TO UNVEIL MONUMENT.

Revolutionary Battle Ground to be Marked June 23,

Everything is now in readiness for the unveiling of the monument which is to be placed in front of the Presbyterian church in Springfield June 23, and the ceremony will be witnesed by representative men of the county, including many Plainfielders.

The monument is to be as high as that which is to be placed at Union square. It will surmount a rough brown granite block and the figure will represent a Continental soldier, while the Elizabeth stone will represent a minute man. In speaking of this fact with a newspaper representative, Commissioner Halsey stated that the Continental soldier was most appropriate for Springfield since it was the Continental soldier who fought the real battle at Union while the British were harassed and baited by the rough and ready farmer-boy minute men until the Americans had attained a good fighting ground. The skirmish took place at the cross-roads, and for that reason the statute of the farmer boy is to be placed at Elizabeth.

—A dog belonging to Charles Wyckoff, of upper Duer street, Friday bit two boys, William Rowe and Fank Gates, who were playing ball in the lot near Codington avenue and Somerset street. The wounds were cauterized by Dr. Carman and Chief Weiss is holding the canine at police headquarters while it is being watched for signs of rabies.

sacrifice. Donahue lifted one to Cosgrave that wasn't squeezed properly and went to second, Cox taking third. Conroy sent one to Beck, who whipped it back to the plate in time, but Pete Lamar couldn't hang on and Cox scored. Gorman smashed out a two-bagger, and Donahue tallied, but Steinman and McGrath popped up easy ones.

Oldring scored the sixth run for Plainfield in the eighth, on Donahue's error, Connolly's sacrifice and another error by Donahue. Cregan was nailed on Kiernan's infield tap, and Leonard made the third out with a bounder to short. The visitors retired tamely for good in the ninth one-two-three.

NEW JERSEY REVIVAL.

State on Threshold of Religious Wave.

That New Jersey is on the threshold of a great religious revival to be far reaching in its scope, a revival which will embrace the entire State and will be carried out in systematic and aggresive form under the Presbyterian General Assembly, assisted by the evangelistic committee of the New Jersey Synod, seems to be assured. The Synod's evangelistic committee will hold a special meeting in the Presbyterian building, 156 Fifth avenue, New York, Monday afternoon, June 12, for the purpose o fbeginning plans for the proposed campaign, and all Presbyterian ministers and elders in Jersey will be invited to attend.

According to present arrangements, the revival will be started about the middle of November and last a month or six weeks It is intended to hold meetings simultaneously in the large cities, conducted by the general assembly's special committee ,and from the cities to inaugurate metings in the neighboring towns, these to be in charge of the local pastors. It will not be a denomination movement, although it will be conducted under the direct ministration of the general assembly. As soon as the evangelists, who, it is expected, will number forty, arrive in any city, there will be immediately called a conference of all the Protestant pastors in the place to confer with them for united action. While the large Presbyterian churches will naturally be thrown open for the gatherings, it is expected that churches of other denominations will be asked to hold services, too.

HYDE WILL KEEP CONTROL.

Young Vice President Will Not Sell Out His Holdings.

NEW YORK, June 5.—It was said that Mr. Hyde has no intention of selling his Equitable stock and that the resolution passed at the directors' meeting could not in any way compel him to place it in the hands of trustees. At present Mr. Hyde is in complete control of the Equitable, and the opinion was expressed that James W. Alexander and Gage E. Tarbell would be compelled within a reasonably short time to retire from their respective positions.

Whoever may eventually be selected to be chairman of the board, the new office that is to be created, with powers greater than that of the president, will have to be a man of Hyde's liking. On this point Mr. Hyde is determined, for Mr. Hyde will not permit a man to take that place who is inimical to his interests. This announcement came from persons who are closely identified with Mr. Hyde. There is no question that Mr. Hyde will control this appointment and that he will henceforth dominate the society because of his stock holdings, as he has in the past.

Denial is made that Mr. Hyde and Mr. Alexander had become parties to a truce of peace; but, on the other hand, it was said the feeling between the two men was as bitter as it had been during the last five months.

Robert T. Lincoln of Chicago was asked last night if he would accept the office of chairman of the board of directors of the Equitable Life Assurance society should the position be offered to him. In reply Mr. Lincoln said that under no circumstances would he accept the office.

All eyes are now directed on Superintendent Francis Hendricks of the state insurance department and the results of the investigation of the society's affairs which Mr. Hendricks is making.

Soldiers' Monument Unveiled.

NEWBURG, N. Y., June 5.—A soldiers' monument, dedicated to Company H of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth New York volunteers, the "Orange Blossoms," was unveiled in the Wallkill Valley cemetery, near Walden, yesterday in the presence of several thousand persons. The monument is in the form of a bronze figure of a volunteer, eight feet high, on a granite pedestal. Congressman Thomas W. Bradley erected the monument as a tribute to his comrades of Company H, who were recruited in Walden.

Outing For Four Thousand Boys.

NEW YORK, June 5.—Four thousand newsboys enjoyed an outing at Rockaway Beach yesterday as the guests of Jackson Wallace, a lawyer of Brooklyn. The Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis of Plymouth church delivered a sermon to the boys on the beach, and addresses were also made by Mr. Wallace and Colonel Charles A. Edwards of Washington. The addresses were followed by a shore dinner, and the rest of the day was devoted to sightseeing, swimming, baseball and other sports.

"Was Lucky Not to Be In Jail."

PRINCETON, N. J., June 5.—In the course of a sermon on Christian morality before the Princeton students here President Francis Patton of Princeton Theological seminary said: "I hate to see a cold blooded, right living rascal who has his $40,000,000 and can teach Sunday school regularly and drive his hard bargain every week always keeping just within the range of the law. If I were asked what I thought of such a man I would say he was lucky not to be in jail."

Verdict of Six Cents' Damages.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 5.—After an hour's deliberation a jury in the county court here returned a verdict of 6 cents' damages in the $20,000 suit for slander of Alderman John H. Southwick of Yonkers against William Shrive, city treasurer of that city. It was alleged that Shrive circulated a report that Charles O. Warren, general manager of the asphalt trust, had said that Southwick approached him and asked for a $2,000 bribe for his vote.

Three Hit by Express Train.

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 5.—John Tittle, a farmer, and his son James were instantly killed and his daughter Bertha, aged thirteen years, was fatally injured by being struck by an express train on the bridge on the Pennsylvania railroad between Mexico and Port Royal. Tittle lived one mile from the scene of the accident, and he and his children were on their way home from Port Royal, where they had been attending Sunday school.

Kaiser Had No Hostile Intent.

TANGIER, Morocco, June 5. — In commercial quarters and in those circles usually well informed on political affairs the recent visit of the German emperor to Morocco is not regarded as in any sense meant as a hostile demonstration against any foreign power. Here the belief is that the intentions of the kaiser as affecting Morocco are purely to protect Germany's large and growing commercial interests.

To Attack Washington and Baltimore

WASHINGTON, June 5. — Sixteen warships will attack the defenses of Washington and Baltimore at midnight June 11 and continue their offensive operations for six days and nights. Meanwhile the fortresses along Chesapeake bay and the Potomac river, constituting the artillery districts of the Chesapeake, Washington and Baltimore, will put forth every defense of which they are capable.

MILLINERY MATTERS.

Picture Hats Best In Queer Curves. Flowers Accentuate the Angles.

Picture hats are limited only by the imagination of the milliner. To get away from any style that may have existed seems to be their aim. The one idea that prevails is that all shapes shall be bent, often the more angles the better. Wide brims are turned up in the back, front or sides, and sometimes at all these places flowers fill in the hollows.

Panama and leghorn weaves are rejoicing in a wave of popularity and chip is running them a very close race. Then there are crin straws—those transparent ones that are really best in delicate colorings. Great care must be exercised in selecting a color that suits one's complexion, as it may be damaged or enhanced by this transparent weave of straw.

Leghorn flops are dainty hats for dress and garden party wear. The hat is wired about the brim and is then bent into a becoming shape. The top is draped with plumes or banked with roses, and a knot of velvet gives character to the design. The under brim is faced with velvet chiffon or mousseline, making a bewitching frame for the face. A medium sized bandeau is inserted in the crown, lifting the chapeau from the head to display the soft waves of the pompadour.

The hat in the picture is of leghorn raised with white ostrich tips at one side and finished daintily with bows of black velvet. A piping of velvet edges the brim. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FASHION'S FRILLS.

Smart Girdles Match the Shirt Waist. The Craze For Embroidery.

Always wear white girdles with white blouses. They accentuate the length of the waist, which is a consummation devoutly to be wished this season. A dark girdle even with a dark skirt gives a cutoff appearance that is anything but attractive.

Changeable and shaded ribbons become prettier and prettier every day. Those that shade from a half deep color to white are perhaps the most attractive.

White linen shoes in every style are to be extremely popular this summer, and white spats often go with them. Indeed, overgaiters are one of the novelties of the season. Bright or dark ones will tread on the heels of the white gaiters.

WHITE PIQUE COAT.

The craze for embroidery has spread to linen shoes, and many of the stunning new models have the entire vamp worked in linen thread.

There is a new lingerie hat for grown-ups which is more severe than the hat made with frills. It is more like a toque made of fine batiste embroidery.

Slips to wear under sheer blouses are made of lawn or china silk cut on the same lines as the blouse itself. They are really a sort of corset cover very simple in design and bloused just a wee bit at the waist and fastened down the back.

Ruching is just as much worn as ever in all colors and in white.

The coat shown in the illustration is of white pique made in directoire style. Coarse Irish lace bordered with bands of pique trim the jacket, which is finished with tabs held in place by buttons of brown taffeta. The crossed waistcoat is of brown and white striped silk. The loops are of taffeta.

CHAPTER I.

Something unusual was going on at division headquarters and the men in the nearest regimental camps, regular and volunteer, were "lined up" along the sentry posts and silently, eagerly watching and waiting. For a week rumor had been rife that orders for a move were coming, and the brigades hailed it with delight. For a month shivering at night in dripping, drenching fogs drifting in from the Pacific, or drilling for hours each day on the bleak slopes of the Presidio heights, they had been praying for something to break the monotony of the routine. They were envious of the comrades who had been shipped to Manila, emulous of those who had stormed Santiago, and would have welcomed with unreasoning enthusiasm any mandate that bore promise of change of scene—or duty. The afternoon was raw and chilly; the wet wind blew salt and strong from the westward sea, and the mist rolled in, thick and fleecy, hiding from view the familiar landmarks of the neighborhood and forcing a display of lamplights in the row of gaudy saloons across the street that bounded the camp ground toward the setting sun, though that invisible luminary was still an hour high and afternoon drill only just over.

Company after company in their campaign hats and flannel shirts, in worn blue trousers and brown canvas leggings, the men had come swinging in from the broad driveways of the beautiful park to the south and, as they passed the tents of the commanding general, even though they kept their heads erect and noses to the front, their wary eyes glanced quickly at the unusual array of saddled horses, of carriages and Concord wagons halted along the curbstone, and noted the number of officers grouped about the gate. Ponchos and overcoat capes were much in evidence on every side as the men broke ranks, scattered to their tents to stow away their dripping arms and belts, and then came streaming out to stare, unrebuked, at headquarters. It was still early in the war days, and, among the volunteers and, indeed, among regiments of the regulars whose ranks were sprinkled with college men who had rubbed shoulders but a few months earlier with certain subalterns, the military line of demarcation was a dead letter when "the boys" were out of sight and hearing of their seniors, and so it happened that when a young officer came hurrying down the pathway that led from the tents of the general to those of the field officers of the Tenth California, he was hailed by more than one group of regulars along whose lines he passed, and, as a rule, the query took the terse, soldierly form of "What's up, Billy?"

The lieutenant nodded affably to several of his fellows of the football field, but his hand crept out from underneath the shrouding cape, palm down, signaling caution. "Orders—some kind," he answered in tones just loud enough to be heard by those nearest him. "Seen the old man anywhere? The general wants him," and, never halting for reply, the youngster hurried on.

He was a bright, cheery, brave-eyed lad of 20 who six months earlier was stumbling through the sciences at the great university on the heights beyond the glorious bay, never dreaming of deadlier battle than that in which his pet eleven grappled with the striped team of a rival college. All on a sudden, to the amaze of the elders of the great republic, the tenets and traditions of the past were thrown to the winds and the "Hermit Nation" leaped the seas and flew at the strongholds of the Spanish colonies. Volunteers sprang up by the hundred thousand and a reluctant congress accorded a meager addition to the regular army. Many a college athlete joined the ranks, while a limited few, gifted with relatives who had both push and "pull," were permitted to pass a not very exacting examination and join the permanent establishment as second lieutenants forthwith. Counting those commissioned in the regular artillery and infantry, there must have been a dozen in the thronging camps back of the great city, and of these dozen, Billy Gray—"Belligerent Billy," as a tutor dubbed him when the war and Billy broke out together, the latter to the extent of a four-days' absence from all collegiate duty—was easily the gem of the lot. One of the "brightest minds" in his class, he was one of the laziest; one of the quickest and most agile when aroused, he was one of the torpids as a rule. One of the kind who should have "gone in for honors," as the faculty said, he came nearer going out for devilment. The only son of a retired colonel of the army who had made California his home, Billy had spent years in camp and field and saddle and knew the west as he could never hope to know Haswell. The only natural soldier of his class when, sorely against the will of most, they entered the student battalion, he promptly won the highest chevrons that could be given in the sophomore year, and, almost as promptly, lost them for "lates" and absences. When the 'varsity was challenged by a neighboring institute to a competitive drill the "scouts" of the former reported that the crack company of the San Pedros had the snappiest captain they ever saw, and that, with far better material to choose from, and more of it, the 'varsity wouldn't stand a ghost of a show in the eyes of the professional judges unless Billy would "brace up" and "take hold." Billy was willing as Barkis, but the faculty said it would put a premium on laxity to make Billy a 'varsity captain, even though the present incumbents were ready, any of them, to resign in his favor. "Prex" said no in no uncertain terms; the challenge was declined, whereat the rival institute crowed lustily and the thing got into the papers. As a result a select company of student volunteers was formed; its members agreed to drill an hour daily in addition to the prescribed work, provided Billy would "take hold" in earnest, and this was the company that, under his command, swept the boards six weeks later and left San Pedro's contingent an amazed and disgusted crowd. Then Billy went to metaphorical pieces again until the war clouds overspread the land; then like his father's son he girded up his loins, went in for a commission and won. And here he was a "sub" in Uncle Sam's stalwart infantry with three classmates serving under him in the ranks and half a dozen more, either as junior officers or enlisted men, in the camps of the volunteers. He was a handsome boy, a healthy, hearty boy, and, as boys go, rather a good boy—a boy in whom his mother would have found, had she not long since been lifted above the cares of this world, much of comfort and more to condone, but a boy, nevertheless, who had given his old dragoon of a dad many an anxious hour. Now, just as he neared the legal dividing line between youth and years of discretion, Billy Gray had joined the third battalion of his regiment, full of pluck, hope and health, full of ambition to make a name for himself in a profession he loved as, except his father, he certainly loved nothing else, and utterly scoffing the idea that there might come into his life a being for the sake of whose smile he could almost lay down his sword, for he had yet to meet Amy Lawrence.

"Who are the women folks up at headquarters, Billy?" asked a youth of his own years and rank, peering eagerly through the drifting mist at the dim, ghostly outlines of the general's camp.

"Didn't get to see 'em. Where's the old man—the colonel?" was the reply. "Chief wants him toot de sweet!"

"What's wanted?" called a voice from the biggest of the neighboring tents, and a close-cropped head was thrust out between the front tent flaps. "That you, Billy? Who wants the colonel? He and the "brig" rode over to the Presidio an hour ago—ain't got back. Come in; I've started a fire in our oil stove."

"What's wanted?"

A puff of warm air blew from the interior and confirmed the statement. It was well along in summer, and not a dozen miles away to the east men were strolling about with palm-leaf fans and wilted collars. Here, close to the gray shores of the mighty sea, blankets and overcoats were in demand. Hospitably the older officer tugged at the lacings of the military front door, swore between his set teeth when the knots, swollen by the wet, withstood his efforts, and then shouted:

"Sergeant major, send somebody here to open this."

MARSHALL WILDER ARRESTED.

Young Woman Knocked Down by Comedian's Motor Car.

NEW YORK, June 5. — "Sergeant, you know we run down our friends sometimes, though usually they run us down," said Marshall P. Wilder when he found himself under arrest for knocking down a young woman with his automobile.

The accident happened on Eighth avenue. Mr. Wilder was running his automobile at about half speed and was tooting his horn vigorously. Miss Catherine Collins stepped off a southbound car directly in front of the humorist's automobile.

She was knocked down, but the machine was brought to a sudden stop and did not injure her. Miss Collins, however, collapsed from fright, and a big crowd collected. Policeman Heidenreich arrested Mr. Wilder and his two companions. At the police station Mr. Wilder said he was sorry and assured Miss Collins he would not intentionally injure her or any one else for the world.

He offered to pay the doctor's expenses if she was hurt and if not to give her a ride to her home. The victim, who had recovered by this time, admitted she was not hurt and accepted the second offer, saying it was one of her pet ambitions to ride in an automobile.

MILWAUKEE BLOCK BURNED.

Old Exposition Building Destroyed Last Night; Loss, $300,000.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 5.—The Milwaukee exposition building, occupying a city block, was destroyed by fire last night. The loss is $300,000.

The fire is supposed to have been started from an electric light wire. The blaze broke out in the northwest portion of the gallery just at the time the national skat congress completed its session.

At the time the fire broke out there were over 1,500 persons in the building, but all got out in safety. The interior had been decorated with thousands of yards of flimsy drapery, and in a twinkling the flames spread throughout the building. The building was gutted, leaving nothing standing but the four walls. Several buildings situated to the south of the big structure were slightly damaged. The exposition building was built about twenty-six years ago.

Whitelaw Reid In England.

PLYMOUTH, England, June 5.—Whitelaw Reid, the new ambassador of the United States to the court of St. James, and Mrs. Reid have arrived here from New York. Mr. Reid on his arrival was welcomed by the mayor of Plymouth, the president of the commercial bodies and the corporation of the people of Plymouth, who presented him with a handsome engrossed address expressing the hope that his official labors would promote and strengthen the good will which had so long existed between the United States and Great Britain.

Blew Himself Up With Dynamite.

NEW YORK, June 5.—After a quarrel with his wife in their cottage at Evergreens, Queens county, John Zeller, a well digger, went out threatening to return and blow up the whole family. When he was seen coming back a little later, carrying what appeared to be a stick of dynamite, Mrs. Zeller fled out of the back door. A moment later an explosion took place, completely wrecking the house. Zeller's mangled body was found in the ruins. His son John, who was in the house when the explosion occurred, escaped with slight injuries.

Ill Fated Block on Fire.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 5.—The ill fated block of the retail district which has suffered a loss of $2,000,000 by fire in the past eight years was yesterday the scene of another fire which caused a loss of $175,000. The fire broke out in the dry goods, notions and millinery house of M. B. Arnstein & Co., 412-414 Gay street, and raged fiercely. Within less than an hour the four story building was entirely gutted, and only by the prodigious efforts of the entire fire department were the flames confined to that structure.

Relics of Cortez's Conquest Found.

CITY OF MEXICO, June 5.—Laborers excavating trenches for the underground cable system of the telephone company near Cinco de Mayo street have uncovered a number of clay utensils, concrete foundations of temples and pottery covered with hieroglyphics, also Spanish coins, whose dates are undecipherable, but which, mingling with the pottery, induces the supposition that the antiquities found appertain to periods of the conquest, when Cortez razed every building in the Aztec capital.

Polish Woman Shot Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, June 5. — The body of an unknown Polish woman with two bullet wounds in her breast was found reclining against the embankment of the Pennsylvania railroad near Frankford creek, in the northeastern part of the city. The police say there is every indication that the woman was murdered. It is believed she met death between midnight and morning. She was about thirty-five years of age. The police hope to soon clear up the mystery.

Millionaire Miner Dead.

CHICAGO, June 5.—Peter L. Kimberly, a wealthy miner, is dead here of apoplexy. Mr. Kimberly's wealth is estimated at $10,000,000. He was a pioneer in copper mining in the Lake Superior region. PITY THE CENSUS MAN

The Trying Times He has in Getting Facts and Figures.

WEST END EPISODES.

A Talkative Father, a Discreet Blonde and a Worthy Housewife Make Him Earn His Money.

"Is that the man to take the census?"shouted the father of the family down the stairs, as his wife opened the door. "Well, don't tell him anything till I get down."

The young man, who with a dozen others started in last week to get Plainfield's share of New Jersey's decennial sensus, sat down on the hall tree. It was in a West End house and he hardly expected what followed.

"Now, young fellow," said the father. "I suppose you're going to put a lot of impertinent questions. I want to say right here that I never speak about my life or antecedents. I'll be glad to give you the bare facts, but remember that I'm a busy man—

"Where was I born? I was born in England, on the shore of the North Sea. I was the last of fourteen children—all most intelligent children. In school when they were five years old; writing Latin pentameter at ten. I went to Rugby, and lived in th same room that Tom Brown had"—

"Wait a minute," interrupted the census taker; "you're going too fast. What did you say your occupation was?"

"Occupation? I'm a manufacturer of hats. Before that I used to make pantaloons, but the market was bad. And before that I ran a seaside hotel for a while—oh, you don't care to go back so far? Oh. very well. All this is obnoxious to me anyway. I hate to go into these personal details."

The young man entered the names and ages of the hat manufacturer's family and shut his long, cream-colored portfolio with relief.

At the next place on his schedule his ring at the doorbell was answered by a blond woman who appeared to be on the shady side of thirty.

"How old are you?" he asked. "How old do you think? she answered. "My goodness, but that has a familiar ring. I guess you're forty-five." "Oh, heavens, not quite yet. Put me down for twenty-three."

About half an hour later the enumerator wandered around to the back of a dwelling on West Third streetand found a house-wife in the midst of a family washing.

"It's the cinsus ye want, hey?" exclaimed the worthy woman, extracther hands from the soapsuds. "Well, it's five fine boys in Ireland that I'm after havin'. Ye kin put them down and me ould man who was killed on the railrod seven years agone."

Thus the young man went on with the other enumerators who are covering the four wards of the city, and the questions and answers given in different places would be enough to supply the joke artists for years to come. At some places, the doors are only opened just a crack until the caller fully explains his mission, but on the whole, the enumerators are having no great trouble and the work is progressing nicely. The tabulated results are to be sent to Trenton by June 15, and from present indications Plainfield's sheets will be ready in plenty of time.

ROWDY BALL AT CRANFORD.

Decision Angers Pitcher Griffin and He Assaults the Umpire.

The baseball game between the Cranfords and Pearsall A. C. of Jersey City, at Cranford, Saturday afternoon, ended in a row through Pitcher Griffin, of the visitors, assaulting Umpire Lenahahn because he did not like a dicision. Members of both teams jumped into the tussle and a "free-for-all' was in swing when Policeman Huffey hauled the belligerent pitcher from the field. He was taken before Justice Mendell and fined $3 and costs.

Griffin is well known in Plainfield, having pitched for the Alis team last season. The game stood 8 to 6 in favor of Cranford and the management refused the visitors the guarantee.

PRESIDENT FISK RETIRES

Declines Sixth Election as Head of Muhlenberg Hospital

MR. COCK CHOSEN.

One of the Institution's Incorporators Selected in His Place—Year's Work Reviewed.

After a service of five years as president of the Board of Governors of Muhlenburg Hospital, Charles J. Fisk, resigned that position at the annual meeting of the board, held last night at the Public Library, and William R. Cock, one of the original incorporators of the hospital, was elected to fill the position. It was with sincere regret that Mr. Fisk retired, but he feels as though he has served a sufficient length of time and he willingly retired in favor of Mr. Cock.

This and the election of other officers, appointment of committees, and annual reports occupied the attention of the members of the board, last night. These officers were chosen:

President, William R. Cock; first vice president, E. H. Ladd, Jr.; second vice president, Ernest R. Ackerman; secretary, Charles E. Brooks; treasurer, Julius E. Erickson. Managing committee—Samuel Huntington, George P. Mellick. Charles E. Brooks, James DeGraff, Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Miss Schipper, Mrs. John Gray Foster; building committee—Harry G. Runkle, DeWitt C. Ivins, E. H. Booth, Frank J. Hubbard, Charles J. Fisk; finance committee—E. H. Ladd, Jr., W. L. Saunders, Julius E. Erickson, Samuel Townsend, Ernest R. Ackerman; printing and press—George H. Goddard, J. Evarts Tracy; insurance committee—John M. Whiton; auditing—B. A. Hegeman, E. H. Booth.

The president's report showed a very satisfactoy condition of affairs. The hospital is practically free from indebtedness and excellent work has been performed during the year as shown by the report of the medical staff, through the chairman, Dr. Norman H. Probasco.

The first of the year there were eighteen patients at the hospital. There were 507 patients admitted, a total of 525 treated for 674 different diseases. In the dispensary 1,356 people were treated. Out of the 525 patients, there are still thirty-seven in the hospital and 281 patients paid either in part or whole for treatment and from this source the receipts were $7,418.20. There were 207 persons treated free. During the year there were 10,500 hospital days' treatment. If the free patients had paid there would have been received about $3,500.

As shown by the treasurer's report the expenses of the hospital for the year to be $22,781.33. The balance at the last annual report was $805.82 and the receipts during the year were $25,407.98, the present balance being $2,626.65. There was received from the county $4,800, from the city, $1,000 and from pay patients $7,418.20 was received. There was received from the training school services rendered, $258.80 and from the services of the ambulance, $30.50. The income from trust funds, etc., amounted to $371.59 and from subscriptions $5,601.07, while from the carnival, through the Women's Auxiliary, there was received $5,122.

J. A. RIIS NOT TO SPEAK

Cancels Engagement to Address High School Graduates.

SCHOOLS NEED $70,000.

That Amount Exclusive of State Appropriation Necessary for Next Year—Changes in New High School Plans.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Education last night, it wss made known by Superintndent Maxson that Jacob A. Riis, the well known lecturer and writer, would be unable to make the address at the annual commencemet exercises of the High School, June 22, owing to the recent death of his wife. The news came but yesterday and efforts are now being made to secure as able a speaker in his place. Dr. Maxson has placed himself himself in communication with several prominent educational workers and expects to make his decision known within a few days.

G H. Woolston, who is inspector for the architect's superintending the work on the new High School, reported in conjunction with Contractor John H. Abbott that plaster boards would have to be used for ceiling, instead of ordinary laths and mortar as called for in the specifications. The State school law demands the former and it was overlooked in preparing the plans. The change will cost an additional $175 but as it is compulsory, the board referred it to the proper committee to be authorized.

In the regular of busines, Mr. Lovell reported the Board of School Estimate had fixed upon $70,000, exclusive of State appropriation, as the amount needed for school expenses during the coming year. Dr. Maxson reported that all arragements had been completed for the High School commencement and also the Grammar School exercises. For the latter, Rev. Chas. E. Herring has been secured to make the address. For the selection of the High School prize essay, Dr Maxson reported, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, Mrs. Townsend Rushmore and Dr. Norman Probasco would act as judges.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS ORDERED BY COUNCIL

WIDENING OF PARK AVE.; SIDEWALK REPAIRS AND STEBBINS PLACE OPENING.

Public hearing were granted at the June meeting of the Common Council, last night, on three ordinances before adopting them on final reading. The first was that in reference to the opeing of Stbbins place, between South Second street and West Fourth street. The second was the ordinance providing for the widening of Park avenue, between Second street and the railroad and the ordinance provided for the extension of the repair of sidewalks throughout the city.

President Daniel allowed for a public hearing on all three ordinances, but as no one present desired to speak or or against them they were adopted on third reading and are now in effect. As a isult of this action the work will start on The Plainfield Trust Company's new building on Park avenue. The other will be commenced within a short time.

Michael's Slip.

In March, 1904, Michael Gleason promised Judge Runyon in the city court to stop drinking and be a model citizen. Michael kept his word until Saturday night, when he got drunk in Henry Windham's saloon and cursed Windham wildly because the saloonkeeper obeyed instructions from the authorities and refused to sll him. Michael escaped the judicial wrath yesterday morning by being very humble and contrite. "I am a wild man when I'm drunk, and I'll never drink again as long as I live," he said, and Judge Runyon gave him another chance.

Addressed High School Students.

Dr. Edward Lewis, who graduated from the Plainfield High School in the class of 1883 and who is now at the head of the English department in the Lewis Preparatory School, Chicago, addressd the students of the Plainfild High School, yesterday morning, on "Be Yourself." WANT CARPENTERS IN TRADES' ALLIANCE

ALLIED UNIONS SEEK TO INTEREST THEM—MINISTER SPEAKS.

A meeting designed to interest the Carpenters' Union in the Structural Building Trades' Alliance was held by the local branch of the alliace at the Trades' Council Hall last night. The alliance here includes the Painters, Paperhangers and Decorators; Plumbers Steamfitters and Gasfitters; Sheet Metal Workers, and Electricians' Unions, and the carpenters are the only structural workers, affiliated with the National alliance, who are not in the local branch.

Addresses were delivered by State Organizer George M. Dyer and Rev. C. E. Goodrich. Th meeting was largely attended, and a number of the carpenters were among those present. None of them spoke, but they all appeared to be highly interested.

Mr. Goodrich spoke strongly in favor of unionism in general, and aid it was a good thing or all allied trade to centralize their organized power. Every organization, he held, ought to come into one body.

Mr. Dyer spoke on the centralization of ational trades idea. If it was good for the individual to belong to an organization, he said, it was equally good for allied organizations to join forcs.

It is the general impression that the carpenter will vote to join the alliance at their next meeting. The subject will be dicussed at any rate. The committee in charge of last night's meeting comprised Edward McCann, Nimrod Horton and E. V. Lorton. A number of tickets for smoker to be held by the Essex County Trades Council for the benefit of the Chicago teamsters' strike und were sold by Mr. Dyer.

TWENTY BIDS MADE FOR SEWER EXTENSIONS

CONTRACT TO BE AWARDED NEXT MONDAY NIGHT.

Prior to taking up the regular order of business at the June meeting of the Common Council, last night, bids were received for the proposed extensive improvements of the sewage system. There were twenty bids in all, and owing to a pressure of other business the streets and sewers committee to which was referred the bids, announced that it would be impossible to arrive at a decision at that time, and on a motion of Mr. Tolles, it was decided that when the Common Council adjourned it be to meet on Monday night, June 12, to award the contract to the successful bidder.

There was an unusually large number of representatives present who were interested in the various bids and all took down the figures for comparison. These firms submitted bids which provide for additional sewage beds, another septic tank, together with the piping, construction work and furnishing of materials:

Miller Collins Company, D. Kuzzo, Bll Egineering Construction Company, Neff Company, Goodwin Construction Company, Richards & Gaston, of New York City; Cemnt Paving and Construction Company, Hillpot & McKay, of Jersey City; Jacob Jacques and Michael DeRossa, of Elizabeth; James Maybury & Sons, of Passaic; Finch Anderson Company, Glen Falls, N. Y.; Bunting Construction Company, Long Island City, N. Y.; Manufacturers' Construction Company, Wilmington, Del.; C. L. & G. A. McKeag and Middlesex Constructing Company, of Nw Brunswick; Schuman & Heil, of Easton, Pa.; Callery & Murphy Contracting Company, of Hoboken; Krausse Construction Company, of Perth Amboy; Stacy B. Opdyke, Jr., of Dunellen; Frank Pidgeon, of Saugerties, N. Y.

These were all referred to the streets and sewers committee and will be reported on next Monday night.

As far as can be ascertained Richards & Gaston, of New York and Somerville, were the lowest bidders. The aggregate cost of the work is approximately $52,000. An ordinance awarding the contract will be introduced Monday night, after careful investigation.

Remarkable Magnolias.

Borough Councilman James K. Arnold has on exhibition in his Somerset street store, an exceptionally large and beautiful magnolia, taken from a remarkable tree which he has at his residence on Manning avenue. The flowers measure fully eighteen inches long. An unusual thing about the flowers is that they exhale a sweet aroma that can be detected for a block about Mr. Arnold's home.

HAMILTON CASE AIRED

Chairman Tyler to Tell Cop Why He Was Dismissed.

NO CHARGES PREFERRED

Big Petition Signed by Leading Men Presented to Common Council—His Lawyer Speaks.

The action of the Police Board in dropping Special Patrolman Peter Hamilton from the force without giving any reason was discussed in open session at the June meeting of the Common Council, last night. Several petitions signed by over 100 business and professional men, were read by City Clerk MacMurray. The petition set forth that Mr. Hamilton had never missed a call, his habits were good, he neither being addicted to the use of liquor nor tobacco, that his dismissal from the force at this time was particularly hard on him and his family and that he had a right to know why he was dismissed. Mr. Tyler asked that the petitions be referred to the Police Board and in turn be referred to the Mayor.

W. G. DeMeza, Esq., counsel for Mr. Hamilton, reviewed his case and askd the members to carefully investigate it and give him a chance. He maintained that if there were any charges against Hamilton it was the duty of the Police Board to inform him of their nature. Mr. Hibbard inquired of Mr. Tyler what the police board had done regarding the case, and Mr. Tyler asked Mr DeMeza what he would propose. Counsel said that he thought his client was entitled to an appointment as a regular officer after eighteen months of special duty. Mr. Tyler then asked why Mr. Hamilton had not inquired of the Police Board concerning his case and his lawyer replied that Mr Hamilton had approached one member, but that he had been informed by his superior officer that he was not to go to the Police Board. Mr. Tyler admitted that Mr. Hamilton did speak to him some ago and that he informed him that there were no charges against him. He added that the Common Council has no jurisdiction in the matter, but that he would give Mr. Hamilton the information he desires if he would come to him.

Mr. Tyler moved that the petition be referred to the Police Board with power to refer them to the Mayor or take such action as the Police Board desired. Mr. Murphy moved to amend Mr. Tyler's motion that the petition be referred to the Police Board and its action be reported to the Common Council later.

Mr. Tyler opposed this amendment believing that it was a bad precedent and amounted to a desire of the part of the Common Council to take the matter up. He cited the method whereby Mr. Hamilton was appointed a special for the purpose of testing his ability and if the Common Council was to listen to these petitions the civil service examination would be turned into a farce. He desired to have the matter referred so that the Police Board would be free to use its own discretion and not have the matter brought up for public discussion.

The motion as amended by Mr. Murphy was adopted, and the discussion closed with a statement by Mr. Tyler that he would be glad to give the reasons to Mr. Hamilton as why he was dropped from the force.

An electric automobile left by Mrs. D. W. Taylor, of West Seventh street, this morning, "ran away" through two children turning on the power. The machine mounted the sidewalk after knocking over a hitching post, collided with the corner of George Cole's building and then sheered off toward Park avenue. It was not going fast and Theodore Martin and Adam Seader held it by grasping the wheels until Fireman Harry Bush, of No. 1 Hose Company, reversed the current. The machine was slightly damaged.

SEMINARY GRADUATES 6

Senior Class Holds Exercises This Morning.

SOME FINE MUSIC.

Presentation of Diplomas Made by Miss Kenyon—Friends of the Institution Present at the Exercises.

For very many years one of the pleasant features of some morning in early June has been the commencement of the Plainfield Seminary on West Seventh street. This year was no exception, and the finely shaded grounds, beautifully decorated hall, a wealth of flowers, exquisite music and sweet girl graduates were as charming as ever. The six graduates, Misses Aurelie Asten, Elizabeth Yerkes Flanders, Helen Ray Hooley, Louise Saunders, Helen Watts Stevens and Alice Caroline Titus, faced the principals, Miss Kenyon and Miss Arnold, while Miss Kenyon made the presentation of diplomas, congratulating the class on the completion of their course of study and wishing them success in their exploration of new realms where they would find new problems and learn new lessons.

An excellent musical programme was rendered with great skill to the delight of the audience. Miss May, the instructor on the piano, is a rare artist whose exquisite touch, superb memory and wonderful technique always give pleasure. Her assistants were also artists of skill. In the last number made up of four movements, the tone, force and unity of action of the trio produced the finest result, in music of a rarely good order.

Modest Altschuler was 'cellist,, Jacob Altschuler, violist, and Miss May, pianist.

FEAR MAPLE TREE SCALE.

Mr. Murphy Wants Extra Appropriation for Work.

Councilman Murphy, chairman of the light and trees committee, called the attention of the Common Council, last night, to the prevalence of a scale that has made its appearance here and which he alleges is rapidly destroying the fine maple trees. He said that J. Hervey Doane had spoken to him about it and he thought the Common Council should take some action toward stopping the progress of this parasite.

Mr. Tolles moved that Mr. Murphy be appointed a committee of one to investigate the subject and report at the adjourned meeting on Monday night. It is Mr. Murphy's desire that an appropiation of money, besides that set apart for the trimming of trees, be made, to eradicate this evil, and property-owners are asked to assist in the movement.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL DELAY

Structure Will Not be Ready for Occupancy in Fall.

CAUSES MUCH TROUBLE.

Superintendent's Plans Upset by Delay—Classes on Half-Time the Result.

Announcement by the contractors that it will be impossible for them to have the new High School ready for occupancy by September has caused an unpleasant disarrangement of all Superintendent Maxson's plans for the coming school year. The present buildings have been crowded for some time past and it was hoped to end the trouble with the close of the present term, but the delay means that the congestion will not be relieved.

The contractors declare various causes are to blame for holding back the completion of the new building and it will at least be January 1 before the pupils can enter. The facts of the matter were made known to the Board of Education, last night, by a statement which Mr. Maxson submitted, as follows:

"I am informed by the contractor that, by reason of various unavoidble delays, there is no possibility of our having the new High School to use at the opening of school in September, as expected, but that it will probably not be ready for occupancy until the holidays.

"I had planned, in connection with the committee on teachers, when the Stillman building was vacated by the High School, to transfer the seventh and eighth grades from the Whittier to the Stillman building, leaving in the Whittier the sixth grade which is now there and bringing to it a sixth grade from the Irving School and two sixth grades from the Franklin School, relieving somewhat the pressure on both these buildings; also, to transfer the kindergarten from the Wadsworth building, enabling us to discontinue the expense of running that building as a school. On the second floor of the Whittier, it was planned to prepare roome for cooking and sewing for the domestic science department of manual training, the wood-working department to be accommodated in rooms in the new High School building. The failure to enter the new building in September disarranges all these plans. After giving much thought to the consideration of the question, I would recommend the following arrangement:

"1. That the opening of the manual training rooms be deferred for a year. Mrs. Mary E. Sanford, who had been engaged for the domestic science work before it was determined that the building could not be ready, has consented to accept a grammar grade for the year in place of the domestic science work, having had many years experience in teaching those grades.

"2. That the kindergarten be transferred as planned and the Wadsworth building closed.

"3. That the sixth grade classes that were to be transferred from the Irving and the Franklin Schools shall be organized under their own teachers just as they would be if the building were ready, but that they remain in those schools until the Stillman building is vacated. In order to do this, it will be necessary to place some of the lower classes in those buildings on special session arrangements,, like that followed with the second grade in the Franklin School during the present year. One class will attend from 8:30 to 10:30 in the morning and from 12:30 to 2:30 in the afternoon; a second class, under another teacher, will attend in the same room when the first class leaves, from 10:30 to 12:30 in the morning, and from 2:30 to 4:30 in the afternoon. This will give each class four hours of school session as convenient as the regular session, will not, I think cause material loss to the pupils.

"This arrangement is in many ways very inconvenient but it seems to be the best way out of our difficulty.

"Respectfully submitted,
"H. M. Maxson."

The primary department, including Mrs. Condict's class and the kindergarten and cradle roll, of the Crescent Avenue Precbyterian church Sunday-school, will attend the annual party to be held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William D. SHEA IS IN JAIL.

Chicago Still In State of Unrest From Strike.

MANY INJURED IN RIOTS EACH DAY

Police Fire on Mob Who Attacked Lumber Company's Men. While Union Teamsters Blocked the Road With Their Wagons.

CHICAGO, June 6.—President C. P. Shea of the Teamsters' union has been arrested and taken to jail.

Rioting, in which shots were fired by the police, occurred in an alley at Hoyne and Cornell avenues. The policemen were guarding a wagon belonging to the Arthur Gourley Lumber company. While the teamster was unloading the lumber a crowd threw missiles, union teamsters in the meantime driving their wagons to the ends of the alley and forming a blockade.

A heavy plank and a large piece of tiling were thrown from the rear window of a building near the alley, narrowly missing a policeman. The officer fired toward the window, but the bullets went wide. Re-enforcements arrived, and the nonunion teamster was enabled to proceed to the lumber yard after having unloaded the vehicle.

Edward Mullen, sixth vice president of the Teamsters' union, is at the German hospital suffering from a bullet wound in the right leg. Mullen, it is said, was shot in the riot at Congress and Halstead streets, in which Policeman Smith was shot. Mullen was removed to the hospital from the home of a relative, and the wounded leg was operated upon.

CRAWFORD'S TRIAL.

Charged With Conspiracy to Defraud the Government.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The first witness for the defense in the trial of William G. Crawford, charged with conspiring with August W. Machen and George E. Lorenz to defraud the government in connection with supplying letter carriers satchels to the postoffice department, was put on the stand here.

The witness was James K. Polk, a law partner of Crawford, who drew the contracts between Crawford and Lorenz. He explained in detail the drafting of a number of contracts and repeated conversations that took place between Crawford and Lorenz in relation to terms of the contracts.

His testimony contradicted a great deal of that given by Lorenz. He also declared that after the postal investigation had begun Lorenz came to him with reference to remittances made by Lorenz to Crawford and suggested that he should sound Crawford as to agreeing upon a statement of facts relative to these remittances. Polk said he became indignant and terminated the interview by assuring Lorenz that he knew Crawford would tell the truth about the dealings between them.

OYAMA ON THE MOVE

Large Japanese Army Marching on Vladivostok.

ENQUIST'S CRUISERS TO BE INTERNED

United States Refuses to Allow Russian Ships at Manila to Make Repairs—Must Leave or Consent to Be Dismantled.

LONDON, June 6.—A large army under the command of Marquis Oyama is marching on Vladivostok with the object of laying siege to the Russian port on the Pacific, the terminus of the Siberian railway.

Washington has instructed Governor Wright of the Philippine civil government to inform Admiral Enquist, commanding the three Russian cruisers—the Aurora, Oleg and Jemtchug—which have found refuge in the harbor at Manila that he must either interne his vessels in Manila harbor or depart within twenty-four hours.

No time is granted to the Russians to make repairs by this government because of the fact that the damages which they wish to repair were sustained in battle. If the Russians do not desire to interne their ships they must get away from Manila.

It is probable that the vessels will be interned, as Japanese warships will doubtless be waiting for them if they make any effort to get away from Manila. In the second place, the Russians have nowhere to go. This government under the rules of war can give them coal and provisions sufficient to reach the nearest Russian port. This could only be Vladivostok, and there is absotely no hope of Admiral Enquist's ever reaching there.

Governor Wright has cabled Secretary Taft that he had seen Admiral Enquist and that the latter had said that he had heard nothing from St. Petersburg.

Admiral Train cabled the navy department that it would take sixty days to put the Oleg in seaworthy condition, thirty days for the Aurora and seven for the Jemtchug. All are evidently in bad condition, and it would be foolhardy, in the opinion of nearly all government officers in Washington, for Admiral Enquist to make an effort to leave Manila. If the three vessels are interned they must necessarily disarm and the crews and officers will give their paroles to the United States government, as in the case of the Russian cruiser Lena, which made her way to San Francisco last September.

St. Petersburg dispatches say that the interview between Ambassador Cassini and President Roosevelt at Washington regarding peace in the far east has not borne fruit here. Foreign Minister Lamsdorff will lay Count Cassini's dispatch before the emperor. Count Cassini's report places the whole conversation in a purely informal light, and it is expected that Russia's answer will be returned in an equally informal manner. High officials did not hesitate to express the opinion that the determination to continue the war was fixed and definite. They seemed pleased with President Roosevelt's friendly spirit.

A congress of zemstvos called to meet today to consider the situation arising from the disaster to the Russian fleet, to which the mayor of Moscow telegraphically invited all the mayors in Russia, has been prohibited.

Japan Wants Enquist's Ships Held.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The Japanese minister here has formally inquired of the department of state what action the United States government intends to take respecting the Russian war vessels now in Manila bay. Acting Secretary Loomis responded that these vessels would be interned provided they did not leave the harbor at once. This exchange has taken place in order to formally establish the responsibility of the United States for the detention of the vessels in Manila harbor until the end of hostilities.

Reid Received by King Edward.

LONDON, June 6.—Whitelaw Reid, the new American ambassador, had an audience of King Edward at Buckingham palace and presented his credentials. His majesty's reception of the ambassador was most cordial. While the ambassador was presenting the king with his credentials Queen Alexandra was receiving Mrs. Reid and Miss Reid. Her majesty showed them the interesting objects in the palace. Secretary Hay paid a formal visit to the American embassy later in the day.

Lobley Got Eight Years.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Sam Lobley, who pleaded guilty to swindling the Equitable Life Assurance society of $27,816 and whose total stealings amounted to $54,000, was sentenced to eight years in Sing Sing by Judge Crane in the county court here. The sentence is considered a light one comparatively, as under the law Lobley could have received the maximum penalty of twenty years.

Ziegler Left $30,000,000.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The will of William Ziegler, the patron of Ziegler arctic explorations, has been filed. The estate is estimated to be worth $30,000,000, and after provision is made of $50,000 annuity to Mrs. Ziegler, together with the use of the Ziegler city and country homes, the residue of the estate is bequeathed to Mr. Ziegler's adopted son William, who is now fourteen years old.

Tornado at Binghamton, N. Y.

NO PEACE FOR EQUITABLE.

T. Jefferson Coolidge and J. H. Schiff Send In Resignations.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The efforts of the officers and directors of the Equitable Life Assurance society to bring about peace and to get the business running smoothly and to every one's satisfaction were further complicated by the resignation of T. Jefferson Coolidge as director. A dispatch from Boston says that Mr. Coolidge has tendered his resignation, to take effect at once, and with it has sent his declination to serve on the committee of seven named to select a chairman of the board of directors. Mr. Coolidge is the fourth director to resign within a week. A dispatch from Cincinnati says that M. E. Ingalls will soon resign.

That the committee would fail of its purpose seemed evident, for, what with Coolidge out, D. O. Mills contemplating his resignation from the board, John A. Stewart undecided as to his course and J. B. Forgan and Robert T. Lincoln in Chicago, it seemed as though necessity would place the matter in the hands of the entire board.

A. J. Cassatt and August Belmont have given no clear indication as to whether or not they will serve on the committee. Mr. Belmont was at his office and spent most of the morning perusing the report of the Frick committee. He indicated that he might have something to say later.

Jacob H. Schiff, banker and member of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., has also resigned from the board of directors, of which he has been a member for twelve years. In his letter of resignation, written to President James W. Alexander, Mr. Schiff takes occasion to severely score both Mr. Alexander and Mr. Hyde, and he also writes scathingly of the actions of other officials of the society.

The resignation of Melville E. Ingalls as director of the Equitable Life Assurance society will be sent in within a few hours. Mr. Ingalls has given out the following statement:

"I have not as yet resigned, but shall do so. I have hesitated in order to determine in my own mind what my duty was to the policy holders, and it seems to me that, with the spirit manifested by the majority in control, no further good can be accomplished by my remaining. The control seems now to be in the hands of Alexander and Hyde, and I think the directors all agree that if there can be a change of management and the one man ownership of the stock eliminated the Equitable has a great future."

WARMBAD CAPTURED.

Kaiser's Troops Defeated In German Colony In South Africa.

CAPE TOWN, June 6.—Reports received in official quarters say that Warmbad, the German headquarters in southwest Africa, has fallen and that the garrison has perished.

The natives tribes of the German colony more than a year ago rose in rebellion, slaughtered colonists, tore up railroads and caused great damage in various ways. Though many thousand German troops have been sent to subdue the rebellion they have not succeeded and have themselves sustained several defeats.

The territory of the colony is as large as the state of Texas, New York and Connecticut. The natives are said to have been driven to rebellion by the greed of certain German colonists, but this the Germans deny. The principal tribes are the Hereros and Hottentots.

Car Men Have Disappeared.

NEW YORK, June 6.—General Superintendent Albert H. Stanley of the Public Service corporation of New Jersey announces that many conductors and other employees of the trolley company had disappeared since it became known that there had been unearthed a conspiracy by which the company had been defrauded of hundreds of thousands of dollars by means of fraudulent transfers. Mr. Stanley said that but for the premature publication of the discovery of the conspiracy at least a hundred arrests would have been made. The total loss to the company, he said, would probably reach $300,000.

Sullivan's Operas Revived.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The roof garden season was opened in New York last night with a performance at the Aerial gardens, on the roof of the New Amsterdam theater. The attraction was a double bill, the first part consisting of a Gilbert and Sullivan review, in which were included numbers from the "Pirates of Penzance," "Patience," the "Mikado" and "Pinafore." The second part of the performance was a burlesque, "Lifting the Lid," satirizing recent happenings in local politics and in the theatrical world. The principal parts were played by Virginia Earle Diamond Donner and Louis Harrison.

Wanted a Decent Burial.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 6.—Florence Bellinger, twenty-one years old, and her mother, Mrs. Anna Meyer, are dead at their home here after drinking from a bottle ostensibly containing brandy. The girl died several hours before her mother. A note was found on the table beside the bed of Mrs. Meyer, which reads, "Sell everything and give the dead a decent burial."

Alfonso's Welcome to England.

LONDON, June 6.—Alfonso XIII., the young king of Spain, was welcomed to England today with the most elaborate of ceremonies, every detail of which was supervised by King Edward himself. Never in the case of the reception of a national visitor has greater attention been paid to details or more careful preparation made for magnificent display.

CECILIA THE BRIDE

Crown Prince of Germany's Wedding Day.

BERLIN BRIGHT WITH GALA BANNERS

Distinguished Guests Crowd the Kaiser's Capital—Magnificent Gifts From Prussian Towns—Honeymoon to Be Spent In Italy.

BERLIN, June 6.—The crown prince and Duchess Cecilia, who will be wedded today, have received many deputations bearing congratulations from all parts of the empire. Last night there was a notable performance at the Royal Opera in honor of the betrothed pair.

There is a great rush of notable personages from all over Europe to attend the wedding festivities of the prince to the young duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. For the first time in the history of the German capital even princes were turned away from hotels.

Nearly all of the distinguished foreign guests brought with them numerous suits and innumerable servants. It is a curious circumstance that the special emissaries of the mikado, Prince and Princess Arisugawa, and the representative of Russia, Grand Duke Michael, the czar's own brother, are lodged under the same roof at the Hotel Bristol.

CROWN PRINCE WILLIAM.

The whole city of Berlin is in gala dress on account of the marriage of the emperor's son and heir. For decorations to mark the arrival of the future empress the Berlin city council voted the sum of $37,500 and well known artists and architects gave their services in arranging the designs. Flagstaffs and supporting columns marked the route of the bridal procession into the city.

In striking contrast to the parading and entertaining and feting that has gone on almost steadily since the young duchess reached Berlin the wedding ceremony proper is to be private and quiet. At 4:30 o'clock this afternoon the civil marriage will take place in the hall of the electors in the royal palace in the presence only of the immediate relatives of the pair.

The religious ceremony will be performed at 5 o'clock in the palace chapel by the chief court preacher, Dr. Dryander. This will be witnessed by distinguished guests, including important officers, court dignitaries and special representatives of other countries. The pair will then hold a reception in the white hall. A supper and torch dance bring the festivities to a close at 9 o'clock.

The royal pair will spend their honeymoon in Italy. It is possible that before their return to Germany they may pay a visit to Rome. If they do it is reported that the pope will receive them at the Vatican.

The future crown princess' trousseau is the most magnificent that has ever been seen in Berlin. Her handsomest gown, which is to be worn at the civil ceremony this afternoon, is of white gauze, lightly embroidered with silver thread, with the waist defined with silver and embroidery on pink satin. The train to be worn with this gown is of rose pink velvet, heavily embossed in silver.

The gifts to the young pair include a silver service subscribed by the inhabitants of 300 Prussian towns. The cost of this gift was over $100,000. The province of Saxony gave a massive candelabra, three feet high, containing over 100 pounds of silver and rich inlayings of gold. Cardinal Kopp, bishop of Breslau, who represents the Vatican at the wedding, presented to the bridegroom an autograph Latin letter of Pius X. and a special gift from his holiness.

Seventy princes and princesses sat at either side of and around the imperial family during a gala performance at the Royal Opera House. The display of jewels was an extraordinary one, the Empress Augusta Victoria wearing a necklace of large diamonds.

The royal party during a half hour interval between the playing of the wedding march from "Lohengrin" and the third act of "Die Meistersinger" took supper in the rooms adjoining the imperial box.

On the Ordinance of Kissing.

BRISTOL, Va., June 6.—There are fully 10,000 German Baptists in this city attending the annual conference of the denomination. In a sermon Elder Beahm of Bridgewater, Va., speaking of the ordinance of kissing, observed by the brethren, said, "Whenever we get too proud to kiss each other, to that extent God has gone out of our hearts."

Plainfield, N. J., June 6, 1905.

The time is coming when plenty of ventilation and frequent baths will tend to comfort, health and happiness.—Perth Amboy Chronicle. Evidently still afraid of water down that way.

A number of Plainfielders have the habit of registering as from New York when at the mountains, the shore or abroad. Surely anyone can take pride in being a resident of this city which is a good deal more than can be said for New York. Stop the silly habit.

President Francis Patton, of Princeton Theological Seminary, throws this at the public: "I hate to see a cold-blooded, right-living rascal, who has his $40,000,000 and can teach Sunday-school regulary, drive his hard bargain every week, always keeping just within the range of the law. If I were asked what I thought of such a man, I would say he was lucky not to be in jail."

Being some dollars shy of forty millions, we're safe. Are you?

In an effort to obtain the senatorship from Essex in the fall, Assemblyman Everett Colby of Orange, has made a platform of his own and has already invited the public to inspect it. Mr. Colby says he stands on the platform. If he will stand on it after election, the upper house of the Legislature will have at least one fit representative of the people. Cut down, these are the cardinal planks in his platform: First—A law and a constitutional amendment limiting franchises granted to public utility companies. Second—Annual assessment of such franchises and taxation of the same at local rates. Third— Taxaton of all the steam railroad property at local rates. Fourth—Law giving parties right to express preferences for United States senatorial candidates at general elections. Supporting the platform are these arguments made by Mr. Colby: First— Political experiece convinces that party organizations are controlled by men who act for benefit of corporations. Second—Men who assert independence in office, find their political careers cut short. Third—Only effective remedy for existing conditions is to nominate at party primaries and elect men who will enact laws in the interest of the public. The Essex County man has evidently been close to the people in his travels, and it it's up to the people to help him along on the road of success.

CREAMERY INSPECTION THROUGHOUT STATE

CHIEF INSPECTOR MAGUIRE LOOKING OVER EVERY PLANT IN NEW JERSEY.

Under the direction of Dr. Henry Mitchell, of Asbury Park, secretary of the State Board of Health, and George W. Maguire, of Trenton, chief inspector of food and drugs, the State Board has begun a crusade among the creameries of New Jersey to raise their sanitary standard. The creameries in this vicinity are all said to be in fairly good condition. Owing to the fact that large quantities of Jersey milk are shipped to New York and Philadelphia the State Board is securing their co-operation in the work.

This is a new field of investigation for the board and is in line with its work of preventing the sale of adulterated food and drugs.

There are 150 creameries in the State, and though the investigation has been in progress but a short time unsanitary conditions have already been found in certain sections, which, through the efforts of the board, have been corrected.

The board insists that milk and its products form one of the most fertile channels for the transmission of bacteria and disease germs, and that therefore the sanitary condition of the dairy plants should be maintained at the highest possible standard of excellence.

The investigation was undertaken under the personal direction of Inspector Maguire. He is visiting every creamery, making a thorough inspection of every department, and then submitting to Dr. Mitchell and the board full reports of each step of the inquiry.

Then the board orders the creamery operators to correct every detail in which their plants fall below the standard. After giving them time enough to make the corrections another visit is paid to see that they have been made.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Sixty young people and adults of St. John's Roman Catholic parish were confirmed by Bishop McFaul, Sunday morning. The confirmation service was preceded by a procession from North avenue, down Washington avenue, to the church. The line was headed by St. Staulaus' Society, of South Plainfield, in uniform; forty members of the Holy Name Society and the candidates and clergy. The girls were dressed in white, with white veils caught up by flowers, and the boys wore white bows on their rms. Bishop McFaul nd his chancellor, Father Powers, were met in the vestibule of the church by three altar boys, and the Bishop held the canonical visitation ceremony before entering the church. In the confirmtion service, Bishop McFaul was assisted by Father Powers. The Bishop preached the usual confirmation sermon, instructing the newly admitted members in the church laws. The celebration of the holy sacrament concluded the service. The Bishop and his chancellor were entertained at dinner by Father Dunphy, rector of St. John's. They left for Hampton Junction in the afternoon, to hold another confirmation service.

In line with the proposed new grade on Washington avenue, a new cement walk has been put down before St. John's church and the rectory.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD

Township Clerk Edward L. Hand has called the Public Service Corporation's attention to the fact that they are liable to arrest for breaking that part of their franchise which reads, all cars going east or west must stop each side of Park avenue. Some of the crews have become careless of this of late, especially the Trenton car crews, who often leave passengers on the corner, paying no attention to them whatever.

A ban has been placed on the old ball grounds on Bartle avenue, Henry C. Meyers, the owner, refusing to allow th National game there any more as he intends to turn the property into building sites. This leaves the town without a baseball diamond, but then the game is dead here, so it makes but little difference.

Mrs. Anthony Fales and child, who have been spending a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Frentz, have returned to their home on East Sixth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Peterson, who have been visiting Mrs. Peterson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Clark, have returned to their home in Newark.

The Arion Club's shirtwaist dance, to be held tonight in the I. C. T. rooms, Plainfield, will be attended by the club's friends from here.

Walter Hyams, of the Associated Press, New York, has been visiting his sister, Miss Bella Hyams, who is spending the summer here.

George P. Thompson and family, who have been occupying the Marsh property on Union avenue, have returned to New York.

The Township Committee meets in the town rooms Friday night.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The following persons were named Sunday as delegates to the East N. J. Baptist Association, held in Newark today: Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cubbrley, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Campbell and Mrs. M. W. Payne.

Albert Manning is laying pipe to conduct water from the lake on his property to his house.

Hollis Cubberley expects to spend a part of the summer in Nova Scotia.

SIDETRACK P. S. C. LOOP APPLICATION

DUNELLEN COUNCIL TREATS COL. HINE COLDLY—COLONEL MYSTIFIED.

Contrary to the general expectation, the Dunellen Council, at its meeting last night, did not consider, or seek the citizens views on the application of the Public Service Corporation for the right to build loop in the borough. Col. Hine and Division Superintendent Frank Brown, who came to the meeting with a new application designed to meet the wishes of the borough people, were among the disappointed ones. They brought an application for a loop to be constructed around Apgar's Hall, in the centre of the borough, and expected to have an opportunity to speak on it.

In explanation of a general discussion and a warm argument on the Chestnut street loop. the citizens from both ends of the borough turned out in large numbers.

When the petition for the center-of-town loop was read, Councilman Schneider moved that it "be placed on file." On a yea-and-nea vote every member of the Council voted to sidetrack the application. Col. Hine, in a tone pitched to avoid interrupting business, asked Mayor Wyckoff if there was to be a hearing on the loop. He and Superintendent Brown tip-toed out when they heard that there wasn't.

"We are simply trying to please the citizes," said Col Hine to a reporter, "and I cannot undertand why this second application should be sidetracked. We judged from the developmets of the last meeting that a loop was desired in the center of the borough and filed this second application accordingly. We are willing to put the loop anywhere from Chestnut street, or possibly a hundred feet beyond, to meet the borough's center. We have no choice in the matter and will place it to meet the public wishes. All we desire is a chance to make it possible for us to use the new one-end cars. Beyond Chestnut we cannot put the terminus, because it would upset our present schedule. Anywhere this side of that point, however ,we are willing to put it."

Citizens interested in the matter said they were as much mystified over the Council's action as the P. S. C. men. Last week it was understood that the Council would favor just such a proposition as the P. S. C., submitted last night.

BY MACMONNIES.

Equestrian Statue of Roosevelt as Rough Rider Presented Him.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—President Roosevelt was the recipient of a beautiful equestrian statuette of himself as colonel of the rough riders, which is the latest of the works of the eminent sculptor Macmonnies.

The presentation was made at the White House by Miss Janet Scudder of New York, a pupil of Macmonnies, whose work has been accepted for the Luxembourg gallery at Paris. Besides the president and Miss Scudder those present at the ceremony, which was quite informal, were Mrs. Roosevelt, the admiral of the navy and Mrs. Dewey and Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Bonaparte. The presentation will prove of notable interest, especially in the art world.

The president expressed his unfeigned pleasure.

"I don't feel myself," he said laughingly, "a really great man. The distinction of 'being done' by either St. Gaudens or Macmonnies might flatter anybody. I had always hoped to have something in my possession by Macmonnies, but it never occurred to me that I should have something by Macmonnies of me. The statuette is exactly as I should like it—the cavalry horse, the rough rider clothes and the emblematic support to the whole."

When attention was called to the inscription on the shield which supports the horse, "Vi virtute vir," meaning a man of physical and moral force, the president said he was delighted with the work of art as a whole.

THE AX AGAIN.

Mayor Weaver Has Dismissed W. H. Brooks—Order Against Clubs.

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—Mayor Weaver has dismissed William H. Brooks, chief of the Philadelphia bureau of highways. Brooks is known as the "father of the Brooks high license law."

Sheldon Potter, the new director of the department of public safety, has issued instructions to the employees in the seven bureaus under his direction that in the future the payment of political assessments shall not be compulsory. The order was as follows:

"The attention of this department has been called to the fact that there exists in the several wards of this city political clubs which employees of the city have been compelled to join. These clubs have in many instances levied and collected burdensome assessments and have in some instances undertaken to secure positions in the city departments, exacting therefor large pecuniary considerations. In many of them liquor is sold and gambling carried on.

"I therefore direct that you inform all those under your supervision that membership in such clubs will not hereafter be considered as a cause for appointment, preferment or promotion; that the director of the department of public safety considers membership in such clubs as detrimental to the maintenance of proper discipline in his department and as burdensome to its employees."

Fatally Burned by Explosion.

SANDY HILL, N. Y., June 6.—Theodore Bromley was fatally burned by an explosion of gas in the cellar of the pumping station of the Springbrook Water company. He was rescued in a dying condition by fellow workmen.

NEWS OF THE SUNSHADE.

The Fluffiest Chiffon Creations Vie With the Plain Parasols.

Variety is the note of the new parasols, for they range from the airiest and fluffiest of chiffon creations to the plain silk en tout cas. The latter is extremely fashionable, and lovers of bright color will rejoice to hear that it will be seen in emerald green, scarlet and royal blue as well as mauve, pale blue and many other delicate shades to harmonize with the light summer gowns.

The only ornamentation for the modish tout en cas is a closely gathered puffing of silk about three inches deep around the parasol and a rosellke ruche or bow to match tied around the stick.

Slightly frivolous are the plain colored silk parasols trimmed with six narrow pinked frills set close together at the edge.

A charming sunshade of maize colored silk has a wide band of olive green silk at the edge covered with a trellis pattern of maize button roses.

A white silk sunshade has a wide band of black lisse, the edges embroidered in white. It is very chic.

Apropos of sunshades the tiny parasol has been revived this summer for driving and outdoor fetes. It is a boon and a blessing, neither obstructing the view nor endangering the eyes of one's neighbor.

The only new shapes to be seen this season in parasols are the dome and regular flat Chinese forms.

The dainty capote illustrated is of pale yellow Yedda straw designed for little girls from two to six years of age. It is prettily shirred inside with double mousseline de soie and trimmed with a coronet of small marguerites. On the outside are rosettes of pale yellow satin ribbon. JUDIC CHOLLET.

MOTOR MODES.

Waterproof Gloria a Serviceable Material For Summer Motor Wraps.

A lightweight wrap is necessary for the woman who indulges in the sport of motoring. There are any number of materials from which to select. Waterproof gloria is one of the very best and most serviceable of these, with cravenette as second and cheaper choice.

The motor wrap when built for protection should cover the costume from head to foot. It should fasten securely at the throat so no dust can sift through on the dress of the wearer and fasten all the way down the front. There should be a little ruffle inside the coat sleeve fastened with an elastic band to protect the sleeve of the gown.

The new motor coat hangs full from the shoulders without any attempt at fitting. A little below the knees are three bias flounces. There are three shoulder capes finished with machine stitching and a collar to loop around the neck when necessary. The sleeves are large to admit of the wearing of elaborate gowns and have large turned back cuffs finished with inside capes held with elastic.

The three-quarter motor coat in the cut is of rubber checked cloth. It is loose and comfortable, made double breasted and fastened with large pearl buttons. The sleeves are full and thrown back Chinese style at the wrist, with a turned back cuff of rainproof silk. The turn down collar is of the same material. JUDIC CHOLLET.

[Copyright, 1899, by F. Tennyson Neely.]

A light footstep sounded on the springy board floor, nimble fingers worked a moment at the cords, then the flap was thrown open and the adjutant's office stood partially revealed. It was a big wall tent backed up against another of the same size and pattern. Half a dozen plain chairs, two rough board tables littered with books, papers and smoking tobacco, an oil stove and a cheap clothes rack on which were hanging raincoats, ponchos and a cape or two, comprised all the furniture. In a stout frame of unplaned wood, cased in their oilskins and tightly rolled, stood the national and state colors of the famous regiment; and back of them, well within the second tent, where one clerk was just lighting a camp lantern, were perched on rough tables a brace of field desks with the regimental books. The sergeant major, a veteran of years of service in the regulars, sat at one of them. A young soldier, he who had unfastened the tent flap to admit Lieut. Gray, was just returning to his seat at the other. Two orderlies lounged on a bench well beyond and back of the sergeant major's seat, and a bugler, with his hands in his pockets, was smoking a briar-root pipe at the opposite back doorway. Woe to the enlisted men who sought the presence of the colonel or adjutant through any other channel. The sergeant major would drop on him with the force of a baseball bat.

"Who all are over yonder at the chief's?" asked the adjutant, as soon as he had his visitors well inside, and the soft accent as well as the quaint phraseology told that in the colonel's confidential staff officer a southerner spoke.

"All the brigade and most regimental commanders 'cept ours, I should say, and they seem to be waiting for them. Can't we send?" was the answer, as the junior whipped off his campaign hat and sprinkled the floor with the vigorous shakes he gave the battered felt.

"Have sent," said his entertainer, briefly, as he filled a pipe from the open tobacco box and struck a safety match. "Orderly galloped after him ten minutes ago. Blow the brigade and battalion commanders! What I asked you was who are the women up there?"

"No, you didn't! You said 'who all are up yonder?' I'm a sub, and s'posed you meant men — soldiers — officers. What have I to do with anybody in petticoats?"

"And I'm a grizzled vet of a dozen years' duty, crows' feet and gray hairs a-comin'," grinned the adjutant, pulling at a long curly mustache and drawing himself up to his full height of six feet, "and when you're as old as I am and half as wise, Billy, you'll know that a pretty girl is worth ten times the thought our old frumps of generals demand. My name ain't Gordon if I haven't a mind to waltz over there through the mist and the wind just to tell them I've sent for Squeers. Then I'll get a look at the girls."

"I've got to go back," said Billy, "and you've no business to—with Mrs. Gordon and an interesting family to consider. What tent'd the ladies go to? I didn't see 'em."

"Mrs. Gordon, suh," said the adjutant, with placid superiority, "considers it a reflection on her sex when I fail to pay it due homage. Of course, you didn't see the ladies. The party was shown into the general's own domicile. Couldn't you see how many young fellows were posing in picturesque attitudes in front of it? Awe, Hank!" he suddenly shouted to an officer striding past the tent in dripping mackintosh. "Goin' up to division headquarters? Just tell the staff or the chief I've sent an orderly galloping after Squeers. He's half way to the Presidio now, but it'll be an hour before they can get back." The silent officer nodded and went on, whereat Gordon made a spring for the entrance and hailed again.

"Say, Hank! Who are the damsels?"

The answer came back through the fog:

"People from the east—looking for a runaway. Old gent, pretty daughter, and pretty daughter's pretty cousin. Heard the orders?"

"Damn the orders! They don't touch us. Where do they come from?"

"D'rect from Washington, they say. Three regiments to sail at once, and—"

"Oh, I know all that!" shouted Gordon, impatiently. "It was all over camp an hour ago! Where do they—the girls—come from? What's their name?"

"Wasn't presented," was the sulky reply. "Let a lot of stuffy old women show up in search of long-lost sons and those fellows at headquarters unload them on us in less than no time, but a brace of pretty girls—! Why, they double the gate guards so that no outsider can so much as see them. Billy, here, knows 'em. Ask him."

By this time the youngster had ranged up alongside the adjutant and was laughingly enjoying the latest arrival's tirade at the expense of the headquarters' staff, but at his closing words Lieut. Billy's grin of amusement sudden left his face, giving way to a look of blank amaze.

"I know 'em! I haven't been east of the Big Muddy since I was a kid."

"They asked for you, just the same, just after you started. 'Least one of 'em did—for What's-his-name?—the chief military legal adviser, came out bareheaded and called after you, but you were out of hearing. He said the cousin, the prettiest one, recognized you as you skipped away from the general's tent, and pointed you out to her friend. Somebody explained you were running an errand for one of those aids too lazy to go himself, and that you'd be back presently."

"Then go at once, young man," said the adjutant, laying a mighty hand on the junior's square shoulder. "Stand not upon the order of your going, but git! Never you mind about the colonel. He won't be here until after he's been there, and he's in for a rasping over this morning's inspection. Just look at the report, Sergeant major send me Col. Colt's report!" he called aloud, tossing his head back as he spoke. "Come in, Parson, come out of the wet." And, eager enough to read a famous inspector's criticisms of the appearance of the regiment, the officer addressed as Parson shoved briskly into the tent.

The young soldier who had opened the tent flap a few minutes before came forward with a folded paper which, in silence, he handed the adjutant and turned back to his desk. Mr. Gordon took the paper, but his eyes followed the soldier. Then he called, somewhat sharply:

"Morton!"

The young fellow stopped at the dividing crack between the two tent floors and slowly faced the three officers. He was slender, well built, erect. His uniform fitted him trimly and was worn with easy grace, his hands and feet were small and slender, his eyes and hair dark and fine, his features delicate and clear cut, his complexion a trifle blistered and beaten by the harsh winds that whistled in every day from the sea, and, as he turned, all three officers were struck by its extreme pallor.

"You're sick again, Morton," said the adjutant, somewhat sternly. "I thought I told you to see Dr. Heffernan. Have you done so?"

"I—wasn't sick enough," faltered the young soldier. "I was all right a minute or two—or rather this morning, sir. It'll be over presently. Perhaps it was the smell of the oil that did it—the stove is close to my desk."

But Gordon continued to look at him doubtfully.

"Move your desk across the tent for the present, anyhow," said he, "and I'll speak to the doctor myself. With all this newspaper hullabaloo about our neglect of the sick," continued he, turning to his friends, "if a man changes color at sight of a smash-up he must be turned over to the Red Cross at once. What is it, orderly?" he finished, suddenly, as the tent flaps parted and a soldier in complete uniform, girt with his belt of glistening cartridges, stood at salute, some visiting cards in his gloved hand.

"Lieut. Gray here, sir?" was the comprehensive answer. Then, catching sight of the young officer, who stepped quickly forward, he held forth the cards.

"The adjutant general's compliments, sir, and he'd be glad if the lieutenant would come over at once."

Gray took the cards, curiously studied them and then read aloud, one after the other, and placing the topmost underneath the other two as soon as read.

"MR. LISPENARD PRIME."
"MISS PRIME."
"MISS AMY LAWRENCE."

It was the last name that lay uppermost at the end and the Parson noted it.

"That's the pretty cousin, Billy," quoth he. "Case of the last shall be first, don't you see? Scoot now, you lucky boy, and tell us all about it later."

But Gray was still gazing dreamily at the cards.

"I'm sure I never met any of them before in my life," said he. "There must be some mistake. Yet—that name sounds familiar—somehow," and "that" was the only name now in sight. "I'm off," he suddenly announced, and vanished.

There was a sound of light, quick footsteps on the flooring of the rearward tent at the same time. The sergeant major glanced up from his writing; looked at a vacant desk, then at the clock, then, inquiringly, at his regimental deity—the adjutant. It was just the hour of the day at which all manner of papers were coming down from division and brigade headquarters to be duly stamped, noted and stacked up for the colonel's action. This was the young clerk Morton's especial function, but Morton had left the office and was gone.

VAN WINKLE LAND

PLACE WHERE DEAR OLD RIP FELL ASLEEP.

On the Very Spot the Play Is to Be Given This Summer—Here Will Disport Again Hendrick Hudson's Ghostly Crew.

Where is it, this slumbrous region the whole world loves and cherishes? On the southern slope of Kaaterskill Clove, in the very heart of the Catskill mountains.

Irving's village of Falling Water in all probability is the Palenville of today. All about is very like the surroundings of the Sketch Book tale; Palenville is situated at the entrance to the clove (gap, ravine) wherein are waterfalls the counterpart of those in the story; in the clove is a trail twin to the one up which Rip and his dog sadly traveled that evening angry Gretchen set them forth.

A visitor to the clove realizes as never before the plight miserable Rip Van Winkle was in, when he sees the character of the wild country through which dog and man had to make their way. The mountain all about is covered with forest growth, the precipitous sides offer no encouragement to the climber, no matter how experienced and brave. One path there is, a narrow trail worn by the Indians, winding in and out along the Kaaterskill, climbing gradually to upper levels, until at last a height of almost 4,000 feet is reached. A difficult, dangerous road to follow at the best of times, skirting the edge of deep ravines, crossing the haunts of wild beasts. Think what it was the stormy night Rip was driven forth.

Mayhap there are some that say waste not your sympathies on this imaginary character, he never existed. This the answer to the doubters—"There are those who say Rip Van Winkle is a myth, and that the story of Sleepy Hollow is an ancient Dutch legend warmed over to fit American scenery and American ideas. May such scoffers never visit those ideal mountain paths where the feet of honest Rip first broke the trail leading to the summits. May they never pluck the fragile mountain flowers or smell the sweet breath of summer on the mountain tops. May they never look from the tops of these peaks on the placid waters of the broad Hudson."

A curse this, to be sure, for a sad loss would it be never to wander in Rip Van Winkle land. Apart from the legendary and historical suggestions with which the country is rife, it is a region of wonderful charm, a picture of peace and loveliness. From the "grassy knoll" where Rip rested, one enjoys a view well worth the hard climb. The clove itself is full of beauty, its dark depths relieved by silvery cascades. Over there lies the Hudson, and the roofs of the little hamlet of "Falling Water," and off there rise the Berkshire Hills. No wonder Rip was tempted to the mountains, to a life of contemplation. No wonder he liked to lie on the hillsides and judge the earth spread before him as good.

In this day of much vacationing, understanding of Rip's attitude is not wanting; and into his land has flocked a colony that this summer is to pay tribute to the spirit which pervades the "pleasing land of drowsy head." Summer folk, of course they are; people that have cottages in Twilight park, that aptly named spot in Sleepy Hollow land. In July they are to present an out-door performance of Rip Van Winkle, and back again to life, on the very spot where he climbed and rested and philosophized, the old fellow is to be welcomed with the honors due his memory. It is to be a noteworthy performance given in this out-door theater, the setting straight from nature, the amphitheater accommodatingly furnished by the three slopes of ground.

Professionals and society folk are to take part, and over 200 performers will appear. Here will play at ghostly game of bowls Henddrick Hudson's crew; here the schnapps be drunk and that well-loved toast be given—"Here's to your good health and your family, and may you live long and prosper."

But, alas! he whom it was hoped would be the hero's part, beloved Joe Jefferson, will not be there that day. Never again will he and Schnider bring before us the man and dog that climbed the long trail of the Kaaterskills.

ELLEN THAYER.

Back to Erin.

Mr. Goering—Where is that French chauffeur that you had last summer?

Mr. Sparker—He went back to Ireland.—Puck.

Thirteen petitions were considered by the Common Council last night. Briefly summed up they are as follows:

James McCarthy's request to have taxes adjusted was denied. A petition to have new frogs placed in the trolley switches at Grant avenue and Fourth street was referred to the public affair committee. The lights committee will see whether three new lights are necessary at West Third street and Darrow avenue and the street committee will see whether flagging is necessary on Madison avenue between Stelle avenue and Randolph road. Requests for a hydrant on Park avenue between North avenue and Fourth street and one on East Sixth street near Central street were referred to the fire committee. The Town Improvement Association was awarded $100 to care for the city park. H. G. Atwater was informed that the Common Council had no right to adjust his taxes, and a similar petition of Mrs. Cornelia Rockfellow was also denied. An error in the award of the school bonds was corrected and the contract readopted.

The police committee will act on Rubenstein Brothers' petition for an auctioneer's license. The City Clerk was ordered to inform D. J. Galbraith that so long as plans conformed with the ordinance anyone could build a flat house in the vicinity of Fourth street and Spooner avenue. The petitions of Watts & Co. and Charles Sebring for iron awnings on West Front street were denied as was one of the Howard Clock Co., of New York, to erect a street clock on West Front street. The police call box at Carlton and Watchung avenues will be removed to Hillside and Evergreen avenues.

From the general to the fire fund $1,000 was ordered transferred. H. C. VanEmburgh will make the transfers on the city map for one year for $100. Two American flags will be bought for use on the city flag pole. Clauses from the National Board of Underwriters' building law will be incorported in the proposed ordinance for this city and that will defer action for a time. The County Court will be asked on June 21 to appoint commissioners for street improvements in various parts of the city. An appropriation of $150 was made for repairs to the steamer and inspection and insurance of the boiler at fire headquarters. The State sewage commission has approved plans for th extension of the local sewage system. Among the minor business of the Common Council last night was the consideration of thirteen resolutions. The request of James McCarthy to have his taxes adjusted was referred to the finance committee

GOVERNOR WHO WILL DO NO BUSINESS ON SATURDAY

PLAINFIELDER AS CHIEF EXECUTIVE OF RHODE ISLAND LIVES UP TO SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

George H. Utter, Governor of Rhode Island and a former Plainfielder, is a Seventh-Day Baptist, and therefore on the last day of the week the executive department of the State does no business. Strangers who come from a distance to see the Governor often choose the week-end to travel, in and great is their distress, when, on arriving at the Capitol, they learn that Governor Utter is conducting his Sabbath school in Westerly and cannot discuss temporal affairs until after sunset. Rhode Islanders, therefore, who are acquainted with the Governor's religious scruples, make their calls upon him before sundown on Friday. He is an occasional visitor to this city, where there is a large congregation of Seventh-Day Baptists, adn his strict adherance to the denomination's teachings has won for him warm praise.

The inauguration of President Roosevelt happened to fall upon a Saturday, and the large delegation of officials that Rhode Island sent to Washington went without Governor Utter. Because Saturday is the Executive's Sabbath, the Lieutenant Governor, Frederick H. Jackson, a Congregationalist, has become unusually prominent through serving as the chief guest of honor at Saturday functions. Many of the gala events of the State occur on that day, especially in the warm weather, when the shore resorts spread their far-famed clam dinners. Upon these occasions the Lieutenant Governor represents the State.

The Governor's Sabbath, however, closes when the sun sets, and sometimes he makes a public appearance at nightfall, but he will doubtless be responsible during his term of office for robbing Saturday of its normal importance as a day of public festivities. Already the day has lost much of its oldtime gayety.

The Governor is the editor and owner of "The Westerly Sun," which is published every day in the week except Saturday. It has no scruples against going to press on Saturday, however. Half of the town of Westerly observes as its Sabbath the last day of the week, and the other half the first day. The result is the mills are running and shops are open throughout the week. It is said that certain Seventh-Day Baptists and Sunday observers have gone into partnership with one another in many instances so as to allow the same places a chance to do business both Saturdays and Sundays. However that may be, the State has passed special laws to permit the extreme southwestern part of Rhode Island to work or rest on the first and last days of the week, just as it may see fit.

Recently the State has become deeply concerned about the Governor's religious views. It was announced in the papers the other day that the Chief Executive was expected to be present at the first annual field day of the Central Trades and Labor Union and the Building Trades Council to be held upon a Sunday. The announcement brought forth a great amount of discussion. Sunday observers protested against the prospective appearance of the Governor at athletic contests and baseball games on the first day of the week. They asserted that if he attended this field day he would break one of the laws of Rhode Island, and, what is far worse, he would be giving the sanction of the State to Sunday sports. The Governor listened to these notes of warning and stayed away. He sent a banner, however, to the Sabbath breakers to be offered as a prize in one of the contests.

PAINT DUG OUT OF GROUND

Shafts Forty Feet Deep Sunk in Strange Mine Located in Central Oregon.

The story of a soap mine in Idaho from which Pullman trains obtain their soap supply is outdone by a report from Lane county, in central Oregon, to the effect that paint has been discovered in the earth and is being mined like gold, says a Portland special to the Baltimore American. The paint is said to be of good quality, and the owners of the mine think they have a bonanza.

Details of the methods used in paint mining are not contained in the report, but it is said that in mining for the paint several shafts 30 to 40 feet deep were sunk. The shafts penetrated seevral strata, and the paint was found to exist in successive layers, with a thin strip of separating sediment. The strata have a width of four to five feet, and the color of the paint in the successive strata varies from an excellent ochre to a dark hue. The owners of the mine expect to market their paint successfully, and will have an exhibit of it at the Lewis and Clark exposition, which will be held in Portland from June 1 to October 15.

The story of the paint deposit is vouched for by persons who have seen the mine. The same persons vouch for a tale to the effect that in the Willamette valley, which is one of the most fertile spots in the world, sheep grow so fat that when they get on their backs they lie helpless like turtles. It is said that small boys in the Willamette valley make ready money turning sheep over at so much a turn.

ANTIQUITY OF PLATINUM.

Plate of the Rare Metal Discovered in Tomb of the Seventh Century.

Perhaps some Egyptologist will shortly discover that radium was known to the ancients, for most of the recent discoveries appear to be but duplications of earlier results. It has been generally supposed, states the New York Herald, that platinum was first discovered in the early half of the sixteenth century, when gold ore from the Spanish mines in Darien was found to sometimes include particles of a white metal possessing properties of what the alchemists termed the "noble" metals, but which could not be identified. The export of this new metal was prohibited, and it was not until 1750 that it became generally known and made the subject of investigation.

Two or three years ago M. Berhelot, a French savant, while in Egypt, was examining the contents of a tomb ascribed to an Egyptian queen of the seventh century before the Christian era. Among articles of use and adornment he found a plate of what he at first took to be silver, but which, upon closer investigation, he discovered to be platinum, probably from the alluvial deposits washed down from the upper Nile in times of flood. Since then other discoveries led to the knowledge that the metal was known to the Egyptians and esteemed for its useful properties.

LIFE SAVED BY QUICK WIT.

Policeman Impersonated God to Keep a Crazy Man from Killing His Wife.

"Quick wit is of more value to an officer than being a good shot," said a policeman in Kansas City, Kan., recently, reports the Kansas City Star. "I know a negro policeman who saved a woman's life by knowing what to say at the right minute. It was this way: A man became crazy one morning with a knife in his hand and he ran into the kitchen where his wife was at work. The woman ran into the yard, screaming for help. The crazy husband caught her, and was standing over her with upraised knife, when a negro policeman came around the corner about 20 feet away. He could not reach the man in time to save the woman, for the knife was in the act of descending, and to shoot might result in injury to the woman.

"'God Almighty tells me to kill you,' the crazed man said.

"'Stop!' cried the negro policeman. 'I'm God, and I command you to stop!'

"The knife fell from the hand of the insane man, as he turned his eyes to the sky from whence he supposed the voice had come. Before he learned how he had been tricked, the policeman had handcuffs on him."

Same Old Discipline.

"I hear you're married again, Uncle Joe."

"Yas-sah! Ah's done tuk another wife, sho'!"

"And did you take a bridal tour?"

"No, suh, Ah ain' had no 'casion ter chastise huh yet, suh, an' when Ah do, Ah won't take no bridle to huh. No, suh, I'll use de same ol' strap Ah used on mah othar wives, suh!"—Cleveland Leader

FISH PEDDLER KILLS HIS RIVAL

Two Italians in a Fatal Duel With Knives and Pistol.

MURDERER FLED.

Bloody Battle Witnessed by School-children on North Avenue—Identity of Slayer and Victim Unknown.

Two rival Italian fish peddlers from New York quarreled over the division of territory in the Italian colony on North avenue this noon. One of them is now lying dead in the morgue, stabbed a half a dozen places and shot through the breast, and the other is fleeing before Chief Kiely.

The peddlers have been in the habit of coming to the city with baskets of fish every day, peddling their stock from door to door among the Italians. None of the Italians in the colony appeared to know the murderer by name after the fight, and all the police could learn about them is that the dead man is Lorenz Foush who was commonly called "Joe." They both came from New York.

The men met opposite the Hygiea ice plant. They were fighting within a few seconds, and the fight rapidly took on a desperate character. Knives came out on both sides, and the steel played for several minutes. The fight was witnessed by a number of school children, on their way home to lunch, from the other side of the street. One of the men sprang back suddenly, dodged a blow from the other's knife and drew a revolver. He fired and Foush fell. The murderer shoved the pistol back in his pocket and ran up the street.

John Sharkey, a Richmond street butcher, heard the shot and ran out. Foust was just drawing his last breath as Sharkey reached his side. Some of the children ran for Dr. Zeglio, who was in a house near by, but the doctor found nothing for him to do.

Chief Kiely was notified a few minutes after the shooting, and he chased after the murderer in a buggy. It was thought at first that the man had run through a house and fled by a back way to Scotch Plains, but later trailing indicated he had jumped on an eastbound freight train at Berckman street. Chief Kiely made the wires hum in all directions and is hopeful of running his man down before night.

Foush is about forty years old. He is supposed to have a wife and five children in New York.

Later the murderer was seen getting off a train at Cranford.

MUST CHANGE PLANS PLAINFIELD THEATRE

AUTHORITIES WILL NOT ISSUE BUILDING PERMIT.

Plans for the proposed Plainfield theatre are held pending material alterations, without which the board of engineers and councilmanic fire committee will not give their approval. Work on the remodelling of Washington hall will be delayed until the theatre people submit amended plans.

Chief Doane insists for public safety that the stage and proscenium walls be made fire proof; that asbestos and water curtains be used on the stage; that the roof of the stage be fire proof; that the auditorium aisles be of the proper width; that the fire walls be thicker; that automatic sprinklers be placed over and under the stage, and a few other changes made.

First Borough High License.

Borough Collector George F. Brown has received from Charles Jensen, the first $700 liquor license fee to be paid in North Plainfield. All the other dealers had their licenses renewed just before the increase was made by the county court and are paying but $400 for the privilege until next May.

Mercury Takes a Tumble.

Yesterday's rain knocked the bottom out of the thermometer. The chill wind and the chillier water shoved the mercury down twenty-six degrees. At 10 o'clock yesterday the thermometer was 80 and at noon today 54 degrees.

MEN'S CLUB HOST OF WOMEN FRIENDS

ENTERTAINMENT AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH ENJOYABLE.

To mark their last gathering until fall, the Men's Club, of the Congregational church, entertained its women friends last night. About two hundred persons attended the affair, which was the most successful of its kind the club has ever held.

Walter David, reader and entertainer, of New York, won much laughter and applause with recitations and stories. A double string quartette, under the direction of Arthur S. Mosher, played a number of selections.

Refreshments were served. The committees in charge of the affair were made up as follows: Entertainment, F. A. Weeks, Curtis Bates, Rev. C. L. Goodrich; refreshment, Sidney Dunning, M. C. VanArsdale, Clarence LaRue.

GERMAN MARINE BAND TO BE HERE TONIGHT

FAMOUS ORGANIZATION TO APPEAR AT THE CASINO.

The musically inclined portion of our populace are no doubt anxiously awaiting the engagement of the famous German Marine Band and Herr Louis Kindermann, its masterly director, which is announced for tonight at the Casino.

Among the various bands now touring this country, there is perhaps none that can boast of as extensive a repertoire of selections, and which includes grand and comic operatic, also classic and popular music, all of which is played with equal perfection. This is the same grand organization that created the musical furore of the St. Louis Fair, and is composed of fifty artist musicians and celebrated soloists, representing Germany's best and most skillful musical academy graduates. The organization is now on a triumphant transcontinental tour, which is limited and calls for concerts at the principal cities and musical centers only, prior to their return to Berlin next November.

Mission Circle Elects.

The Young Ladies' Mission Circle, of the First M. E. church, held its election last night. The officers: Miss Fannie Chandler, president; Miss Alice Higins, first vice president; Miss Virginia Devine, second vice president; Blanche Giles, third vice president; Miss Nan Wilson, fourth vice president; Miss Nellie Clarkson, corresponding secretary; Miss Catherine Slade, recording secretary; Miss Clara Slade, treasurer; Miss Lucy Ruckman, mite-box secretary.

Elks' Annual Excursion.

Elizabeth lodge, No. 189, B. P. O. E., has already issued tickets for its annual excursion which is to be held this year on June 29, with Dreamland, Coney Island, as its destination. A good-sized delegation from this city will be in attendance.

BARBERS WANT LICENSES

Every "Tonsorial Artist" in the City has Filed an Application.

INSPECTION RESULT.

Stick Alum is Found in Some Shops—Lack of Sterilizing Arrangements.

In accordance with the provisions of the new ordinance licensing and regulating barber shops, the Board of Health has received an application for a permit from every barber now doing business in the city. An inspection was made of all the shops and general conditions were found to be very good. No sponges or powder puffs were used in any shop, and with one exception, each shop had a plentiful supply of towels so that each patron could have a clean one. Stick alum was used in a majority of the shops, but the most common fault was the lack of antiseptic or germicide for sterilizing the razors, scissors, combs and brushes.

In many cases the wash basin in the shop was not connected with the sewer, but emptied into a pail, which in turn, was emptied into a sink outside of the shop. Hot water was obtained in many cases from an ordinary receptacle, and in one instance in a coffee pot.

The barbers seem anxious to comply with the ordinance and the changes necessary to comply with the rules can be made easily. Detail reports of the inspection of each shop can be seen at the office of the Board of Health at any time. As soon as the necessary changes are made in the barber shops applications will be granted.

ALL COLLEGIATES NEXT FOR PLAINFIELD

STRONG TEAM SCHEDULED FOR SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Not being satisfied with the general makeup of the Roxborough team which was scheduled to appear on Crescent Oval on Saturday, and wanting to present a first-class attraction, the local management has cancelled the contest with that club and instead will be opposed by the "All-Collegiate" team composed entirely of college players. Every man on the visiting team is very fast and most of them are known to the local fans. They have defeated many of the best college and semi-professional teams in the country this season and enjoy the distinction of having defeated last season the team now representing Plainfield. Mahoney and Dolan, either of whom will be called upon to pitch, are recognized as twirlers of the first-class, and everyone will be pleased to see that old favorite Cotter, formerly of Westfield, behind the rubber. Particular bright stars on the team are Bouche, short stop, Fallon, left-field, Conan, first base, Carroll, second base and O'Harra center-field and captain. Mr. Daab assures the public that the team is the best and that the contest will be a fine one. The locals will have to play their best ball to win and it will be no "cinch" for them. The lineup of the two teams will be as follows:

All-Collegiate — Carroll, 2b; O'Hara, cf—Capt.; Bouche, ss; Fallon, lf; Mahoney, rf—p; Connolly, 3b; Cotter, c; Conan, 1b; Dolan, rf.

Plainfield—Cosgrove, cf; Oldring, 2b; Connolly, rf; Cregan, lf; Kiernan, ss; Leonard, 3b; Driscoll, 1b; Lamar, c; Beck or Deegan, p.

U. S. Hotel's Opening.

Persons desiring board and rooms at either of the places can be accommodated by communicating with the proprietors.

A Birthday Surprise.

A birthday surprise party was tendered Mrs. Carrie Howard, of Central avenue, by twenty-five members of Mizpah Lodge, Odd Ladies, Monday night. With the aid of games, music and general sociability, several hours were passed in a delightful manner. Refreshments were served shortly before midnight.

Souvenir Postal Cards

The latest fad in souvenir postal cards are those produced by the famous oilette process, direct from either a water painting or water color. Raphael Tuck & Sons Co., of 122 Fifth avenue, who control the sales, have named the series the "wide, wide world." They are easily the handsomest on the market.

CITY'S HEALTH IN MAY

Only Twenty-four deaths from Communicable Disease.

ANALYSIS OF MILK

Formaldehyde Found in One Case—Dealer's Licenses Granted—Two Deaths from Tuberculosis.

The sanitary conditions of the city still remain satisfactory as shown by the monthly reports presented at the Board of Health meeting, yesterday. There are only two contagious disease cases under quarantine. During the month there were the following communicable diseases reported:

Scarlet fever, 4; diphtheria, 3; typhoid fever, 5; measles, 5; chickenpox, 5; tuberculosis, 2. There were two deaths from the last named disease. The board is sure the typhoid fever was contracted outside of the city.

During the month the usual practice of dairy inspection and milk analysis was continued and conditions were found to be satisfactory, with the exception that formaldehyde was detected in one dealers milk and cream. Steps were taken at once to prevent its further use.

Milk dealers who failed to make application for renewal of permits, did so during the month and there were several new applications as well. These were granted:

A. R. Phillips, Chas. F. Debele, Geo. R. Wooden, P. J. Haines, Mrs. Geo. Schuck, Frank Weiland, F. M. Suydam, W. S. Terry, Sam'l Hetfield, I. W. Fisher, Thos. O'Gorman, G. W. Henry, Thos. Callahan & Son, G. W. Smalley, L. G. Henry, Wm. H. Clark, Alex Gorden, W. J. Dealaman, Geo. Viebrock, Mack Scudder Co., Geo. Giebelhouse, M. C. Jennings, J. Hummel, D. S. Cole, S. Sharkey.

DON'T HOLD A DANCE WITHOUT A PERMIT

POLICE BUTT IN ON THE SOCIAL WHIRL—ARIONS SUMMONED.

The orchestra was playing "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and the young people were tripping lightly at the Arion Club last night when officer William Messler poked his head in the door. He had an air of business, and Chairman Aleck Muir, of the committee, went over to discover what the business was.

"Have you got a permit?" asked Messler.

Muir didn't know a permit was needed.

"Sure," said Messler. "I guess you can go on with this thing, but you'd better see the chief in the morning and explain."

Muir, V. Nash and Leonce Texier saw Chief Kiely this morning.

"Is a permit needed for dances?" they asked.

"Didn't you know that?" asked the chief.

The committeemen didn't. They said later that they couldn't find anybody else who did, or any bona fide organization that had ever secured one.

AUTOIST ARRESTED.

George R. Morris Charged With Speeding and Ignoring Cop.

George R. Morris, an automobile Judge Runyon in the city court next Wednesday, charged with speeding his car in excess of the legal limit up North avenue yesterday afternoon. Morris was detected by Patrolman Higgins, who says the chauffeur zipped on without paying any attention to his signals. Higgins spotted tne number and got his man later in the day.

Mayor Smalley, W. A. Coddington and James Davis have been summoned as witnesses against the autoist. Chief Kiely had the hearing set for next week in order to perfect the case against Mr. Morris.

The Way to Find a Dog.

A dog belonging to S. P. T. Wilbur disappeared Sunday, and Mr. Wilbur advertised for it in Monday's paper. A short time after the paper was out a Dunellen woman telephoned to Mayor Buckle, in whose name the ad. had been inserted, that she had the dog. It is supposed that the animal followed an automobile until exhaustion compelled it to stop, and then limped homeward. It was weak and shakey when the Dunellen woman gave it shelter.

CONTRACTOR'S MISTAKE GIVES $1,000 TO THE CITY

ONLY ONE INSTANCE OF MONEY MAKING IN NEW HIGH SCHOOL WORK.

Through the announcement that the new Plainfield High School would not be completed until January, the Board of Education learned that there had been numerous delays in the work and mistakes on the part of contractors, yet it had been the gainer nearly every time.

G. H. Woolston, inspector for the supervising architects, informed the board that the city had cleared up $1,000 at one stroke by a contractor making a mistake in addition. When he submitted his bid, it was just that much less than what he intended it should be, but even if it had been included, he would have been lower than the others. It was for one of the minor contracts and Mr. Woolston ventured the remark that no one but the city is making anything out of it.

In other instances, changes in plans have held up work while the price of material was dropping and when it was purchased money was saved. Several of the contractors in figuring had also gone low on supplies and had come out just barely ahead when they placed their orders, the prices having risen.

STREET PARADE BEFORE RARITAN'S FIRST GAME

CITIZENS TO MARCH TO BRASS BAND MUSIC.

Saturday will be a gala day for the baseball fans in Raritan. The season will be opened on that day. The town has a new ball team; a new enclosed ball ground, with a spacious grandstand. The strong Flemington nine will be the opponents. Boutelier, of Newark, and Allen, of Plainfield, will be the battery for Raritan and on the team will also be "Spike" Enright, of Plainfield safe-works fame, and his brother, "Mike" Enright. "Charley" Miller, an old-time local favorite, will play.

There will be a street parade starting at 3 o'clock. The teams and prominent citizens will be in line in autos and carriages, escorted by the Crescent Military Band, of Raritan. Altogether it will be a big day for the Raritanians.

FRANCHISE QUESTION COMMISSION NAMED

GOVERNOR STOKES APPROVES SUBSTITUTE FOR COLBY BILL.

Governor Stokes has approved the committee substitute for Assemblyman Colby's bill, No. 148, authorizing the appointment by the governor of a commission of five members to investigate the whole subject of franchises granted by municipalities to public utility corporations in their relation to the municipalities and to the State, and to advise the Legislature in conection therewith. The provisions of the bill, in brief, are as follows:

"The governor shall appoint a commission of five persons, whose duty it shall be to investigate the entire subject of the grant of franchises by municipalities to public utility companies, permitting the use and occupation of the public streets and highways, and to report to the next session of the Legislature, together with such recommendations in connection therewith as it shall deem proper, including a recommendation as to what legislation, if any, regulating, controlling and limiting the power of municipalities in making such grants, ought to be enacted.

"The commissioners shall investigate and report upon the advisability of having the value of franchises of corporations using the public streets for trolley, gas, telephone, telegraph or water purposes, annually assessed by some appropriate taxing authority and taxed at local rates of taxation."

GRANT TWO FRANCHISES

Water Company to Pay Piscataway $500; P. S. C. Nothing.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Partial Victory for Township Committee in One Case, Complete Breakdown in the Other.

The Public Service Corporation is to get a gas main franchise for nothing and the Piscataway Water Company is to get a $500 franchise in place of its present one from the Piscataway Township Committee. The fencing bout between the corporations and the township solons reached that termination yesterday after a consideration of the two matters, and conferences with the representatives of the corporations, by the committee behind closed doors.

The committee went into executive session immediately after cleaning up the payment of bills and other routine matters, and remained closeted in a private parlor for the better part of two hours. Col. Hine, the P. S. C. representative, was called in first. When the committee learned just how much importance the Public Service people attached to the franchise, Chairman Giles sent for Robert Carson, the representative of the Water Company. Mr. Carson was in the room longer than Col. Hine. He had more to argue about. His company already had a free franchise, which, although the committee had denounced it as an instrument obtained by apparently underhand methods, stood a very good chance of being sustained by the courts if its validity were ever brought into question.

When the committee filed out Township Counsel W. A. Coddington announced the results of the deliberations.

"The committee has been in conversation with Col. Hine of the Public Service Corporation, with the representative of the Piscataway Water Company, and with Mr. Bird, who offered $1,000 at the last meeting for the water franchise asked for by the Piscataway Water Commpany.

"Mr. Bird had not organized a company nor asked formally for a franchise, and was not, therefore, ready under the law. He was asked if he was ready to organize a corporation, and said 'No,' and withdrew his tender"

"You might tell the reason, Mr. Counsel," observed Mr. Bird.

"Mr. Bird says the franchise would be tainted—open to attack in the courts," explained Mr. Coddington; "although I do not see where the taint would come in."

"In dealing with the Piscataway Water Company," continued the counsel, "the committee insisted that $2,000 be paid for the franchise. The Water Company absolutely refused to accept this condition. It offered $500. We think this figure entirely to low, but remember that they have the first ordinance and have declared that rather than pay more than $500 they will fight the matter in the courts. A law suit would consume perhaps a year and a half, lead to expense, and no one knows how it would terminate. We might win, or they might win. We aim to keep out of the courts, and remembering that the company has agreed to pay all the expenses attendant upon the re-passage of the ordinance, the committee, after careful consideration, thinks it best to accept the company's offer.

"As to the gas franchise, the representative told us, and his company so instructed him to tell us, that the application would be withdrawn unless it was granted without cost. In this matter the committee was compelled to consider the petition presented by the people of East Bound Brook and Lincoln, asking for the installation of gas service. The committee recognized that they represent these petitions and that their wishes must be considered. In deference to the expressions from their constituents the committee will eliminate the $1,000 clause form the franchise."

The two franchises were rushed through their first and second readings without comment from the three committeemen. They will be passed on their final readings next week.

PROSECUTOR REGER'S WORK.

Satisfaction Over Way He Has Handled Cases.

The new Prosecutor of the Pleas of Somerset County, John F. Reger, has completed the work made for him by the April Grand Jury, which returned fifteen true bills of indictment. To eight of these the parties either pleaded guilty or non vult. Seven pleaded not guilty and six have stood trial and been convicted. The other indictment is against the Novotney family, charged with receiving goods stolen from the New Jersey Central Railroad by "Dutch" Ides and his pals, and this is off for the term, owing to the illness of one of the family.

Mr. Reger's record is considered an excellent one for a beginner as a prosecuting attorney and the results he has secured seem to have given general satisfaction throughout the county.

To Attend Conferences.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, editor of The Sabbath Recorder, who is now at Watch Hill, R. I., with his family, has arranged to attend several conferences of the Seventh-Day Baptist church to be held during the summer in various parts of the country. He will take an active part at each.

ROYAL CEREMONIAL

Crown Prince and Cecilia Wedded Last Night.

ENDS WITH TORCHLIGHT DANCE.

Great Gathering of Notables Greet Kaiser's Heir and His Bride—Guns Boom All Over German World. Emperor Saluted Couple.

BERLIN, June 7.—Crown Prince Frederick William and Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin were married in the palace chapel last night while the clock in the plaza marked 5, and guns here and in every garrison town in Prussia and in every sea where German ships were under orders began firing twenty-one guns at the same astronomical moment.

In the chapel several hundred persons, one of the most distinguished assemblages that could be gathered in Europe, saw the simple wedding service of the Lutheran church. Some of the sixty to seventy members of royal families present from German and foreign states were the Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria, representing

CROWN PRINCE AND HIS BRIDE.

Emperor Francis Joseph; the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, Prince Henry, consort of the queen of the Netherlands; the Duke and Duchess of Aosta, representing the king and queen of Italy; Prince Arthur of Connaught, representing Great Britain; Prince and Princess Albert of Belgium, the Duke of Oporto, representing Portugal; Prince Ferdinand of Roumania and the crown princes of Denmark and Greece.

These all stood in a wide circle around the altar, for there were no pews, and behind them, without regard to rank, were the members of the foreign embassies, with Ambassador Tower and Mrs. Tower among them; the cabinet ministers, a number of admirals, the commanders of army corps, a couple of hundred men and women of the high nobility, one newspaper correspondent from each of the principal countries and five correspondents from Germany.

The crown princess (for she was already crown princess by civil rite) came in on the arm of the crown prince. She was wearing a wreath of fresh myrtle on her head, over which was a small crown, set there by the empress, of diamonds and rubies set in a gold frame on purple velvet. A triangle of diamonds rested on the front of her low cut bodice, and round her neck was a necklace of large diamonds.

The wedding dress, which has been so often described, was of Russian silver brocade, with a train four and a half yards in length and two and a quarter yards wide attached to the shoulders. Four maids of honor in dresses of pale blue silk, the crown prince's favorite color, carried the train, and behind them walked two pages. The bridal veil was of old Brussels lace.

The crown prince wore the light blue uniform of the First foot guards, with a major's insignia and his decorations. He carried his helmet in his left hand.

Behind the bride and groom came the empress on the arm of the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, brother of the bride, and the emperor with the Grand Duchess Anastasia, mother of the bride. These and other members of the royal family stood on the right of the altar.

The choir in the loft above sang "God Give His Angels Charge Concerning Thee," set to music by Mendelssohn. This text was carved on the cradle of the crown prince. The congregation joined in singing from the programme the familiar hymn, "Praise the Master."

Dr. Dryander, the court chaplain, with nine of the cathedral clergy standing near him, read the marriage service.

Dr. Dryander then shook hands with the crown prince and kissed the hand of the crown princess. He then presented the bridal couple with a Bible ornamentally bound.

The kaiser kissed the bride on both cheeks and then kissed his son, the empress doing likewise.

The bridal party slowly moved out, followed by the princes and princesses, while the chapel organ sounded aloud the ever familiar wedding march.

After supper had been served a torchlight dance, a unique practice at weddings in the house of Hohenzollern for centuries, was performed by twelve pages, bearing thick candles about two and a half feet tall. The crown prince took the hand of the crown princess and walked slowly through the dance behind the pages.

Part of the honeymoon will be spent at Hubertusstock, a hunting lodge in a large forest near Eberswalde, Prussia, where the emperor goes deer stalking.

LIGHT ON THE QUESTION!

The question of summer comfort is solved when a Gas Range is installed in the kitchen. It eliminates the drudgery connected with a coal fire as well as the over heated house which accompanies coal-cooked meals. It does away with long fires and gives the housewife time for recreation and pleasure. As extensive meals can be prepared with little labor, unexpected company has no terrors for the household that cooks with gas. We sell ranges from $9.50 to $15.00. $2.00 down and $2.00 a month. Connections are free.

AWAIT CZAR'S WORD

Washington and Powers Hope For Peace Soon.

LINEVITCH IS STILL FOR WAR.

Russian Army Chief Ready to Take Offensive, Believing That He Can Defeat the Japs in Manchuria. Details of Sea Fights.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Pending the decision of the czar regarding war or peace in the far east the president and the European ambassadors, with whom he is daily conferring, have agreed that silence regarding their activity is necessary, and word to this effect has been passed along lest Russia take offense and go contrary to what the neutral powers believe to be for her own advantage.

Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, remains without advices from St. Petersburg that throw any light on the probable policy of the czar. The ambassador has not yet received an acknowledgment of his long cablegram regarding his conference with the president.

Dispatches from the headquarters of the Russian army at Godzyadani, Manchuria, say that, undismayed by Rojestvensky's defeat and full of confidence as to the outcome of the approaching battle, Lieutenant General Linevitch is for war to the bitter end, and he believes that the Manchurian army is now strong enough to assume the aggressive.

Interviewed and questioned as to whether he was for war or peace, the commander in chief replied firmly and without the slightest hesitation:

"Most certainly I am for war. I am a soldier. The emperor's will is naturally my law, but my voice now as before is for the continuance of the fight.

"With the destruction of our fleet vanishes of course the hopes of those who at the beginning of the war wished to make peace at Tokyo, but our defeat at sea has not interfered with my plans—absolutely not one whit. I consider myself strong enough now not only to hold my ground, but even to advance.

"I am no prophet and have no desire to be one, but I firmly believe that I can and will defeat the Japanese in Manchuria.

"I have asked the war office to send me reservists of the youngest classes instead of older ones, not because the latter make poor soldiers, but because with plenty of young and vigorous reservists it would be unjust as well as inadvisable to call the older men from their more settled life."

A Manila report says that Admiral Enquist, referring in conversation to the recent naval battle, said:

"When the battle commenced I was far in advance of the main fleet, engaged in scouting with the Oleg, Aurora and Jemtchug. Japanese torpedo boats appeared in numbers, supported by a few cruisers. A heavy engagement followed. My ships were mainly painted black and white and stood out large targets against the Japanese ships, which were painted an olive green color and which could hardly be seen. Owing to the incessant fire which the Japanese concentrated on my flagship, the Oleg, I transferred my flag to the Aurora. From her bridge I could not see our main fleet, and, believing it had been defeated and had scattered, I decided for the sake of humanity to retire."

The admiral praised the Japanese gunnery and tactics.

Of all the accounts of the naval battle in the far east which have come to hand none is more thrilling than that description of the fight which the Russian battleship Borodino made against the odds which she was called upon to meet. The four 12.4-inch guns which she carried in steel turrets forward and aft were her main dependence in long range fighting, and according to the cabled account the two guns of the forward turret were disabled soon after the action began. This cylinder of eleven inch Krupp steel was struck by a projectile, and as it knocked senseless for the time all those who were in the turret it must have been one of the heaviest kind.

Surrounded by eight ships of the enemy and whose sheils made her look as though she were the center of a school of spouting whales, this vessel for more than two hours sustained the combined attack, and then with forward turret smashed, superstructure riddled, half of her crew killed and more than half of her guns disabled the much battered wreck finally succumbed to a torpedo and plunged under, fighting to the last.

PHILADELPHIA, June 7.—Orders for a thousand cars for the Imperial Japanese railways have just been placed with Pennsylvania car building companies. Five hundred of the cars will be of the gondola class. Contracts for 900 additional box cars for quick delivery will be made in a few days.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 7.—William C. McHarg, the oldest lawyer in active practice in this part of the state, was found dead at his office last night. He came to work as usual and lay down for a nap. Death came while he slept. Mr. McHarg was eighty-seven years old.

Dr. Patton on a Holiday.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 7.—Dr. Francis L. Patton, president of Princeton Theological seminary, has left for Bermuda, where he will spend the summer on his estate. He was accompanied by Mrs. Patton.

Plainfield, N. J., June 7, 1905.

There being a pronounced lull in annual conventions, Binghamton advertises a tornado to keep itself in the public eye.

Pennsylvania Railroad announces an eighteen hour train between New York and Chicago, arriving in the Windy City in the morning and returning in the afternon. Schedule time is O. K., but most civilized people will welcome a cut in the time necessary to spend in the western city.

The first arrest here under the new State automobile law was made yesterday. There's room for a pile more. In Washington Park there is one autoist who needs to be called to book for speeding on the stretch and in the East end of North Plainfield there lives another who should be haled to court to tell why it is necessary for him to dash around corners in this city at a rate dangerous to human life.

The Paterson Daily Press has presented to its readers an illustrated souvenir edition which is certainly a credit to that prosperous city. It can be said conservedly that the supplement is the best that has been published by any paper in this State in a long while. Not least among its attractive features is the typographical appearance presented. We don't have to live in Paterson to fully appreciate the progressive Daily Press of that city.

THE RORUM.

Conductor's Stupidity.

Editor, The Daily Press:

The article in The Daily Press of June 5, "A Conductor's Stupidity," calls attention to an inconvenience of long suffering to the commuters of that train. It is a matter not only of stupidity but of satisfying personal convenience on his part. To save going through all the cars and to force passengers into the rear cars he ordered the two forward cars locked. This has not and will not prove successful nor will the present method of running the train over the bridge. It is inconvenient to passengers coming from Park avenue and frequently I have noticed ladies coming from the waiting rooms forced to board the smoking car if they would take the train, because it is run pass the station. The time seems propitious for an improvement in the conductor serving the interests of the passengers—not his own.

East Jersey Tennis Play.

The next play in the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association series of tournaments will be the men's singles championship to be held at the Jersey City Golf Club, on Saturdays, June 17 and 24. The Plainfield Country Club and the Park Club will be represented. There will also be men's doubles championship at the Roselle Casino on Saturday, July 1; Monday, July 3, and Tuesday, July 4. There will be the women's singles championship at the Bergen Point Lawn Tennis Club, Wednesday, September 20-23.

School Election Blocked.

On account of irregularities in the proceedings, the State Attorney-General has refused to accept the returns on the recent Piscataway school election at which a $20.000 structure, to be located in New Market, was voted in the face of a hot fight by South Plainfielders and Kerwin Corner voters. Another election will probably have to be held. W. A. Coddington, of this city, has been employed by the school board, to represent it in the matter, and Counsellor S. S. Swackhamer is advising the anti-New Market forces.

Painters to Parade.

Local Painters' Union, No. 480, will march in the parade in Elizabeth tomorrow, as guests of the Elizabeth painters.

In this feature of the work all of the local Christian Endeavor and other young people's societies in the city assist, each taking turn in providing some form of amusement for the children.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

At the next Council meeting Councilman Ryno will introduce the subject of gates at the Central crossing at Chestnut street. Mr. Ryno is convinced that the railroad should be compelled to guard the crossing, and public sentiment sustains him. Narrow escapes from death are of almost daily occurrence at the crossing, and the citizens have begun to ask why the Council ignores the matter. Mr. Ryno attempted to introduce the subject at the meeting Monday night, but was shut off by a hastily made motion of adjournment. "All right," observed Mr. Ryno grimly, "I am shut off now, but you'll hear about this matter at the next meeting." It is declared by a citizen who has given the matter close attention that not only the railroad, but the borough is criminally liable for the continued failure to safeguard the crossing. His contention is that the borough has the power to compel the railroad to protect the citizens, and may be held responsible for its failure to do so.

A team is to represent Dunellen on the diamond this season after all. The old familiar poster has appeared in the postoffice window, advertising a game against the Clinton Avenues, of Plainfield, Saturday afternoon. The line-up of the Dunellens, excepting two outfielders, was announced yesterday as follows: Smith, p; Overton, c; Conway, 3b; B. Fletcher, 1b; Giles, 2b; Craig, ss; F. Fletcher, lf.

Quicksands are furnishing a lot of trouble, and adding greatly to the expense, of the P. S. C. in laying the gas mains in the eastern end of the borough. The cribwork necessary to get the pipes down properly in the shifting soil adds, it is said, something like a dollar a foot to the original estimate of the company's engineers.

Township Commissioner Thomas Brantingham expects to grapple with the job of feeding the hundred or more grooms, who will be in attendance at the horse show, at his roadhouse.

The gas mains have been laid on Washington avenue. The street commissioner is highly pleased with the way in which the workmen have left the roadway.

Contractor William Farrier has begun to lay the walks on the Washington avenue side of the park.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thornton are entertaining the latter's mother, Mrs. Dowling, of South Amboy.

The New Markets will play the Triangles, of New Brunswick, Saturday, on Nelson field.

The Holy Name Society, of St. John's R. C. church, will elect officers next Sunday.

Col. Darwin C. Pavey, the new reporter on the Call, has entered upon his work.

Novena services are being held nightly in St. John's R. C. church.

Miss Loretta Thornton has recovered from her recent illness.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD

The High School Athletic Club meet, which will be held June 13, promises to be a successful affair for all. It is the first attempt the local association has made in the way of athletic meets.

James Johnston, who is taking the census here for Uncle Sam, expects to have the work completed before June 15, the time set when the returns from supervisors must be sent in.

Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will send a delegation to Elizabeth tomorrow, to participate in the celebration of the 125th anniversary of the battle of Elizabethtown.

Delegates from the Baptist church attended the East New Jersey Baptist Association meeting held in the South church, Newark.

Adam Gray, who has been spending several days with his brother, Joseph Gray, has returned to his home in Newark.

Miss Nancy Wade has returned to Milburn, after a visit of several days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abram Wade.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gere and children, of Brooklyn, have been visiting Mr. Gere's sister, Mrs. Thomas M. Paff, Jr.

Miss Louise Kreamer, the victim of Frank Huber, murderous assault, continues to improve at Muhlenberg Hospital.

The Amity Literary Society held an enjoyable meeting for reading and study last night.

The borough Council meets tonight in the borough rooms in the fire house.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The ways and means committee in the interests of the proposed borough met last night. Several subcommittees were announced by Chairman P. J. McDonough to forward the work.

The dead animal crematory to be established near this place was a subject of discussion and a committee was appointed, A. C. Bechstein, chairman, to look into the propriety of the matter.

Those attending the East New Jersey Baptist Association from Piscataway township yesterday were L. D. Walker, Eugene Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. Firman Walker, Mrs. Robert Pierce, Mrs. Catherine Brantingham, Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Dorward, and Rev. J. A. Cubberley. The session was held in the South Baptist church, of Newark.

DELIGHTFUL RECITAL.

Miss Palmer's Pupils Entertain Their Friends.

Miss Palmer's recital given Saturday afternoon at the Hartridge Shcool, was a delightful affair. The comositions were arranged for two pianos.

There were four numbers on the programme. Two of the players were detained and Miss Crampton and Mrs. Charles L. Lewis kindly offered to take their places.

The first selections were given by Mrs. Mai Rivers, Miss Evelyn Butts, Miss Ellen Burke and Arthur Wills. The next number was given by Miss Edith Foster, Miss Alma McCormick, Miss Gladys Chase and Miss Elizabeth Tweedy.

Another was given by the Misses Dorothy and Gladys Brooks, and the last selection was rendered by Miss Alice Ross, Miss Dorothy Burke, Miss Virginia Fox and Miss Grace Otterson.

To Appoint Dog-Catcher.

The police board has decided to resurrect the defunct office of dog-catcher. An ordinance is being prepared. It is five years since an official dog-hunter has roamed Plainfield streets.

Rev. A. C. McCrea and family, of Central Avenue, who have been attending commencement exercises at Dickinson College, will return home this week.

TRADITION WON EASILY.

At Gravesend Track the 2 to 5 Favorite Led Her Field Home.

NEW YORK, June 7.—On a track that was heavy Tradition, the 2 to 5 favorite, easily won the Gazelle stakes, one mile and a sixteenth, at Gravesend. Tradition, making her first appearance, was in grand condition.

The field that was pitted against her was only ordinary, and the Paget filly was at once installed an odds on favorite. At the [illegible] of the barrier Tradition was [illegible] to the front, followed by Lady Hamilton. At the end of a quarter of a mile Tradition drew away from her field with a lead of three lengths. From the half mile pole to the finish she just galloped along in front and won by five lengths. Coy Maid was an easy second, being six lengths in front of Klamesha.

A heavy rainstorm set in before the races, and the second race was run in a blinding shower. Tradition was the only winning favorite. Summaries:

First Race.—Shotgun, first; Hamburg Belle, second; Race King, third.

Second Race.—Arsenal, first; Possession, second; Flyback, third.

Third Race.—Phidias, first; George C. Bennett, second; Inquisitor, third.

Fourth Race.—Tradition, first; Coy Maid, second; Klamesha, third.

Fifth Race.—Evening, first; Isolation, second; Lawsonian, third.

Sixth Race.—Cederstrome, first; Von Tromp, second; Bank, third.

NEW FABRICS.

Rainbow Silk a Novelty — Crewel Work on the Summer Gown.

A new rainbow shot silk in many harmonies is indescribably beautiful, reminding one of the skies at sunset. Cotton voiles are among the new things in tub materials, and crepe de chine, patterned with spots and lozenges, is a great deal used for summer gowns.

Crewel work is coming in. The woman who is good at this art will find that "time is money," for some of the most effective and elegant gowns of the season are of ecru net and lace with broderie a la Parsee, which, in other words, is bunches of flowers in variegated shades of very fine silk embroidered on skirt and bodice.

A smart white linen frock has large bunches of field flowers worked in very coarse silk on the front width of the skirt and center of blouse. A white linen sunshade with design to match and a crimson French sailor hat with wreaths of poppies made an effective, if rather daring, costume most becoming to a brunette.

The gown illustrated is of filet net. The skirt has a hem of white lawn applied with a puffed design of the net. Above this flounce are tucks and bands of the lawn. The plain material also makes the natty little short coat.

DETAILS OF THE MODE.

Mittens Worn With Short Sleeves. Dotted Swiss and Point d'Esprit.

Mittens will be popular this summer worn with the fashionable short sleeves. The making of a mitten is a difficult undertaking, as it must fit even more perfectly than a glove. Many of the new mittens will be made of the finest and most expensive lace.

Dotted swiss and point d'esprit net are very much used for yokes and banded trimmings on thin gowns. The dots form the central idea for hand work, and around these circles daisy petals are embroidered with mercerized cotton. Other conventional patterns are formed by ray-like lines of fine catstitching.

Colored linen frocks will be fashionable for early afternoon wear made with short jackets. They are rounded in front and do not meet by three inches. The back is slightly cut up, and the sleeves are elbow affairs finished with a ruffle or slight flare. The neck is finished with a rather deep turnover collar made of the jacket linen or of a contrasting color. It is usually scalloped or embroidered at the edge.

GRADUATION GOWN OF SWISS.

Very pretty is the graduation dress illustrated. Fine dotted white swiss goes into its makeup, which is simple in the extreme. Two straight ruffles trimmed with a single row of lace insertion are shirred on the skirt. The ruffles are a little deeper in the back than in front. The surpliced waist has a pointed yoke of lace, and the three-quarter sleeves end in a deep ruffle.

CHAPTER II.

The little party of visitors in the general's personal tent made a striking contrast to that assembled under the official canvas. In the latter, seated on camp stools and candle boxes or braced against the tent poles, were nearly a dozen officers, all in the somber dark blue regulation uniform, several in riding boots and spurs, some even wearing the heavy, frogged overcoat; all but two, juniors of the staff, men who stood on the shady side of 40, four of the number wearing on their shoulders the silver stars of generals of division or brigade, and among their thinning crops of hair the silver strands that told of years of service. One man alone, the commanding general, was speaking; all the others listened in respectful silence. In the gloom of that late, fog-shrouded afternoon a lantern or two would have been welcome, but the conference had begun while it was still light enough for the chief to read the memoranda on his desk, and now he was talking without notes. In the array of grave, thoughtful faces, some actually somber and severe in expression, a smile would have seemed out of place, yet, all on a sudden, grim features relaxed, deep-set eyes twinkled and glanced quickly about in search of kindred sympathetic spirits, and more than half the bearded faces broadened into a grin of merriment, and as many heads were suddenly uplifted, for just as the gray-haired chief ended an impressive period with the words: "It will be no laughing matter if I can lay hold of them," there burst upon the surprised ears of the group a peal of the merriest laughter imaginable—the rippling, joyous, musical laughter of happy girlhood mingling with the hearty, wholesome, if somewhat boyish, outburst of jollity of healthful youth.

"Merciful powers!" exclaimed the chief. "I had forgotten all about those people. They must have been here 20 minutes."

"Sixty-five, sir, by the watch," said a saturnine-looking soldier, tall and stalwart, and wearing the shield of the adjutant general's department on the collar of his sack coat.

"They ought to go, then," was the placid suggestion of a third officer, a man with keen eyes, thin, almost ascetic face, but there twitched a quaint humor about the lines of his lips. "That visit's past the retiring age."

And then another peal of merriment from the adjoining tent put a stop to conversation.

"They don't lack for entertainers," hazarded a staff officer as soon as he could make himself heard. "The solemn-looking Gothamite who came with them must have slipped out."

"It seems he knows Col. Armstrong," said the chief, thoughtfully. "I sent for him an hour ago, and he may be piloting Mr. Prime around camp, looking up the runaway."

"Another case?" asked a brigade commander, with a shrug of his shoulders.

"Another case," answered the general, with a sigh. "It isn't always home troubles that drive them to it. This boy had everything a doting father could give him. What on earth could make him bolt and enlist for the war?"

No one answered for a moment. Then the officer with the humorous twinkle about the eyes and the twitch at the lip corners bent forward, placed his elbows on his knees, his fingers tip to tip, gazed dreamily at the floor, and sententiously said:

"Girl."

Whereupon his next neighbor, a stocky, thickset man in the uniform of a brigadier, never moving eye, head or hand, managed to bring a sizable foot in heavy riding boot almost savagely upon the slim gaiter of the humorist, who suddenly started and flushed to the temples, glanced quickly at the chief, and then as quickly back to the floor, his blue eyes clouded in genuine distress.

The general's gray face had seemed to grow grayer in the gloom. Again there came, like a rippling echo, the chorus of merry laughter from the adjoining tent, only it seemed a trifle subdued, possibly as though one or two of the merry-makers had joined less heartily. With sudden movement the general rose. "Well, I've kept you long enough," he said. "Let the three regiments be got in readiness at once, but relax no effort in—that other matter. Find the guilty parties if a possible thing."

And then the group dissolved. One or two of the number looked back, half hesitating, at the entrance of the tent, but the chief had turned again to the littered table before him, and, seating himself, rested his gray head in the hand nearest his visitors. It was as though he wished to conceal his face. One of the last to go—the thin-faced soldier with the twinkling blue eyes, hung irresolutely behind the chief a moment as though he had it in his mind to speak, then turned and fairly tip-toed out, leaving the camp commander to the society of a single staff officer, and to the gathering darkness.

"Kindly say to Mr. Prime, or his friends, that I will join them in a moment," said the former, presently, without so much as uplifting head or eye, and the aid-de-camp left as noiselessly as his predecessor, the humorist. But when he was gone and "The Chief" sat alone, the sound of merry chat and laughter still drifted in with the mist at the half-opened entrance. Shadowy forms flitted to and fro between the official tent and the lights beginning to twinkle at brigade headquarters across the wide roadway. An orderly scratched at the tent flap, but got no answer. The lone occupant sat well back in the gloomy interior and could barely be distinguished. The waiting soldier hesitated a moment, then entered and stamped once upon the wooden floor, then turned and noiselessly stepped out, for, anticipating his question, the general spoke:

"No light just yet, orderly. I'll call you—in a moment. Just close the tent."

At his hand, he needed no light to find it, lay a little packet that had been passed in to him with the mail while the council was still in session. It was stoutly wrapped, tightly corded, and profusely sealed, but with the sharp point of an eraser the general slit the fastenings, tore off the wrapper, and felt rather than saw that a bundle of letters, rolled in tissue paper and tied with ribbon, ribbon long since faded and wrinkled, lay within. This he carefully placed in a large-sized military letter envelope, moistened and pressed tight the gummed flap, stowed it in the inner pocket of the overcoat that hung at the rear tent pole, reduced the wrapper and its superscription to minute fragments, and dropped them into the waste-basket, all as carefully and methodically as though life knew neither hurry nor worry; then bowed his lined face in both hands a moment in utter silence and in unmistakable sadness. Presently his lips moved: "Can you look down and see that I have kept my word, Agnes?" he murmured. "God help me to find him and save him—yet."

Once again the laughter, the gay young voices, rang from the other tent. All over camp, far and near, from the limits of the park to the very slope of the height at the north, the evening bugles were calling by thousands the thronging soldiery to mess or roll call. Slowly the general rose, drew on his overcoat, and in another moment, under the sloping visor of his forage cap, with eyes that twinkled behind their glasses, with a genial smile softening every feature, his fine soldierly face peered in on the scene of light, of merriment and laughter under the canvas roof of the only home he knew in the world—the soldier home of one whose life had been spent following the flag through bivouac, camp or garrison, through many a march, battle and campaign all over the broad lands of the United States until now, at the hour when most men turned for the placid joys of the fireside, the love of devoted and faithful wife, the homage and affection of children, the prattle and playful sports of children's children—homeless, wifeless, childless, he stood at the border of the boundless sea, soldier duty pointing the way to far distant, unknown and undesired regions, content to follow that flag to the end of the world if need be, and owning no higher hope or ambition than to follow and uphold it to the end of his life.

There was nothing in such a face as his to put a check to fun and merriment, yet, all on a sudden, the laughter died away. Three young gallants in soldier garb sprang to their feet and faced him with appeal and explanation in their speaking eyes, although only one of their number found his tongue in time to put the matter into words. There were only two girls when the general left that tent to meet his officers at four o'clock and now there were four, and the four were having five-o'clock tea.

At least anyone would have said they were four blithe girls, innocent of graver responsibilities than social calls and dinner or dance engagements, for never looked four young women so free from the cares of this world than those who were picturesquely grouped about the general's camp table and under the brilliant reflector of the general's lamp; but the plain gold circlet on the slender finger of the merriest and noisiest and smallest of the four, and the fact that she had nothing to say to the senior of the four attendant officers except in the brief, indifferent tones of assured proprietorship, and very much to say to the other three, told a different story. The general's manner lost none of its kindness, even though a close observer would have seen that his face lost a little of its light as he recognized in the evident leader of the revels and mistress of the situation the wife of his senior aid-de-camp. An hour before he thought her a thousand miles away—and so did her husband.

ALFONSO IN LONDON

Young Spanish King Seemed to Enjoy Downpour.

WHITELAW REID'S FIRST FUNCTION

State Banquet to the Monarch—United States Ambassador and His Wife Had Place of Honor—King Toasted Edward in French.

LONDON, June 7.—King Alfonso of Spain made the rounds of the English metropolis in typical London weather. Rain poured down all day long, accompanied by a chill east wind, and overcoats were worn and umbrellas carried.

The young monarch carried out a long programme with evident enjoyment. After receiving the diplomatic corps at Buckingham palace his majesty attended mass at the Roman Catholic cathedral at Westminster. Later he visited Westminster abbey, lunched with the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and was an interested spectator of the military tournament at Agricultural hall. He gave a reception to Spanish residents and to the Anglo-Spanish and American-Spanish commercial bodies of London at the Spanish embassy and paid a surprise visit to the houses of parliament, which unfortunately had adjourned before his arrival.

A state banquet last night at Buckingham palace was attended by the two monarchs and by members of the English royal family, the nobility, the diplomatic corps and practically all the notables in political England.

The banquet was laid at a long table in the picture gallery, and there were covers for 120, the famous gold plate being used. The members of the royal family assembled in the throne room, from which King Alfonso conducted Queen Alexandra and King Edward and the Duchess of Connaught to the banquet table. The general guests were assembled in the green drawing room. After their majesties and the members of the royal family passed, the guests were paired and followed them.

Count Wolff Metternich, the German ambassador, took in Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, and Whitelaw Reid, the American ambassador, took in the Duchess of Portland. These were seated to the immediate right of King Alfonso. Among others present at the banquet were Count Mensdorff, the Austro-Hungarian ambassador; the Duchess of Marlborough, the Spanish ambassador, L. Polo de Bernabe, and the Duchess of Roxburghe.

King Edward proposed the health of King Alfonso.

After a felicitous reference to Queen Christina King Edward said: "Spain and England often have been allies. May they always remain so and above all march together for the benefit of peace, progress and civilization. I drink the health of your majesty and the prosperity of the Spanish nation."

Speaking in French, King Alfonso replied:

"I am profoundly moved. I thank you from the bottom of my heart for myself and my august mother for your amiable words of welcome in this noble country, united with mine by strong ties of common interest and ineffaceable pious memories. It was here my lamented father learned the duties of a constitutional sovereign, having always before him the august example of the great queen, your revered mother, who filled with her goodness and glory almost a whole century. The cordiality of sentiment which has reunited our two royal families extends also to the good relations happily existing between Spain and Great Britain which ought to develop in the future to the mutual advantage of the two friendly nations.

"I drink to the health of your majesty, the queen and the royal family and to the happiness and prosperity of the great flourishing British empire."

A concert was given in the blue drawing room, at which the artists included Mme. Melba, Miss Muriel Foster and Enrico Caruso.

ROCKVIEW HEIGHTS NOW BEING CLEARED

TWO HOUSES TO BE REMOVED BY PURCHASER.

The syndicate which purchased the Cadmus place and adjacent properties on West End avenue in North Plainfield, has sold to Frank Mobus, of the borough, two new houses encumbering part of the land. Both were erected a short time ago by N. K. Barnes and have never been occupied but as they are not of the class to be built on the property, they must be taken away. Mobus will move them to lots that he has purchased on Duer street beyond Greenbrook road.

The houses in question are worth about $2,000 each and are the only ones in that section that is to be known as Rockview Heights. The syndicate proposes to build many high class residences and the plots that are to be sold will have a restriction that will allow only homes of like construction.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

F. O. Reinhart, who won the low score medal at Paterson, last week, intends to stay in the game and he will undoubtedly be heard from a little later.

Owing to rain the team match between Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers and Martin O'Loughlin, of this city, and Miss Noe and David Patrick, of Westfield, did not take place on Friday. It will be held later.

It is expected that as soon as Robert Abbott returns home from Yale, he will take anactive part in the contests at the Plainfield Country Club, where some of his past performances have been of the best.

The events at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday will include the women's championship play at 10 o'clock in the morning, and the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup and golf ball sweepstakes.

As yet the golf committee of the Plainfield Country Club, has not announced the winner of the school of golf competition held at the club a week ago. It is understood that two contestants have the same percentage and it is with difficulty that a decision is possible.

Among the most promising golfers in the Metropolitan district is Marshall Whitlatch, formerly of Westfield, but now of Montclair. He took part in the recent State championship play at Paterson, and returned a most creditable score. Whitlatch has played on the local links and has constantly improved his game.

The Park Golf Club enjoys the distinction of having among its members three local divines who take a lively interest in the ancient game. They are Rev. H. K. Carroll, Rev. C. L. Goodrich and Rev. J. O. McKelvey. They play regularly every Saturday and are constantly improving their game. It is not a rare occasion for them to win points in the weekly competition.

There will be no special events at the Park Golf Club until July 4. In the morning of that day there will be a men's bogie handicap ball sweepstakes, 18 holes, starting at 9 o'clock. In the afternoon there will be play for the Men's handicap holiday cup, 18 holes, medal play, starting at 2 o'clock. The winner to have permanent possession. TIRES VULCANIZED

This Conductor Slightly Mixed.

As a result of sweeping changes in the operating force on the trolley care by the Public Service Corporation, the through line cars between Newark and Dunellen are now in charge of new men, many of whom are not fuly acquainted with the territory through which they run. One conductor, upon arriving in Plainfield yesterday on his first trip, inquired of a passenger the name of the place. He thought he was in Scotch Plains. The changes, it is said, are the result of the detection of a system of "knocking down" fares on the part of some of the conductors.

FOUCH'S SLAYER CAUGHT

Run Down Near Fanwood "Cut" by Sergeant Frederickson.

HE IS LUIGI SCADITE.

Denies Shooting Murdered Man But He Himself Has Bullet Wound in the Jaw—Committed to Jail.

The murderer of Lorenzo Fouch, the fish peddler killed on North avenue yesterday forenoon, is Luigi Scadite, alias Louis Bunccelli, of New York. He was captured four hours after the hunt for him began, within two miles of the scene of the crime. Sergeant Frederickson ran him down in a buggy, just over the hill in Fanwood. He had a bullet wound through the lower part of his face and surrendered without making any show of resistance.

All the officers on the force, and practically every county officer, were out in search of Scadite within half an hour after the crime. Chief Kiely reached the scene of the murder fifteen minutes after the termination of the fight. Morris Lewinsohn, who lives near where the men fought, offered his buggy and horse to the chief and the latter started out in pursuit of the murderer at once. At Scotch Plains the chief put himself in touch with headquarters over the telephone and gave orders that brought every cop out into the hunt. Then the chief drove back to his office.

In the meantime all trolley and railroad outlets to the East were wired to look for the escaping murderer, and while the chief was coming back to the city a Central railroad freight train conductor reported at headquarters that a man answering the fugitive's description had tried to board his train a little way beyoond the Netherwood station. He was put off, and disappeared in the woods. On top of that came the information that apparently the same man was seen at the B. & O. junction in Cranford a little later.

When the chief heard this he commanded Charles Woolston's touring car and with Woolston at the wheel smashed the speed laws in a dash for the junction. The other sleuths scattered through the woods and roads through Fanwood and Scotch Plains. Sergeant Frederickson went with Lewinsohn in the buggy.

At about 3:15 the sergeant struck the road to the right of the cut

A number of intimate friends of Miss Jennie Lunger, who is to be married on Wednesday to Morris Sutphen, gave the bride-elect a surprise at her home Fairview avenue Tuesday evening.

When Miss Lunger was urged to examine what appeared to be a basket of floral decorations, there was much merriment, as the contents of each of the numerous packages was revealed.

The firm will commence work on the building within a few days.

Broke Promise; 60 Days.

Charles Waldron was sent to the county jail for sixty days by Judge Runyon, in the city court this morning for having acted disorderly while drunk on South Second street yesterday. Waldron got the heavy dose because he had promised the magistrate in court on Decoration Day, when arraigned on the same charge, that he would reform.

Promised to Do Better.

George Leland, arrested on his wife's complaint, received a scathing lecture when arraigned before Recorder Doud last night. He promised to quit drinking and do better, thus escaping with a suspended sentence.

Young Sharp Better.

Howard Sharp, of Somerset street, who was injured in a runaway accident early in the week, continues to improve at the hospital and his recovery is a matter of but a short time.

—The famous Colburn strawberries are without a peer in the market; unequalled for quality and flavor. Neuman Brothers receive them fresh picked every day.

PREPARE FOR VISIT OF THE PRESIDENT

GOVERNOR STOKES ARRANGES FOR NEW JERSEY TROOPS TO PROTECT HIM.

Governor Stokes issued a statement yesterday in connection with the visit of President Roosevelt to this state next month. The president will come to Asbury Park July 7, to address the annual meeting of the National Educational Association and may visit Sea Girt.

The Governor said he is taking such steps as are necessary to insure the president's safety while he will be New Jersey's guest. No reasonable expense will be spared to provide adequate military guard for the protection of President Roosevelt.

Governor Stokes said he had conferred with the military authorities and orders will be issued for sufficient force from the National Guard for this purpose. Everything possible, he stated, will be done to make the president's visit enjoyable.

UNVEILED MEMORIAL TABLET AT UNION

EXERCISES COMMEMORATED BATTLE OF CONNECTICUT FARMS.

The one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the battle of Connecticut Farms during the war for independence, was celebrated yesterday at Union, the little Hamlet on Morris avenue, between Elizabeth and Springfield, with elaborate ceremonies, under the auspices of the New Jersey patriotic societies, the Daughters and Sons of the American Revolution. James E. Martine was among the interested Plainfield spectators at the celebration. A tablet commemorative of the battle, placed in front of the old church made famous by the pastorate of Rev. John Caldwell, the "fighting parson," was unveiled, and also a monument to his devoted wife, who was shot down in cold blood by a British soldier while defending her children.

Prominent among those who participated in the ceremonies, which consumed the greater part of the day, were United States Senator John Kean, of Elizabeth, who presided at the exercises in the afternoon, and William H. Corbin, of the same city, who delivered the main oration.

SEWER WORK CONTRACT TO BE AWARDED MONDAY

COST OF EXTENSION TO BE BETWEEN $50,000 AND $60,000.

The business firms submitting bids for the proposed construction work at the sewage farm include the best in the country, and as a class was a thoroughly representative one. The street and sewer committe having this work in charge was much pleased with the number of bids and the character of the firms desirous of securing the contract which will aggregate an expense between $50,000 and $60,000.

The work includes the construction of eight contact beds, similar to those in use, erection of an operatro's house, the cleaning of the old beds and the furnishing of materials, and help for excavation, etc.

The plans for the improvements were prepared by Street Commissioner Gavett, assisted by J. O .Osgood, as consulting engineer. Mr. Gavett being so thoroughly well versed in the system in use here and having an expert knowledge of such matters, makes it fortunate for Plainfield. The city is able to save itself a great deal of expense that would result from the employment of an expert to draft such plans.

It is the intention of the street and sewer committee to make a report at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council on Monday night as to the lowest bidder and on its recommendation the contract will be awarded. The work is to be started within a short time and completed during the summer season.

At the election J. C. Davis was judge, J. V. N. Polhemus inspector and David Taylor, clerk.

READY FOR CONCERTS

First Free Open-air Entertainment Tomorrow Night.

POPULAR AIRS ONLY.

W. S. Mygrants to Give Exhibition of "Long Tone" Notes—Leever as Vocalist.

Free, summer band concerts for the season of 1905 will be inaugurated in Plainfield tomorrow night when Leader LaVere and his musicians will hold forth in what has been known as Concert Park, on Chatham street, east of Watchung avenue. Every facility has been provided for the reception of a large crowd and the programme that has been arranged will be one of the best ever heard in the city. The new grandstand just erected will comfortably seat 1,000 people and it has been provided with roomy aisles that will do away with the jostling with the entrance of late-comers.

The soloists will be Lew Leever, the well known singer of popular songs, and W. S. Mygrants, one of the most expert cornet players in the country and holder of the record for "long tone" notes. He will render a selection and at its conclusion will give a demonstration of holding a note, prolonging it for two minutes and ten seconds. In order that the audience may time him, Mr. LaVere will give a signal with his baton when he starts.

The concerts that Mr. LaVere has been providing for the past few years have been of the highest order but he has always been seeking to do better. The band this season has additional men and each one is a soloist with his particular instrument and will perform at various times. The concerts are without cost to the people but in order that they be continued it will be necessary for them to patronize the stand, which calls for a small entrance fee. Through the winter fair and vaudeville show, enough money was secured to give about six concerts but it is the wish of Mr. LaVere and those interested to continue them all through the summer months, one each Friday night. This can be done if the public manifests the proper spirit. Contributions to the fund are solicited and Plainfielders who feel so disposed can send their "little mite" direct to The Daily Press office.

The programme for tomorrow night, in detail, is as follows:

March, "Yankee Grit," Abe Holzman; selection, "Little Johny Jones," George Cohen; "Sextette from Lucia," Domsetti; "The Old Planter's Reverie," Luscomb; cornet solo, polka, "Equa Tone," A. Liberati, W. S. Mygrants; selection, "Babes in Toyland," Victor Herbert; vocal solo, a, "Take a Car," Mills; b, "Good Bye, Sweet Marie," Snyder, Lew Leever; medley overture, "Mills' Melodies No. 6," Mills; "Maryland, My Maryland," Mygrants.

FEAST OF WEEKS WILL BEGIN TONIGHT

CALLED SHOVUOS AND IS A BIG FESTIVAL.

With sundown today Hebrews in Plainfield and all over the country will celebrate the Shovuos festival or the Feast of Weeks, in memory of the receiving of the ten commandments from Moses on Mount Sinai. It is the custom to confirm all children thirteen years old on the first day of the festival.

The festival is called the Feast of Weeks because it is celebrated seven weeks after the Feast of the Passover, and also after the close of the grain season, which in the days of Palestine began with the Passover. The Hebrews in the olden times always brought two fresh loaves of bread and a basket of fruit to the house of worship as an offering to God.

Shovuos is the second of the three chief festivals which had to be kept in Jerusalem when the Jews inhabited the Holy Land. It was the duty of those who dwelt outside of Jerusalem to go up to the Holy City and carry their offerings.

One of the features of the gathering was a reception at the Chalfonte last night. The guest of honor is Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, of Denver, president of the National Federation.

Assemblyman Coyne is the chairman of the Union County Republican Committee and is one of the three representatives of the county in the lower house of the Legislature. He is prominently mentioned as a candidate for State Senator to succeed Judge Joseph Cross.

BAND TO REPEAT CONCERT TONIGHT

GERMAN MARINE MUSICIANS AT CASINO AGAIN.

The German Marine Band scored a big success at the Casino last night, so much so, that in response to urgings from the audience, Managers Edwards and Isham have arranged to have it remain and give a second concert tonight, presenting an entire change of programme. The musicians are among the finest ever seen in this city and their work was applauded continuously.

The programme tonight will embrace many novelty numbers which are new to local audiences. No lover of delightful music masterfully rendered should fail to attend as it is the band's farewell appearance in this vicinity. The prices for this special concert will meet with popular approval.

FROST TONIGHT.

Cover Up Your Plants or They'll Be Nipped.

PLASTERERS STAND FAST

Meeting Results in Renewed Determination as to Plaster Board.

TO COMBAT LATHERS.

Will Not Plaster Over Board Put on by Members of the Other Union.

The Masons' and Plasterers' Union talked over the plaster-board dispute at its meeting last night. No vote, according to President E. P. T. Smith, was taken on the matter, but the members were unanimous in expressing a determination to stand by the decision reached two years ago, when the Lathers' Union first announced its claim to jurisdiction over plaster-board work, that plaster-board is masons' material and must be put on by masons.

"The masons will put on the plaster-board at the new high school," said President Smith after the meeting, referring to the latest clash between the unions, to which the schoolboard called attention at its meeting Monday night. "We simply refuse to plaster over any plaster-board put on by lathers. We don't anticipate any trouble. The masons will put on the plaster-boards; we'll begin tomorrow morning.

"This whole question was settled, so far as we are concerned, two years ago. We took our stand then, and have gone ahead putting on plaster-board since."

"Is it true that this dispute will delay the completion of the new school?" he was asked.

"Nothing that the Mason's Union has done will delay the school. If the school has been delayed the cause must be looked for in another direction."

The union elected its officers for another year. They are as follows: E. P. T. Smith, president; Charles Burnett, vice president; John H. Williams, recording secretary; Frank McInerney, corresponding secretary; Jacob Higgins, treasurer; William McCarty, financial secretary; William McCarty, sergeant-at-arms.

JERSEY CENTRAL'S EDITORIAL EXCURSION

DAY OF PLEASURE AT LAKE HOPATCONG DESPITE THE WEATHER.

Following its annual custom, the management of the Jersey Central held an excursion yesterday in honor of the proprietors and editors of daily and weekly papers along its lines in New Jersey and Pennsylvania. The objective point was Lake Hopatcong and despite the miserable weather the guests, who included members of the families of those for whom the day's pleasure was specially given, had a good time.

The excursion train was run in two sections, both being vestibuled. The annual dinner and supper were both served at the Sea View Pavilion, and the usual trip on the lake was provided. During the afternoon informal speeches were made by members of the party:. General Passenger Agent Burt, of North Plainfield, jollied the guests in a congratulatory speech and of course the newspaper proprietors and editors who spoke had something to say about the vast improvement made by the road since the new regime has been in control.

There were 150 papers represented in the invitation list but owing to the stormy weather not all responded. The Plainfielders present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Frost and Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Force and daughter, Miss Lillian Force.

Entertainment Again Successful.

"The Festival of Flower and Song," given with such success a week ago by the children of the Bryant School, was repeated yesterday afternoon by request. The entertainment, one of the best ever presented at the school, attracted a large audience and was as successful as the first production, when $50 was cleared as prifit. The children taking part received great praise for their work, while the teachers in charge were not forgotten for their earnest endeavors.

Wiltse and Ames have decided to make their home in Somerville next winter and they have secured residences there.

WORK ON THEATRE BEGINS TOMORROW

SO SAYS OWNER COUNIHAN WHO SIGNS CONTRACTS TODAY.

Work on Plainfield's new theatre is expected to begin tomorrow morning. W. J. Counihan, the owner of the property, is in town today, completing necessary details preparatory to signing the contracts. The objections to the plans made by Building Inspector T. O. Doane have been remedied and he will undoubtedly approve them today.

Mr. Counihan is not at all discouraged, realizing that it is important that the plans conform to the building ordinance. He is anxious that this should be done before starting the work, thus avoiding other troubles later on. When the operations begin it is the purpose to push them with all possible speed so that the theatre may be opened at the time arranged for.

FESTIVAL GUESTS CHEERED BY COFFEE

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST WOMEN CIRCUMVENT THE CHILLY WEATHER.

With a concession to the chill weather that almost made the affair unseasonable, the Women's Society for Christian Work of the Seventh Day Baptist church held its annual strawberry festival last night with the usual success. The concession was hot coffee. It was gratefully accepted by the large number of church folk who attended. Encouraged by the warmth of the coffee, the guests consumed great quantities of berries and cream and cake.

A feature of the festival was a one-act cantata, "A Garden of Singing Flowers," by A. J. Holden. Those who took part sang with their heads through the center of huge "flowers" painted on a drop curtain. The singers were Dr. Frank Clawson, Dr. O. B. Whitford, Mrs. Everett Kimball, Mrs. William C. Hubbard, Mrs. George Homan, Miss Nellie Miller, Miss Kizzie Neagle, Charles Potter Titsworth. Miss Jessie Utter, the organist of the church, was in charge of the cantata.

The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Mrs. William C. Hubbard, chariman; Mrs. Frank H. Smith, Mrs. Charles H. Dunham. The waiters and waitresses were Nathan Lewis, George Clark, Charles Neagle; Rollin Williams, Miss Louise Van Syckle, Miss Eva Rogers ,Miss Mary St. John, Miss Mildred Green, Miss Ethel Rogers and Charles Potter Titsworth.

SANITARY COLLECTION OF GARBAGE URGED

HEALTH BOARD'S PRESIDENT AT WORK ON SCHEME

Despite the fact that the Common Council has practically decided not to take up the question of municipal collection and disposal of garbage this year, Charles J. Fisk, president of the Board of Health, has not lost hope, and if possible he will secure the adoption of some system which will be an improvement over the present one. It is understood that Mr. Fisk, together with other members of the board, has been considering the matter with a view to having the city control this work. The board is not satisfied with the method now in vogue, believing that better results can be obtained in some other way at a less cost to the taxpayers.

The question has been discussed at some length at the board meetings and it is not unlikely that some kind of a report will be presented to the Common Council in the near future. It is generally understood that the physicians of the city are also anxious for a change in the method of collecting and disposing of garbage, being convinced that the one now used is unsanitary.

Celebration at Princeton.

The Pennsylania Society, Sons of the Revolution, have chosen Princeton as the place where they will hold their annual celebration of the evacuation of Philadelphia by the British. McClellan, of New York city, Francis L. Patton, ex-president of Princeton University, and a number of other distinguished residents of Princeton have been invited to attend the exercises.

ELIZABETH CELEBRATING

Big Parade a Feature of Battle of Elizabeth Town's Anniversary Day.

UNVEIL MONUMENT.

Sham Battle of N. J. N. G. This Afternoon—Naval Parade and Fireworks Tonight.

The one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Elizabethtown, being celebrated at Elizabeth today, has attracted people from all parts of Union County, as well as throughout the State. Despite the unfavorable weather conditions the programme is being carried out with great success.

The celebration began this morning with the sunrise gun, followed at 9 o'clock with the muster parade, Col. Daniel F. Colins, commanding. The march was through all of the principal streets of Elizabeth, residences and business houses being lavishly decorated with the American flag and bunting. In the first division there was Co. K. of this city, marching with Cos. C, I and M, under the command of Major Nelson Y. Duncan.

Included in the line were G. A. R. veterans, Spanish War veterans, Italian Societies, fraternal organizations, Governor's Island band, Hungarian and Catholic societies, Union Labor organizations and colored organizations, together with representations from the leading business houses. Those at the head of the line comprised a majority of the notables of the county and several from various parts of the State.

The line was dismissed at East Jersey and Catherine streets and at 11 o'clock dedicatory exercises were held in Union Square where a statue of a minute man was unveiled by Miss May A. Barger. There was an opening prayer by Rev. Dr. Glazebrook, an oration by Hon. J. Franklin Fort and the singing of patriotic songs by a chorus of children and German societies.

The celebration was resumed this afternoon with a sham battle in which Cos. K, C, I and M participated. This battle was carried out on exactly the same lines as that of the Battle of Elizabethtown.

Following the battle there was the regimental parade and review of the Second Regiment, Col. Collins commanding. This concluded the afternoon programme.

Tonight at 8 o'clock there will be a grand naval parade on Staten Island Sound in which 200 vessels will participate. At nine o'clock there will be an elaborate display of fireworks from a float on the Sound.

STOKES GETS LL.D.

He Says Only Educated Men Succeed Today.

Governor Stokes was given an ovation as he appeared on the platform and was introduced as "Doubtless the favorite son of his native State in the next National Republican convention."

Governor Stokes made a very brief response, the gist of which was that the educated man is the only one who today is succeeding in all lines of work.

Cranford Freeholder Hurt.

Freeholder E. K. Adams siezed a broken electric light wire dangling over the sidewalk in front of his residence on Union avenue, Cranford, yesterday, and while winding it around a tree received a shock that threw him to the ground, dislocating his shoulder. He was removed to his home and a physician summoned to attend his injuries. Mr. Adams was warned of the danger, but thought the wire was dead, which it appeared to be, until fastened to the tree.

LITERARY.

The tradition about Philadelphia in June has always been that the climate has been salubrious. How it strikes a native who has been in England for many years and come back for that month is expressed with glowing vividness and humor in a paper called "Philadelphia in June," by an Exile, which appears in the current number of Lippincott's Magazine. It is no great secret that the author is an artist of the first rank in both countries, one of whose principal pictures is in the English Chantry Collection, and who has painted many portraits of Philadelphians.

William Roberts, of Martinsville, has taken a position in this city with Oscar Moore.

Stephen Cahoone and family, of Watchung avenue, left yesterday for their summer home in Jamestown, R. I.

Public's Franchises.

The Piscataway Township Committe in Middlesex County seems to have taken a lesson from Dunellen, to which it is contiguous. Dunellen gave away a valuable franchise to th eP. S. C., not only without compensation ,but in perpetuity. Piscataway is not inclined to do anything of the kind. At a recent public hearing in the latter township the majority of the speakers denounced the intriguing methods and the greed of the Public Service Corporation, because the latter sought to obtain a perpetual gas main franchise without paying for it. The Township Committee demanded $1,000 for the privilege of laying pipes through the township water company's franchise, and the P. S .C. refused to pay it, saying the price was prohibitive. "Very well," was the reply of one astute property owner. "If this franchise is worth nothing let's keep it until it is of some value." The fact that in a town like Piscataway the taxpayers are no longer ignorant of the value of franchises, proves how quickly the lessons of the last few years have been learned. Except in very rare cases, like that at Dunellen a few months ago, valuable franchises will no longer be given away in perpetuity. They will be sold for what they are worth, will be for specified terms of years, and in the near future will be taxed at local rates.—Newark Evening News.

Buy Your Own Paper.

A man who was too economical to subscribe for his home paper sent his little boy to borrow the copy taken by his neighbor. In his haste the boy ran over a $4 stand of bees and in ten minutes looked like a warty summer squash. His cries reached his father, who ran to his assistance, and, failing to notice a barbed-wire fence, ran into it, breaking it down, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a $5 pair of pants. The old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence and got into the cornfield and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket, the wife ran, upset a four-gallon churn of rich cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the whole flock. In her hurry she dropped a $25 set of false teeth. The baby, left alone, crawled through the spilled cream and into the parlor, ruining a $20 carpet. During the excitement the oldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the dog broke up eleven setting hens, and the calves got out and chewed the tails off four fine shirts.—From the Kansas City Journal.

Army and Navy Maneuvers at Old Point Comfort.

Those who enjoy "all the pomp and circumstance of war" without the actual bloodshed of real warfare will be interested in the Army and Navy Maneuvers now being held at Old Point Comfort. About three thousand troops of the Coast Artillery are encamped there, and many of the Nation's greatest battleships and cruisers are anchored in Hampton Roads. From June 11 to 17 daily assaults will be made on the fortress by the combined fleets, which will be withstood by the troops. Added to these is the charming social atmosphere of Old Point, with its fine hotels, which are filled with people every one knows or ought to know. The Pennsylvania Railroad and the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad provide superb train service. For rates and full information consult any Pennsylvania Railroad Ticket Agent. 6-8-4-E. O. When Society Smiles.

Don't think that the ladies and gentlemen of the "Four Hundred" always wear that set expression that you see in their photographs. They often smile, but seldom in the presence of the common public. Which makes a page of photographs which will appear in The Sunday World Magazine of June 11 all the more remarkable. A score of the best known society people of the United States caught by the camera with broad grins on their faces. In this Sunday World issue, also, is another great Sherlock Holmes' story, "The Reigate Puzzle," one of the most interesting Dr. Doyle ever wrote, and another feature is a tale by that clever young American author, O. Henry, "According to Their Light." All the regular weekly features and many new ones.

ASKS JAPAN'S TERMS

Russian Emperor May at Last Sue For Peace.

TAKAHIRA TALKS WITH PRESIDENT

Roosevelt's Efforts to End War In Far East May Be Crowned With Success—Meyer's Special Audience With Czar.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Preliminary negotiations between Russia and Japan are generally believed to be under way, and it is conceded that President Roosevelt will in all probability act not as a mediator, but as "the friendly channel of communication." There is as yet no official admission that Russia has accepted what Count Cassini in his cablegram to Count Lamsdorff described as "the offer of good will of the president," although instructions to the ambassador are believed to have reached here last night in a long cablegram which arrived at the Russian embassy quite late.

Washington is aroused to a point of expectancy unequaled since the inception of the war in the far east by the news from St. Petersburg of the czar's wish to know Japan's peace terms. This interest was heightened by a call which Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, made at the White House by appointment last night. He called shortly after 9 o'clock and immediately went into conference with the president. When the minister left he declined to answer any questions about his call.

The cabling of a message to the Russian ambassador at Washington and Paris that Russia wished to know Japan's peace terms was immediately communicated to the diplomats most interested.

The efforts that President Roosevelt has been making to bring the belligerents together has entered on a distinctly new phase. Foreign Minister Lamsdorff had an audience of the emperor upon the subject of Ambassador Cassini's peace communication, and Ambassador Meyer called upon Count Lamsdorff at the chancellery and remained with the foreign minister for some time.

Whether this visit was upon the invitation of Count Lamsdorff or at the request of the ambassador cannot definitely be stated, but there is reason to believe that the visit was in obedience to instructions from Washington, conveying a personal communication from the president to the emperor tendering his good offices.

The result was that Mr. Meyer went to Tsarskoe-Selo in full uniform and was received in special audience by the emperor.

Upon his return to St. Petersburg Mr. Meyer hastened to the embassy, whence he sent a long cipher dispatch to Washington.

Half an hour later he was closeted with Sir Charles Hardinge, the British ambassador.

The present situation is extremely delicate, and the greatest reticence is observed.

In transmitting a faithful report of what occurred at the White House between himself and President Roosevelt, Count Cassini emphasized the sympathetic and friendly frankness with which the president, speaking informally and personally, expressed his strong desire for peace. It is generally realized here that the importance of such a report can scarcely be overestimated.

To all of his callers the Russian ambassador, while admitting that "the moment was full of possibilities," had no news to impart, and this applied to his closest friends among his diplomatic confreres. Personally he was greatly worried by a cablegram from Paris telling of the illness of his daughter, the Countess Cassini, who is suffering with scarletina.

The sudden retirement of the French foreign minister, M. Delcasse, who was regarded as not only one of the strongest supporters of the dual alliance, but as one of the stanchest friends of Russia, was a great blow to Russia and rendered President Roosevelt's friendly tender particularly opportune. Besides, it is known, as set forth in these dispatches, that the emperor has been strongly advised if he decided to open peace negotiations to do so through President Roosevelt.

A Vienna dispatch says that the Russian government has informed its diplomatic representatives abroad, including Count Cassini, the ambassador at Washington, that the time for Russia to conclude peace has not yet come and that when it does arrive Russia will open peace negotiations with Japan independent of foreign intervention.

Mayor des Planches, ambassador of Italy to the United States, has had a long conference with President Roosevelt. While no details concerning the conference were made public, it is known that the situation in the far east was the principal topic of consideration.

With every ambassador representing a European sovereign the president now has discussed the subject of peace between Russia and Japan, and there is permanent ground for the statement that the powers are acting in concert to bring about a cessation of hostilities in the orient. That Italy has thrown the weight of her influence for peace there can be no doubt.

Russia has until now met all suggestions regarding peace with the plain, unequivocal statement, "The czar has determined to continue the war." This answer precluded further representations. As it is reported that Russia has officially expressed a wish to know Japan's terms, there is for the first time since the war began some substantial hope of peace.

Whether upon receiving from Count Cassini an official expression that the czar wishes to know the mikado's peace terms the president will be able to obtain a statement of this subject from Japan remains to be seen.

It is said that Japan's demands include a lease of Port Arthur, a protectorate over Korea, the right to sell the Chinese Eastern railway and Port Arthur and Dalny railroad in lieu of indemnity, the possession of all Russian warships now interned in harbors of the far east and fishing rights off Sakalin island and seal fisheries on the commander islands.

ROJESTVENSKY TO CZAR.

Admiral of Ill Starred Pacific Squadron Tells of His Defeat.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 8.—The government has received a telegraphic report from Vice Admiral Rojestvensky at Tokyo, in which the admiral states that at 1:30 on May 27 he engaged twelve large Japanese battleships and armored cruisers and twelve smaller cruisers.

At 2:30 it became necessary for him to shift his quarters and his staff on the battleship Kniaz Suvaroff to another part of the vessel, and at 3:30, when the admiral lost consciousness owing to his wounds, it was found necessary to transfer him and his staff to the torpedo boat destroyer Buiny, where already part of the crew of the battleship Oslabya, which sunk, had been taken.

The supreme command, the admiral says, was then transferred to Rear Admiral Nebogatoff.

"The Buiny became separated from the rest of the fleet during the night," Admiral Rojestvensky says. "In the morning we sighted the armored cruiser Dmitri Donskoi, with two torpedo boats, and transferred the Oslabya's crew to her. I was removed to the torpedo boat destroyer Bedovi, which steamed ahead with the destroyer Groeny.

"On the evening of May 29 I learned that the Bedovi had surrendered to two Japanese torpedo boats. The Bedovi arrived at Sasebo May 31.

"I have learned that Rear Admiral Nebogatoff is at Sasebo."

FOR DERELICTION OF DUTY.

Mayor Weaver Dismisses Eleven Philadelphia Policemen.

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.—Mayor Weaver last night dismissed eleven men from the police force for dereliction of duty. These men had been tried and found guilty before the dismissal of David J. Smyth as director of the department of public safety. Mr. Smyth sentenced each one of them to a fine of a hundred days' pay. The mayor, however, decided that the punishment was not severe enough and decided to dismiss the men.

Among Mayor Weaver's visitors were A. J. Cassatt, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, and former United States Attorney General Wayne MacVeagh, who is counsel of the committee of seventy. Both gentlemen said their visit had no political significance. Mr. Cassatt said he called to see the mayor with reference to ordinances for the construction of tracks within the city limits.

BRIDGE GAVE WAY.

Wreck at Red Cedar Creek Near Colfax, Wis.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., June 8.—A westbound passenger train on the Wisconsin Central railroad plunged into Red Cedar creek from a steel bridge west of Colfax. Engineer George Phillipps, Fireman Severns and five tramps are believed to be drowned.

The tender, the baggage and the mail cars went down with the bridge and are buried in the water. The baggageman climbed out of a window and the mail clerk crawled through a ventilator as the cars plunged into the water, and both escaped. The smoking car stands on one end in the creek. The passengers in the smoking car were bruised, but none was seriously hurt.

The center piece of the bridge had been undermined by high water, and as the train reached the middle of the bridge the structure gave way.

Columbus Policeman Shot Dead.

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—Daniel O. Davis, a policeman, was shot and killed last night in an encounter with a burglar at the home of Horace Chapman on East Broad street. Mr. Chapman, who is a coal operator and was once Democratic candidate for governor of Ohio, is now in Europe with his family. The presence of burglars in the house last night was revealed by a burglar alarm, and a wagon load of policemen was sent to the house. Two men were surrounded in the house. One jumped off the roof of a veranda and exchanged shots with Officer Davis, who was instantly killed. One of the burglars was captured, the other escaping.

Cause of Bridegroom's Death.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 8.—The sudden and mysterious insanity of Dewitt Ottman of this city, who became violent in New York city during his wedding tour and died in a sanitarium at Stamford, Conn., is now attributed to an injury he received about a month ago. A fall at a roller skating rink in Troy gave him a deep cut on the left side of the head. The wound soon healed, and at the time little was thought about it, but it is believed now that a clot of blood remained which resulted in his insanity and death.

"Trusty" Patient Jumped Overboard.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., June 8.—Patrick O'Brien, a "trusty" patient in the St. Lawrence State hospital, jumped overboard from the hospital launch Dorothy and was drowned. O'Brien was committed to the institution from Watertown.

NORWAY AND SWEDEN

Union Dissolved, King Oscar Protests Action.

WANT YOUNG PRINCE TO RULE NORWAY

Council of State Virtually Dethrone Their King Owing to, They Allege, His Having Ceased to Act as a Norwegian Sovereign.

CHRISTIANA, Norway, June 8.—The storthing has declared the union between Norway and Sweden under one king to be dissolved and that the king has ceased to act as king of Norway. The storthing further empowered the present state council to act as a government of Norway until further notice and to exercise the power heretofore appertaining to the king.

King Oscar has sent a telegram from Stockholm to Premier Michelsen as follows:

"Have received the communication of the council of state and record the most decided protest against the method and action of the government."

The storthing adopted an address to the king declaring that no ill feeling was entertained against him, his dynasty or the Swedish nation and asking his majesty to co-operate in the selection of a young prince of the house of Bernadotte to occupy the throne of Norway.

At the opening of the session the council of state informed the storthing that it had relinquished office. The storthing thereupon unanimously and without debate passed the following resolution:

"Whereas, All the members of the council of state have laid down their offices;

"Whereas, His majesty the king has declared himself unable to establish a new government for the country, and, whereas, the constitutional regal power thus becomes inoperative, the storthing authorizes the members of the council of state who retired to exercise until further notice as the Norwegian government the power appertaining to the king in accordance with Norway's constitution and existing laws with those changes which are necessitated by the fact that the union with Sweden under one king is dissolved in consequence of the king having ceased to act as a Norwegian king."

Five Social Democrats dissented from the address to the king. It is expected that the storthing will issue a proclamation to the Norwegian people regarding the dethronement of the monarch.

Mr. Michelsen, the retiring premier, accepted in behalf of the council of state the "honorable and difficult task with which the storthing has intrusted it."

At a meeting last night the storthing adopted a proclamation to the Norwegian people, in which is given a detailed account of the events preceding the passing of the resolution. This proclamation concludes as follows:

"The storthing hopes that the Norwegian people will succeed in living in peace and on good terms with all and not the least with the Swedish people, to whom they are linked by so many natural ties."

The storthing will if necessary defend the step taken by force of arms.

If a prince of the house of Bernadotte should consent to occupy the throne of Norway he must give up all idea of succession to the Swedish throne.

Flood Closes Michigan Factories.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., June 8.—The flood situation in Grand Rapids is hourly becoming more serious, and the Grand river is rising at the rate of six inches an hour. The west side of the city has been the principal sufferer, but now the water is backing from the river into the basements of many of the business houses on Canal street on the east side. Great damage is expected before the water recedes. A large number of factories on the west side are closed on account of high water interfering with machinery, and over 3,000 men are temporarily out of employment.

Radical Reforms In Equitable.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Resolutions suggesting radical reforms in the management of the Equitable Life Assurance society were adopted at a meeting of the directors. These effect all the high officials and presage a sweeping curtailment of the society's general expenses. The resolutions also imply many important changes in the financial policy of the society. J. T. Low presented his resignation in person, advancing ill health as the chief reason. Marvin Hughitt telegraphed his resignation.

Hooker Charges For Legislature.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 8.—The assembly judiciary committee discussed the form in which the charges against Justice Warren B. Hooker shall be prepared for presentation to a special legislative session, but took no final action. Chairman Fish said that he had invited the members of the senate judiciary committee to meet the assembly committee at the Hotel Cadillac in New York next Wednesday and that the matter probably would be settled then.

Senator Dolliver Has Operation.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Senator J. P. Dolliver of Iowa has undergone an operation for an affection of the ducts in the upper part of the nose and above the right eye. Several weeks ago the senator while returning from Iowa, where he went to attend the funeral of his father, contracted a severe cold which developed into neuralgia. Later the ducts described became involved.

AN ORDINANCE

WHEREAS application in writing for such improvement, describing the nature, kind and extent of the work and improvement desired, signed by at least ten freeholders of the Borough of North Plainfield residing therein, has been duly presented;

AND WHEREAS upon receiving said application, and upon the introduction of this ordinance for the making of such improvement, the said council caused the clerk to give public notice and followed the same, by hearing consideration and all the formalities required by law, and no sufficient objection being presented or appearing to the contrary, and the Mayor and Council deeming such improvement proper and necessary, therefore

The Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield do enact as follows:

Section 1. All that portion of Summit Avenue in the said Borough of North Plainfield, the center line whereof begins at a point in the southwesterly side line of Franklin Avenue, as the same was laid out by Surveyors of the Highway on February 19th., 1870, which point is distant three hundred seventy-four and seven-tenths feet in a southeasterly direction along said southwesterly side line of Franklin Avenue from the center of Summit Avenue; and runs thence along the center line of Summit Avenue as the same was laid out by Surveyors of the Highway on February 19th., 1870, south forty-nine degrees west a distance of three hundred and ninety-three one-hundreds feet to a point which is distant three hundred feet in a southwesterly direction at right angles from the said southwesterly side line of Franklin Avenue and is in the southwestely side line of a new street called DeLacy Avenue, as laid down on a map entitled "Somerset Subdivision No. 1 property of Union County Investment Company, Borough of North Plainfield, New Jersey, 1905," made by H. Cordova Counsel to Appeal.

Frank Cordova, the former minister, who is serving a four-year sentence in the State prison for deserting his wife at South River, and with assaulting her, will apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of habeas corpus to review his commitment to jail. The question to be determined is the right of the Middlesex County sheriff to take Cordova from jail to prison pending an appeal.

McAll Auxiliary Meets.

The last meeting of the McAll Auxiliary, until fall, was held yesterady at the Public Library. As usual, a letter from the auxiliary's mission station in Limoges, France, was read. This was full of interest and encouragement. Mrs. F. O. Herring, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead and Mrs. Lawrence Myers, delegates to the annual convention of the McAll Auxiliary, held at Providence, gave interesting accounts of the meeting.

Martinsville Burglar Caught.

Two women from Martinsville called at the Middlesex County jail at New Brunswick yesterday and looked at the two thieves who were arrested at South River last week. No Departmental Nines.

Neither the police nor fire departments are to be regularly represented by nines this year, from present indications. Men with baseball ability are numerous enough in both arms of the city's service, but they are not, for some reason, as anxious to get in the gams as they were two seasons ago.

The house was prettily decorated with palms, ferns, and cut flowers, Mr. and Mrs. Flynn receiving in a floral bower. They received a large number of handsome presents, including silver, cut glass, china, furniture, pictures and rugs. The young people will make their home in this city. NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Howard K. Bird is planning the opening of a new street and the erection thereon of a block of twelve houses in the Philadelphia style, near the Levering & Garrigues works. This style of frame house is not only attractive to mechanics and wage earners, but many of the L. & G. men come from Philadelphia and are probably partial to it from old associations. Mr. Bird has not decided what he will call the new street. Ironton avenue has been suggested.

In connection with his extensive plans for the imporvement of the West End of the borough, Major Bird has submitted a proposition to the Lehigh Valley railroad to run a passenger spur from New Market to the neighborhood of the two shops and the proposed group of houses that are to cluster about them. The Major has offered the road a 2,500-foot strip of land for right-of-way free of all charge. He is hopeful that his suggestion will be acted upon favorably.

THE FORUM.

School House Clock.

Editor the Daily Press:

In a conversation with the tenth member of the Borough Board of Education last evening anent the position of the tower town clock in the Somerset street school building the wisdom of the Board of Education was questioned regarding the placing of a tower clock with one face only and that fronting Somerset street.

The tenth member seriously spoke of the matter thusly: "As the sixth member of the Borough Board of Health, the eighth member of the Borough Council and the tenth member of the Board of Education, my attention was called to the one-sided tower town clock presently to be placed in the Somerset street school and I immediately protested to the best of my ability with my fellow members, showing them the folly of putting so much money into a place where a person would get a stiff neck looking for the time of day. Of course you are aware that the original position selected for the clock was underneath the dome or lookout in the front of the building where everyone supposed a window was to be inserted in the little open circle facing Somerset street. Well, when my fellow members understood that no fond mother could send her offspring out of doors to see what time it was without resorting to a surglass, because the clock could not be seen by any one unless they journeyed to Somerset street and then had to walk right in front of the school building, they began to investigate and consider. Now, no one for a moment questions the motives or intentions of the Borough School Board. Of course not. The matter is soon to be settled and that in a way possibly satisfactory to all the citizens. As the tenth member of the Borough Board of Education I will use all my moral efforts in endeavoring to have the other members of the board vote to raise the dome of the tower ten feet higher and then place four faces into the same so that the weary traveler and mountain farmer and every citizen of the borough can see the time of day and night, too, by having the same lighted at night by electricity. Those are my views and you are welcome to use them as you like, so you don't put my picture in the paper."

Borough Voter.

To Abolish Co. Supts.

The State Board of Education is considering the advisability of abolishing the county superintendents of public schools and appointing supervisors in their places. Opponents of the movements have raised the cry that a supervisor could not keep in close touch with local conditions. The necessity for their doing so is denied by the advocates of the change.

HOT FOR ALFONSO.

Young King of Spain Had to Flee From Burning Motor Car.

LONDON, June 8.—Under improved weather conditions King Alfonso of Spain paid an official visit to the city and was entertained at luncheon at the Guildhall by the lord mayor and corporation of London. The processions both going and coming from the city were of the most imposing character and afforded the people an opportunity of giving a hearty welcome to the young monarch.

Later King Alfonso and King Edward went in a motor car to Ranelagh, where a special polo match had been arranged.

Lord Lansdowne, secretary of state for foreign affairs, last night entertained some sixty gentlemen in honor of King Alfonso. The party included the archbishop of Canterbury, Whitelaw Reid, the American ambassador, and a number of other ambassadors and ministers, Premier Balfour, several members of the cabinet and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman.

After the dinner the Spanish ruler was present at a brilliant ball given by the Marchioness of Londonderry.

The only unpleasant incident of the day occurred during an automobile trip. His majesty and three other persons were occupants of the motor car and had passed through the shopping district without attracting unusual attention when the car was discovered to be on fire. The king at once alighted and returned to Buckingham palace in another motor car provided by detectives from Scotland Yard who were in attendance on his majesty.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 11.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Not ashamed of the gospel.—Rom. i, 13-17.

There were some things in the life of the apostle Paul of which he was probably ashamed. He was ashamed that he had stood by and guarded the clothes of those who stoned Stephen, the first martyr, to death; ashamed that he had even raised his voice against Jesus of Nazareth and ashamed that he had persecuted the followers of Christ. But after he had seen Christ and had been converted he was not ashamed of the Christ or His gospel. In Ephesus he preached it boldly in the face of those who ardently worshiped Diana of the Ephesians. In Athens he proclaimed it to Greek philosophers on Mars hill. In Corinth, the rich and aristocratic city of his day, he preached it as against the vices and immoralities of its people, and when called upon to speak for himself before the royal tribunal of Agrippa, Bernice and Festus he forgot to speak for himself and spoke for Christ—not ashamed of the gospel even before kings and queens. Many Christians today can stand before the poor and afflicted and say: "I am a Christian. Won't you become one?" But when they stand before the rich and influential, even if they get that far, their "tongues cleave to the roof of their mouths," and with apology and almost shame they speak of Christ, even if they speak at all. There may be many things in ourselves of which we may be ashamed, but no Christian need ever be ashamed of the gospel or apologize to any one for the fact that he is a Christian.

Paul was not ashamed of the gospel for four good reasons. (1) It is the power of God unto salvation, and therefore it actually saves men. (2) It is offered to men who need to be saved, because they have sinned. (3) It is offered upon the condition of faith—"to every one that believeth." (4) It is offered to all men. What reasons could be more convincing? All men have sinned and need to be saved. In the gospel God freely offers salvation to all men upon the simple condition of acceptance of it, and, moreover, this gospel actually saves. Why should any one be ashamed of such a gospel? If any one had an effectual cure for all the physical ills of mankind and could offer it to men for nothing, would they be ashamed to proclaim such a fact to the world? They would be glad to do it, and the world would gladly receive their message, and men will gladly receive the gospel, the message of spiritual and eternal salvation, if as Christians we show by our lives that we have been saved, and with manly boldness instead of stammering tongue, apologetic and cringing mien, we present the gospel to them. Paul was willing to preach the gospel in Rome, the great imperial city, because he was not ashamed of the gospel. He did preach it in Rome, and Rome listened and became the chief center of Christian activity, from which the gospel spread throughout the world.

Yet some people are ashamed of the gospel. Some are ashamed to openly acknowledge Christ as their Saviour by uniting with His church. Some after publicly confessing Him are weak and timid in presenting Him to others and in letting others know that they are Christians. In proclaiming our patriotism and even in standing for denominationalism we are not hesitating, but bold and without thought of shame. We are proud to say, "I am an American," or "I am a Methodist," "I am a Baptist," "I am a Presbyterian," but for some reason there is a hesitancy in boldly proclaiming our allegiance to Christ and our faith in the gospel of Christ. But this should not be. In no spirit of personal boasting, but in the truest spirit of personal humility, we should loyally stand by Christ and the gospel.

An Endeavor Musician.

It may not be generally known outside of Washington that the recent inauguration ceremonies closed with a great concert in the pension building, attended by 12,000 people. The chorus consisted of 500 voices trained and led by Percy S. Foster. The success of this concert and Mr. Foster's able handling of much larger choruses have awakened a desire in Washington for a permanent festival chorus under Mr. Foster's management. The Times, Post and other papers strongly advocate such an enterprise. All Endeavorers will rejoice in this recognition of the splendid musical director of so many Endeavor conventions.

At Home and Elsewhere.

In Bohemia and Moravia are five Christian Endeavor societies, called Krestansa Snaha.

The Richmond Hill (N. Y.) Baptist Endeavorers have made the splendid increase of more than 70 per cent since last June. They have also formed a Junior society, which is carried on by a Junior committee from the older society.

The inspiring motto of the European Christian Endeavor convention to be held at Berlin July 8-13 is, "Full Obedience to the King of Kings."

Joyful News is a Tamil monthly published at Pasumalai, India. It devotes half its space to Christian Endeavor and thus abundantly justifies its name.

A vigorous sermon to Christian Endeavorers was recently preached by Rev. John Herron of the Central Presbyterian church, Akron, O. He used the suggestive text, "A man was famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees" (Ps. lxxiv, 5).

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

June 11: "Not Ashamed of the Gospel"—Rom. i, 13-17.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

The feelings of glory and shame are known to all, but are not aroused in different people by similar experiences. What some persons admire others despise. This was very apparent at the time when Paul wrote his letter to the Christians in Rome.

He had never been in Rome, but was well acquainted with many who lived there. Some of these were Jews, and others were Greeks and Romans. His letter was written from Corinth about the year 58 A. D. The disputes among the Jews in Rome regarding one called "Chrestus" had become so violent as to cause the Emperor Claudius some eight years before this time to banish all Jews from the city. It is altogether probable that those who were at the first Pentecost present in Jerusalem from Rome carried to their home city the story of Christ and created as great a disturbance in Rome as the preaching of the apostles made in the Holy City itself. The number of the Jews in Rome must have been very large at the time of the banishment, for Pompey had carried a multitude of them there as slaves in 63 B. C., and their religious pertinacity made them worthless as servants and led to the emancipation of many, who became wealthy and influential. In fact, attendance on the synagogue became a fad with the Roman women of position who were inclined toward religion, and it is said that Poppaea, whom Nero married, professed that faith.

In view of all these circumstances Paul's declaration to the friends in Rome that he whom they knew had been educated by Gamaliel as a strict Pharisee—that he was a follower of the Christ and desirous to come to them that he might tell them more of the doctrine and impart to them the inner truth of the faith—this must have been impressive if not absolutely startling.

The gospel of Jesus Christ was the absolute reversal of all religious ideas and standards of action of the old religions, both Jewish and heathen, as held and practiced by the great mass of the followers of both.

The heathenism of that time was absolutely vile in its divorce from morality and the deification of lust and licentiousness. Judaism was rigid in its protest against this and raised the barriers of exclusion against all who did not practice its ritual of customs.

The gospel of Jesus Christ declared that neither had found the right way to God, who was in nature a Father of love and desired all men to worship Him in the spirit of love. It offered salvation to all men on the same terms of faith in Christ and proclaimed that all men were brethren and ought to love one another.

Such declarations roused all the resentment of the Jew and the derision of the Greek and Roman, who hated and despised each other intensely.

But this was the gospel which Paul knew to be the power of God unto salvation and the only possible way of life. He was ashamed of his old way of life, for he had found the truth in Christ and was not ashamed of it, but gloried in its proclamation.

In similar position are we today. Never was there greater need of clear discernment of the right way and fearless championship of the truth. Dead formality tends to replace real heart worship, and licentiousness is rampant in society, while corruption and avarice seek the control of business and civil affairs. The need of the time is the clear, loving, forceful preaching of the whole gospel message and enforcing it by pure living in all walks of life.

The need is of men who are not ashamed of the gospel of Jesus Christ and of whom the gospel need not be ashamed.

Prayer.

Go not, my friend, into the dangerous world without prayer. You kneel down at night to pray, and drowsiness weighs down your eyelids. A hard day's work is a kind of excuse, and you shorten your prayer and resign yourself softly to repose. The morning breaks, and it may be you rise late, and so your early devotions are not done or are done with irregular haste. No watching unto prayer—wakefulness once more omitted, and now is that reparable? We solemnly believe not. There has been that done which cannot be undone. You have given up your prayer, and you will suffer for it. Temptation is before you, and you are not ready to meet it. There is a guilty feeling on the soul, and you linger at a distance from God. It is no marvel if that day in which you suffer drowsiness to interfere with prayer be a day in which you shrink from duty. Moments of prayer intruded on by sloth cannot be made up. We may get experience, but we cannot get back the rich freshness and strength which were wrapped up in those moments.—Frederick W. Robertson.

Sentence Sermons.

Heaven's gates are not so highly arched as princes' palaces; they that enter there must go upon their knees.—Webster.

God has two dwellings—one in heaven and the other in the meek and thankful heart.—Izaak Walton.

Life is not so short but that there is always time enough for courtesy.—Emerson.

Obedience is the organ of spiritual knowledge.—Robertson.

The way to preserve the peace of the church is to preserve the purity of it.—Matthew Henry.

One ought to talk only as loud as he lives—a rule which would deprive some people of the privilege of shouting.—Chapman.

SARTORIAL SIGNS.

New Laces and Embroideries—Smart Boleros—Summer Corsets.

There is a difference, which has been very satisfactorily explained, between the new laces and embroideries—"When the lace is on the embroidery it is classed as embroidery; when embroidery is on lace, as lace."

Smart new bolero coats have double breasted effects across the bust. They have roll collars or revers that extend around the neck and form a V or U shape below the bust. The cloth of the jacket is carried for three inches over the center and fastened with colored buttons that harmonize with the cloth.

The summer corsets are cut on almost the same lines as the winter ones.

PINK MULL HAT.

Straight fronted makes are still worn, but there are indications of a smaller waist than of yore. This is arrived at by cutting in the corset at the waist. The new corset gives free play to the hips, thus accentuating their size, and the waist is made to appear smaller and rounder. The corset is still cut very low both back and front. For warm weather the thinnest silk batiste, lightly boned, is a favorite fabric.

The picture hat shown in the cut is of pink mull. A lingerie ruffle of filet lace over pink chiffon is draped about the brim, under which is a single La France rose. Pink louisine ribbon makes the Alsatian bow.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

GRADUATION GOWNS.

Daintiness and Simplicity the Keynotes of the Graduation Costume.

The all absorbing topic in the dress world just now is the graduation gown. To be in good taste this all important frock must be as dainty as possible and carry all the outward traces of simplicity. It is usually high necked or at most cut in a slightly square, Dutch effect. The skirts are full, fluffy and sweep length, and the sleeves to be modish should be elbow or three-quarter affairs.

There are a number of materials suitable and pretty for the graduation frock, among them being sheer handkerchief linen, which is exquisite when combined with cluny lace and fine, delicate French embroidery. Silk mull,

PERSIAN LAWN DRESS.

Persian lawn, Paris muslin and bobinette all vie in favor with organdie and chiffon. Silk is too elaborate and old unless it be a simple dress of white china silk.

A gown of china silk is very dainty made with a full gathered skirt trimmed with tucks running above a deep hem almost to the waist line in graduated widths from two to a half inch deep. The bloused waist is tucked horizontally above the deep girdle to within an inch of the round yoke of val lace. The elbow puff sleeves are finished with two very full tucked ruffles.

This idea might be carried out in any of the above mentioned tub materials and varied by putting insertions of lace between the tucks.

Gloves and shoes worn with the graduation costume will of course be white, the gloves long mousquetaires and the shoes or slippers of suede or soft white kid.

The gown pictured is of white Persian lawn. On each of the three ruffles forming the skirt are rows of lace insertion scalloped on the edge. The yoke and choker are made of herringboned bands of lawn, mingled with a scroll design of lace. The sleeves are made of alternating puffs and bands of insertion to the elbow.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

[Copyright, 1899, by F. Tennyson Neely.]

"Bless your dear old heart!" exclaimed the little lady, springing to her feet, facing him with indomitable smiles and thrusting forward two slender, white, bejeweled hands. "No—don't say you disapprove! Don't scold! Don't do anything but sit right down here and have a cup of your own delicious tea—(Frank, some boiling water)—that no one makes for you as I do—you've owned it many a time. And then we're all going in to the Palace for dinner and then to the theater, and I'll tell you all about it between the acts. Oh, you poor dear! I ought to have come before—you've been working yourself to death!"

And by this time, resolutely pulling, she had towed the general to a chair, and into this, his favorite leather-armed, canvas-backed, hickory-framed companion of many a year, she deftly dropped him and then, giving him no chance for a word, gayly pirouetting, she seized one after another upon each member of the party present—an accomplished little mistress of ceremonies, encased in a tailor made traveling suit that rendered her proof against a dozen minor ills, so beautifully was it cut and fitted to her pretty figure—and, with inexhaustible flow of merry words, presented her or him to the veteran in the chair:

"This, my honored general, first and foremost, is Miss Mildred Prime, daughter of a thousand earls is she, yet one vastly to be desired, though I say it who should not, for she hails from New York, which is enough to make me hate her, whereas we've just sworn an eternal friendship. You've only casually met her and her folks before, but I can tell you all about them. You should have put Frank at the head of your intelligence bureau, general. He'd never find out anything, but I would. We came on the same train together all the way from Ogden."

(A tall, dark-eyed, dark-haired, oval-faced girl, coloring slightly in evident embarrassment over these odd army ways, courtesied smilingly to the general and seemed to be pleading dumbly for clemency if there had been transgression.)

"This," hurried on the voluble little woman, seizing another feminine wrist, "is Miss Cherry Langton—Cherry Ripe we call her at home this summer, the dearest girl that ever lived except myself, and one you'll simply delight in as you do in me—when you get to know her. She is, as you have often been told and have probably forgotten, the only good-looking member of Frank's family—his first cousin. She was moping her heart out after all the nice young men in Denver went to the wars, and withering on the stem until I told her she should go, too, when she blossomed and blushed with joy as you see her now, sir. Cherry, make your manners." (Cherry, whose name well described her, was only waiting for a chance, laughing the while at the merry flow of her chaperon's words, and, at the first break, stepped quickly forward and placed her hand frankly in the outstretched palm of her host, then glanced eagerly over her shoulder as though she would say: "But you must see her," and her bright eyes sought and found the fourth feminine member of the group.)

"And this," said Mrs. Frank Garrison, bravely, yet with a trifle less confidence of manner, with indeed a faint symptom of hesitancy, "is Miss Amy Lawrence," and in extending her little hand to take that of the most retiring of the three girls, only the finger tips and thumb seemed to touch. Miss Lawrence came quickly forward, and waiting for no description, bowed with quiet grace and dignity to the chief and, smiling a bit gravely, said:

"Uncle left word that he would soon return, general, but he has been gone with Col. Armstrong nearly an hour. I hope we have not taken too great a liberty," and her glance turned to the substantial tea service on the rude camp table.

"Oh, I'm responsible for that—and for any and every iniquity here committed, solely because I knew our general too well to believe he would allow famishing damsels to faint for lack of sustenance." It was Mrs. Garrison, of course, who spoke. "I simply set Frank and his fellows to work, with the result that tea and biscuit, light and warmth, mirth and merriment, faith, hope and charity sprang up like magic in this gloomy old tent, and here we are still. Now, say you're glad I came, general, for these stupid boys—Oh! I quite forgot! Let me present the slaves of the lamp—the spirit lamp, general. Frank, you know—too well, I dare say. Stand forth, vassal Number Two. This, general, is Capt. Schuyler, a mite of a man physically—a Gothamite, in fact—but a tower of wit and wisdom when permitted to speak." (A diminutive youngster, with a head twice too big for his body, and a world of fun in his sparkling eyes, bowed elaborately to his commanding general, but prudently held his peace.) "Capt. Schuyler, my dear general, meekly bears the crescent of the subsistence department on his beautifully high and unquestionably New-York-made collars. He hasn't an idea on the subject of supplies except that commissary cigars are bad, but his senator said he had to have something and that's what he got. He'd rather be second lieutenant of regular infantry any day, but that was too high for him. Here's a youth it fits to a 't'—Mr. William Gray, of the —teenth foot, whom I knew years ago when we were kids in the same camp, and whose best claim to your notice is that you knew his father. He says so, and hopes you'll forgive all his budding iniquities on the strength of it." The general nodded with a grin at the youngster who stood at Miss Lawrence's left, and then held up his hand for silence, shutting off further presentations.

"I'll forgive anything but more chatter," said he, with a placid smile, "provided you give me some tea at once. Then I should be glad to know how you all happened to meet here."

"My doing entirely, general. (Frank, another cup—quick.) Cherry came with me to surprise my husband—an easy thing to do—I'm always doing it. We found him here, by your orders, striving to entertain these two charming damsels—the last thing on earth he is capable of doing, however valuable he may be with orders and correspondence. I heard Mr. Prime's story and at once suggested Col. Armstrong. I heard Miss Lawrence exclaim at sight of Billy here, and saw a case of old acquaintance and sent for him forthwith—so easy to say: 'The adjutant general's compliments'—I found that, after all, they had never met, but Miss Lawrence had seen him at the head of some famous student company. I it was who presented him to her, and summoned Capt. Schuyler to meet once more his fellow citizens, the Primes. I it was who ordered lamps, fire and the tea things. I am the good fairy who wrought the transformation. Behold me with my wand!"

She seized Miss Langton's slender umbrella and, waving it over her curly little head, pirouetted again in triumphant gayety.

The general was thoughtfully sipping his tea and studying her as she chattered and danced. When she paused a moment for breath he again held up his hand.

"Col. Armstrong went with Mr. Prime, did he?"

"With every assurance that the prodigal should be produced forthwith and restored to the paternal bosom," declaimed Mrs. Garrison, melodramatically, and would have ranted on, never noting the flush of pain and embarrassment that almost instantly appeared in the faces of Miss Lawrence and her dark-eyed eastern cousin, nor seeing the warning in her husband's eyes; but at the moment the tent flap was thrown back and held open to admit a tall, gray-haired civilian whose silk hat was uplifted as he entered in courteous recognition of the group, despite the distress that was betrayed in the pallor of his face and the instant glance of his dark eyes toward the slender girl, who stepped eagerly forward. Mrs. Garrison, turning quickly, saw, and with swift, agile movement sprang to one side. The general slowly struggled up from his easy chair. Reaching her father's side Miss Prime laid her hand upon his arm, looking fondly and anxiously into his face. A soldierly, middle-aged officer, in dripping forage cap and rain coat, stepped quickly in and lowered the flap.

"Did you find him, father?" was Miss Prime's low-toned, faltering question.

"We found—the soldier referred to; Col. Armstrong has been most kind; but it wasn't your brother at all, my child."

SIX YEARS IN ENGLAND.

Ambassador Choate Returned to America For Rest.

NEW YORK, June 8.—With a large crowd waiting on the pier to cheer and welcome him, Joseph H. Choate, who has been succeeded as American ambassador to Great Britain by Whitelaw Reid, returned from England on the Cunard line steamship Caronia, which arrived at this port last evening.

Mr. Choate is returning after a six years' ambassadorship. He was appointed by President McKinley on Jan. 12, 1899. His selection was greeted with great approval, as Mr. Choate was known as a master mind, and it has been a general opinion that during his service on the other side he proved himself to be one of the world's greatest diplomats.

Mr. Choate piloted the United States through several affairs of importance with Great Britain and made himself generally popular with the English people by his views.

"There is no possibility of my becoming secretary of state. Any such rumor is absolutely untrue. I think that Mr. Hay will be able to hold his own place."

Mr. Choate was accompanied in the Caronia by Mrs. Chogte and their daughter, Miss Mabel Choate. They started at once for Stockbridge, Mass.

"I am perfectly delighted to get home," said Mr. Choate. "I knew that Mr. Reid would be well received.

"Has the war ended? I hope to heaven it will soon. I haven't made any plans as to my future except that I expect to take a rest and Mrs. Choate wants me for home consumption. I expect to devote my time to her."

STORM DISTURBS CONFERENCE.

Lightning Struck Near Baptist Tabernacle, Stunning Five Persons.

BRISTOL, Va., June 8.—The German Baptist Brethren conference, which has been in session in this city for several days, closed last night.

While the session of the conference was in progress a terrific thunderstorm arose, and a bolt of lightning which struck near the tabernacle in which the conference was being held rendered five persons unconscious. They were revived by physicians who were on the ground when the incident occurred. Some damage was done to the kitchen and postoffice departments at the tabernacle by lightning. In the postoffice J. M. Shively of Cerro Gordo, Ill., general secretary of the German Baptist conference, was knocked senseless by the shock, and his departure for his home will be delayed on account of his injuries. Mrs. Katie Studebaker of Flora, Ind., was severely shocked in the same building. Others injured were three cooks in the kitchen.

In the same thunderstorm a bolt of lightning struck and instantly killed an old negro woman at her home in another part of the city.

BERIAH WILKINS DEAD.

WASHINGTON, June 8. — Beriah Wilkins, owner, editor and publisher of the Washington Post and formerly representative in congress from Ohio, died suddenly here of heart failure. Mr. Wilkins had just returned from his accustomed drive with Mrs. Wilkins and was sitting in a chair in his room when the end came.

Mr. Wilkins was born in Ohio fifty-nine years ago. He became manager of the principal bank in Uhrichsville, O., before he was of age, later acquiring a controlling interest there. He served in the Union army during the civil war.

A CHRISTIAN KNIGHT
General Boynton Rests In Historic Arlington.
ROOSEVELT PAID HIGH TRIBUTE.

Henry Van Ness Boynton, Soldier, Journalist and Publicist, Buried at the National Capital With Military Honors.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—With distinctive military and civic honors, the former befitting his rank in two wars and the latter his notable record in other spheres of service to his country, General Henry Van Ness Boynton, soldier, journalist and publicist, was buried here at the National cemetery at Arlington. The ceremonies, devoid of ostentation, in accordance with the wishes of General Boynton, were attended by a host of friends he had made in over half a century of active public life.

Though a civilian at the time of his death, the services, in accordance with special orders of the war department, were in conformance with the rank of brigadier general, which he twice held in the United States army. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe at the New York Avenue Presbyterian church, of which General Boynton had been a member for many years.

Two hymns selected by General Boynton for the occasion were sung by a quartet from the Gridiron club—"Just as I Am, Without One Plea," the favorite hymn of the deceased, and "Lord, If He Sleeps He Shall Do Well." Dr. Radcliffe's eulogy was an eloquent riview of the career of a lifelong friend. He spoke of the general as a "Christian knight, a man of courage, the ideal citizen, a pure patriot, a man who never hesitated to attack wrongdoing even when he had to assail those in high places."

The services were attended, among others, by numerous officials, representatives of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland, the Loyal Legion, the Sons of the American Revolution and the Gridiron club, in all of which organizations General Boynton had for many years past been a leading spirit.

The casket was carried on an artillery caisson, with an American flag as a pall, and escorted by two troops of cavalry. As the funeral cortege passed Fort Myer a brigadier general's salute of eleven guns was fired, and at the grave there was a short Scriptural reading by Dr. Radcliffe, two appropriate hymns by the quartet, a salute fired over the grave by a detachment of cavalry and taps rendered by a bugler.

Among the tributes was a large floral wreath sent by the city of Chattanooga. President Roosevelt in expressing sympathy to General Andrew S. Burt, chairman of the committee representing the Army of the Cumberland, took occasion to pay a high tribute to the character and public services of General Boynton.

POSTAL FRAUDS TRIAL.

Crawford Tried to Explain Away Testimony of Lorenz.

WASHINGTON, June 8. — William G. Crawford was on the stand during all of the session of the criminal court here, testifying in his own defense on a charge of conspiring with August W. Machen and George E. Lorenz to defraud the government in connection with the furnishing of supplies to the postoffice department.

Crawford attempted to explain the testimony of Lorenz in relation to the transfer of proceeds of the letter carriers' satchel contract. Lorenz has testified that the proceeds had been sent to him and that he had divided them between Machen, Crawford and himself. Crawford declared that he had sent to Lorenz only that part due him under the contract by which Lorenz and Crawford pooled their bids and shared in the profits. He explained the remittances sent him by Lorenz, amounting in all to one-fourth the amount Lorenz received, by saying that this amount was paid him by reason of cash payments made to Lorenz without awaiting final settlement with the government.

Labor Riots at Bay City.

BAY CITY, Mich., June 8.—For the first time since the street car employees of this city together with those of Saginaw and the interurban line between the two cities went on strike to enforce a demand for an increase in wages and a shortening of their hours serious rioting has now broken out, and at times the police are unable to cope with the unruly element. Five persons have been badly hurt.

Strike Settlement Hangs Fire.

CHICAGO, June 8.—After a conference lasting for five hours between the Employers' association and the committee appointed by the teamsters' joint council, with full power to settle the strike, all negotiations were declared off last night, and there is no immediate probability of a settlement. The union submitted a number of proposals which the employers flatly refused to consider at all.

The general synod is made up of four particular synods—New York, Albany, Chicago and New Brunswick. These four are made up of thirty-five separate classes, each of which holds two separate meetings a year, one in the spring and one in the fall. In the synod of New Brunswick, to which the Newark classis belongs, there are nine classes. There are seventeen churches in the classis of Newark, so that it has six delegates there. The headquarters of the Reformed church is at 25 East Twenty-second street, New York City. The denomination has 723 ministers, 645 churches and about 115,000 communicants. The Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church in America, located at New Brunswick, was the first institution of its kind in the United States. SUES ON CHARGE OF DOPING RACE HORSE

LEROY SNEDAKER BRINGS ACTION AGAINST TRENTON MEN.

Earle and Russ Pitman, of the Pitman stables, Trenton, have been sued by Leroy Snedaker, of this city, for damages occasioned him by the charge that Rosa May, their racing mare, was doped in the races at the driving park here Decoration Day.

Snedaker denies that he had anything to do with an act as alleged. He says that in his opinion the mare's actions on Decoration Day are to be accounted for from the fact that she had been worked too hard in the preliminary training by her owner and not by him, and that the change in the track, from a mile one, on which she had been worked, to a half mile one here, made some difference.

Mr. Snedaker has worked for years at various stables, around Trenton, and is said to bear a good reputation.

About thirty members of Crescent Temple, of Trenton, will go with the Salaam caravan. The Imperial Council will grant Crescent's charter this year. The Trenton temple was organized a year ago and since then has been working under dispensation. It now has a membership of 279. The Jersey Shriners will make their pilgrimage over the Lehigh Valley Railroad, a special vestibuled train leaving Jersey City on Monday morning, June 19, at 7:45 o'clock and stopping at Newark at 7:55. The train will also pick up pilgrims at South Plainfield, Bound Brook and Easton, after which the excursionists will enjoy the picturesque scenery of Pennsylvania and Northern New York.

Why Renew Old Quarrel?

It isn't a fair presumption that, because Assemblyman Coyne, of Union, has an aspiration to succeed Judge Cross, as Senator, the old Kean-Fowler fued should be reopened. Senator Kean's support of Coyne is quite natural—a simple return for Coyne's vote for him in caucus for United States Senator. Nor should Charles J. Fisk, of Plainfield, be arrayed against Kean as a Fowler adherent. Fisk is quite capable of sustaining his own candidacy. Union Republican will doubtless decide the question in their convention and abide by the result.—New York Press.

ENDEAVOR HOSTS TO ASSEMBLE JULY 5

INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION TO BE EHLD AT BALTIMORE.

When the Christian Endeavor hosts assemble in Baltimore on Wednesday, July 5, for their twenty-second international convention, it will be in the best appointed building ever used for the biennial gathering. New Jersey will be well represented, a special train having been chartered for the trip. A number of small rooms, surrounding the main auditorium, will be used for reception rooms, committee meetings and subordinate rallies, and overflow meetings will be held in the churches nearby.

There will be a hundred and twenty-five separate meetings, not including the annual sermons, which will be preached in all the evangelical churches of the city Sunday morning, July 9. Outdoor evangelistic services will be held nightly. The opening session of the convention will take place in the afternoon. At night will be held a "Festival of Praise" service, sung by a chorus of 2,500 voices. Thursday morning a school of methods, in which nine prominent workers will take part, will be conducted. The afternoon will be devoted to conferences of union officers, junior workers and intermediate societies, and there will be a junior rally in the armory.

At night "The Brotherhood of Endeavor" will be the name of a service, when speakers representing twelve foreign countries will speak. Friday morning state rallies and a quiet hour service will be held. Denominational rallies will take the place of an afternoon session. The night session will be devoted to addresses on "Evangelicalism Everywhere.

On Saturday morning will be held a number of outings, including one to Washington and Gettysburg. In the evening addresses will be given on "World-wide Endeavor." Sunday morning the delegates will attend the regular church services. In the afternoon three large meetings will take place, one in the armory for men, another for women in Lyric hall and a third for children in the associate church. FOUCH'S SLAYER CAUGHT through the Fanwood hill. Two children told him that an Italian covered with blood had passed them up the road a short distance back. Frederickson whipped up the horse, and a few minues later he overtook his quarry. Scadite was running weakly. His face and his clothes were covered with blood and he gave up as soon as the sergeant hailed him.

After taking an ugly-looking stiletto from his pocket, Frederickson bundled the prisoner into the carriage and hustled him to the Plainfield jail. The man was in bad shape, and the sergeant sent for Dr. Lufburrow, the city physician. A bullet had entered his left jaw and passed clean through his face, knocking out four teeth and chipping the jawbone. There was no sign of a knife wound on him. It was evident that he had hidde n in the woods near the track in order to gather strength for a flight to New York. The wound and the exertion of his first dash must have weakened him considerably. He was so badly racked that Chief Kiely did not attempt to question him until last night. Dr. Lufburrow said his wound was dangerous, but that it would do no particular harm to keep him locked up, so the chief held him in a cell.

The murdered man's family in New York were notified of his death during the day, and Antonio Fouch, a brother, and the dead man's father-in-law came out in time to take part in the examination. The Chief had them identify the prisoner. They said he was known to them as Louis Bunccelli; they had known him for three years.

Their presence at the examination lent a touch of excitement to the proceedings. They glared at the prisoner with full-blooded hate, and several times Detective McCarthy was compelled to step between them and the pale, bandaged prisoner as they closed toward him with menacing motions. When the father-in-law, who appeared to be nearly sixty, caught sight of Scadite first he spat at him malevolently. Scadite shrugged his shoulders and pointed to his bandaged jaw.

Scadite was examined through Lewis Skelly, of North avenue. He said the quarrel began over Fouch's claim to the exclusive right to peddle in the East End territory. Both of them came over from New York together early in the morning, he said, and Fouch told him then that he would shoot him if he tried to sell fish here.

"What did you do with your gun?" he was asked.

"I didn't have any; I had only a knife," he answered.

This statement is borne out by the character of the wounds found on the combatants. The eleven wounds on Fouch's body were all knife thrusts. Scadite has only a pistol wound, and a pistol was found lying beside Fouch. The revolver is a .32 calibre, five-shot weapon; three of the shells were empty when Chief Kiely picked it up. Fouch's left hand is slashed and cut, much as it would be if he had sought to wrest a knife from Scadite's grasp.

Scadite said he was married and had three children; he gave his address as 117 Mott street, New York. He wrote the name "Luigi Scadite" for the chief himself.

After the chief finished questioning Scadite, Collector Frank H. Smith, who had watched the examination, had a talk with the man. He told the chief a few minutes later that Scadite claimed Fouch attacked him with both knife and gun and that he wrenched the knife he used from Fouch's grasp. The chief scouted the story.

Scadite was remanded for ten days this morning by Justice Mosher. He plead not guilty on the charge of murder through his counsel, John P. Owens. The latter said he expected a preliminary hearing would be held in this city next week. Immediately after the hearing, which consumed only a few minutes, Chief Kiely took his prisoner to the county jail.

Chief Kiely has the names of seven or eight men who witnessed the fight between the men. Lawyer Owens declares that he will have no difficulty in establishing self-defense as the motive for his client's deed. The prisoner was photographed by Langhorn before being taken to Elizabeth.

The body of the murdered man will be sent to his home in New York this afternoon.

The sixty-fourth anniversary of the East New Jersey Baptist Association came to a close in the South Baptist church Wednesday night, at which time the newly organized First Italian Baptist church, of Newark, was considered for admission to the association. The authority was granted.

RAIN STOPS GAME.

Plainfield and Montclair School Boys Contest Cut Short.

What promised to be a finely-contested game of baseball between the Plainfield and Montclair High School teams, was stopped in the second inning on Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon, by a heavy downpour of rain. In the first inning Smith, the crack pitcher of the local nine, was hit heavier than at any time this season.

The visitors bunched four singles off his delivery which netted three down and blanked his opponents in the second inning. VanVleck, the star boxman of Montclair, proved a puzzle at the start. However, the local team succeeded in scoring two runs before the rain stopped the contest.

Arrangements for another game between these teams are now being made.

Miss Kreamer Improving.

Miss Louise Kraemer, of Fanwood, who was murderously assaulted recently by Frank Huber, who afterward killed himself, is still at the hospital. She improves every day. Owing to the injury to her jaw it is probable that a silver plate will have to be placed in the mouth.

Dinner After Horse Show.

The Plainfield Riding and Driving Club will give a dinner to the exhibitors and officials of the horse show, at the Casino, tomorrow night.

LOST ON TECHNICALITY.

Mistake in Summons Causes Justice to Dismiss Case.

An unusual landlord and tenant case was tried in Justice Hand's court, yesterday afternoon, Elizabeth T. B. Withrow endeavoring to secure possession of the premises occupied by Isaac C. Vannetta. A judgment of disposal was given in favor of the tenant, represented by Codington & Swackhamer.

The ground upon which the motion of dismissal was made was the fact that the summons required the tenant to appear and show cause why he should not surrender the premises on the "7th day of June next." The day upon which the summons was issued being June 2, it therefore required the tenant to appear a year later, and was illegal. The law being that "instant" and not "next" should be used in such a case.

Will Save State $15,000.

Governor Stokes has made a dissave the state about $15,000 a year. He has discovered that there is no law for the continuation of the commission to promote the propagation and growth of seed oysters, but whether the discontinuance of the commission will be a real benefit and saving to the state is a question upon which there is likely to be no difference of opinion among the oystermen of New Jersey.

Back Draught; Still Alarm.

Smoke issuing form the Tracey apartments in the "flats" on Watchung avenue, off East Front street, resulted in a still alarm being sent to fire headquarters this morning. The members of No. 2 hose wagon responded and found a back draught in a chimney to be the cause of the trouble.

ELIZABETH'S GREAT DAY

Thousands Witnessed Anniversary Celebration of Battle of Elizabeth Town.

SHAFT UNVEILED.

Street Pageant—Flow of Oratory—Sham Battle and Water Carnival Features.

Elizabeth yesterday was ablaze of glory while enthusiasm ran high and thousands of persons, among whom were many Plainfielders, lined the sreets in honor of the one hundred streets in honor of the celebration of the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the battle of Elizabethtown, which important event in the annals of Elizabeth was ushered in with the booming of cannon and the ringing of the bells of the various churches.

Besides the unveiling at Union Square of the State monument to "The Minute Men of the Revolution," there was also placed in position at the rear end of Scott's Park with their frowning muzzles pointing at the former mansion of the late General Winfield Scott, the hero of the Mexican War, two cannon, which were cast in 1839 and used afterward in that victorious struggle of 1846-7, when the military power of Mexico was crushed.

Ae Union Square, in the heart of Elizabeth, two big grandstands, prettily decorated with flags and bunting, had been erected—one for the 500 school children, who rendered patriotic odes, and the other for the singing societies, the Mayor, aldermen and other notables, including Mayor Buckle, of this city, and the Daughters of the American Revolution, who assisted in the dedication of the monument.

The programme included a presentation of a deed to the State of New Jersey of the property on which the memorial stands, which act was done by Mayor Samuel J. Berry, of Elizabeth.

The acceptance on behalf of the State was made by Speaker of Assembly John Boyd Avis, who represented Governor Stokes, the latter being unable to attend.

Official Programme.

The official programme was as follows:

Opening remarks by former Assemblyman William H. Corbin, of Elizabeth, presiding as chairman, and who made a brief but eloquent address; music, band; invocation, Rev. Dr. O. A. Glazebrook; song, "Red, White and Blue," public school scholars, under direction of Professor Thomas Wilson; song, "Hymn of Praise," Liederkranz and Elizabeth Maennerchor, Hugo Steinbruch, director; presetation of deed, Samuel J. Berry, Mayor of Elizabeth; acceptance of deed, John Boyd Avis, Speaker of the House of Assembly; unveiling of statue, by Miss Mary A. Barber, lineal descendant of General Barber, Colonel Dayton and Colonel Ogden; song, "Star Spangled Banner," singing societies and band; oration, Supreme Court Justice J. Franklin Fort; songs, "America" and Sabbath Day," singing societies; benediction.

At the conclusion of these exercises a National salute of thirteen guns was fired by the Veteran Zouaves from the historic old cannon that has been in their possession since the Civil War, and was presented by Washington to troops from Elizabethtown after the capture of Stony Point in the Revolutionary War. The statue and pedestal were placed in position yesterday.

Leaves Shaft to Union County.

After referring to the fact that nearly every portion of New Jersey can boast of some historic spot upon which a Revolutionary battle of more or less importance was fought, Speaker Boyd Avis, in accepting the deed, said:

"We are gathered today to do honor to those who, upon the field, or in this vicinity, fought a decisive battle in that war.

"Citizens of Elizabeth and Union County, this monument is to be left in your care. We leave it with you confident that your love for your country and State will inspire you with a desire to teach your children to reverence it for what it represents and to protect it from the hands of vandals."

The address of Justice Fort was of a historical nature. He reminded his hearers that here gathered the first Colonial Assembly, and here barracks for the troops engaged in the French War were erected.

Peep at the Big Parade.

The big parade, which was a notable attraction of the celebration, formed in six divisions at Elizabethport and was started soon after 9 o'clock on a signal being given on the fire alarm by Fire Chief August Gerstung. The grand marshall was Dennis F. Collins, commander of the

The sale of all other properties advertised was laid over till July 6th, when all remaining unpaid at that time will be sold without any further reservation.

HERR KINDERMANN'S BAND WHIPS THE FRENCH

SAILOR-SUITED MUSICIANS TURN OFF A GREAT DESCRIPTIVE PIECE

Those who attended the second and last concert of the German Marine Band at the Casino last night were unanimous in their regret that their numbers were not fourfold. There was almost room for four times the audience present, but enough were there to encourage the Herr Direktor's robust bandsmen with applause of much body and volume.

None of the applause wet astray. The programme was rendered splendidly, culminating in a wonderfully constructed "musical symbolism," which the Herr Direktor's programme writer very properly called "An All Greater Sensation," with an exclamation mark. The sensation is the piece de resistance of Herr Kindermann's repertoire. It is a descriptive piece that starts with profound peace and peasants singing in the fields, goes through the whole Franco-Prussian War, licks the French out of their boots and sinks back into pastoral peace. It was almost as great a performance as the war itself; which was a pretty big affair from all accounts.

Edgar B. Smith, for a number of years instructor in Leal's School on West Front street, has accepted the position of principal of the High School .Brattleboro, Vt., to which place he will remove with his family.

HILL & SHUPP TO RETIRE

Department Store to Wind up its Business.

GENERAL SURPRISE.

Goods Are to be Disposed of—Mr. Shupp Goes to Plymouth, Pa., and Mr. Hill to Delaware.

Hill & Shupp, the dry goods merchants on West Front street, make the announcement in the advertising columns today that they will retire from the business in this city after closing out their stock of goods. The announcement will cause quite a stir in busines circles, for the firm has been one of the leaders in its line here for three years, besides the store is one of the oldest in the city.

Charles Shupp is the executor of his father's estate at Plymouth ,Pa., and this work, together with other interests, requires that he live in that place. Joseph Hill, the senior member of the firm, has decided to withdraw and center his interests in his store at Wilmington, Del., where he resides.

The firm will begin its closing out sale tomorrow, and from that time on the people of Plainfield and vicinity will be given an opportunity to secure good bargains. It is the intention to sell all goods at twenty per cent. discount and in the staple stocks the supply will be maintained until the close of the sale.

This store was originally opened by Edward White's father many years ago and in turn was taken by Edward White, who was one of the leading merchants. He sold the businees to Crosby & Hill and later Mr. Shupp purchased Mr. Crosby's interest, continuing as Hill & Shupp. Since coming here Mr. Shupp has made many warm friends, who will regret to learn of his retirement.

During the sale there will be a musical program on the piano every afternoon, and on tomorrow afternoon and night, a full orchestra will render a popular programme.

SHAKESPERIAN PLAYS AT CASINO TOMORROW

"AS YOU LIKE IT" AND "MERCHANT OF VENICE" SCHEDULED.

The most recent and excellent of "al fresco" performances are given by The Sylvan Players, headed by Sidney Herbert and Alida Cortelyou. This select company will appear in two performances on the Casino grounds tomorrow afternoon and night. "As You Like It" will be produced as a matinee show and "The Merchant of Venice'" will be the night attraction.

Mr. Herbert was for ten years a member of Augustin Daly's most excellent organization and played in the memorable out-of-door performance given by Mr. Daly at Shakespeare's Memorial Building on the banks of the Avon River in England. He also played the part of Shylock at Daly's Theatre, New York, for fifty-four nights. He has been and is a member of Charles Frohman's excellent companies.

Miss Alida Cortelyou has been a member for six years of Wilson Barrett's London company, and was for several years with Sir Henry Irving although she is an American, a descendant of the Dutch Cortelyous whose farm was originally where now is Prospect Park, Brooklyn. The other able members of The Sylvan Players are well known actors belonging to Charles Frohman's companies.

SPOILED HIS VISIT.

Harkawer Fought Herman Berkowitz in February; Pinched Wednesday.

Deputy Sheriff Peter Weaver broke up Harry Karkawer's pleasant little visit to his friend, S. Hirsh, who lives on Park avenue, Wednesday afternoon. Karkawer comes from New York. The last time he was here was in February, and just before he got on the train at the depot to go home he got into a fight with Samuel Berkowitz. Berkowitz says Harkawer finished that fight by cracking open his head and breaking two fingers. When Berkowitz heard that Harkawer was visiting Hirsh Wednesday, he went to Justice Hand's office on the jump and swore out a warrant. Weaver served it.

"This takes from my visit all the pleasure," said Harkawer bitterly.

His friend Hirsh sympathized with him, and to cheer him up went on his bond for $100, which the court demanded to insure his presence at a hearing this morning.

FUTILE BAN ON DANCING

Dunellen Ministers Protest to Borough's Board of Education.

PRESENT PETITION.

Two Members of the Board Make a Fight Against Dancing at Commencement Reception.

An unavailing protest against dancing in connection with the commencement of the Dunellen school was made by the three pastors of the Dunellen churches at the meeting of the school board this week. The clergymen presented a written petition asking the board to forbid the pupils to hold a commencement dance. The board by a vote that is said to have been seven to one decided not to interfere with the customary affair.

Rev. W. W. Casselberry, of the Presbyterian church, who is strict in his views on morals and ethics, is said to have originated the petition. Rev. S. K. Doolittle, pastor of the Methodist church, signed the paper next, and he carried it to Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the Baptist church. Mr. Fletcher, who is noted for the liberality of his views, declined at first, it is said, to sign. He is reported to have said that he could see no harm in a commencement dance, and thought it would not be consistent of him to put his name to the petition. At Mr. Doolittle's earnest solicitation he finally consented to sign.

It is said that a somewhat spirited debate marked the consideration of the petition by the board. I. J. Stites, one of the prominent members of the Methodist church, argued against the dance, and Wilson Frederick supported him. The consensus of opinion in the body, however, was that the dance contained no elements of harm, and furnished an innocent touch of pleasure that was fitting and appropriate to the occasion.

STRAWBERRY FESTVAL.

Ladies' Auxiliary of the A. O. H. Hold a Successful Affair.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the A. O. H., Division No. 1, held its annual strawberry festival in Central Hall, Park and North avenues, last night. It was a highly successful affair.

Over 200 guests attended. The hall was prettily decorated with bunting and wreathes, and cut flowers graced the tables. The center of the hall was clear of tables, and dancing was a feature all the evening. Eugene O'Reilly's orchestra furnished the music.

Strawberries, ice cream and wonderful cakes, encased in extraordinary coats of icing, were served. The committee comprised Mrs. T. L. Walsh, chairman; Miss Lilly Terrell, Mrs. K. Bimble, Miss Kate Kane and Miss Mary Fitzsimmons.

Miss B. McCue, Miss M. Kenney, Miss M. Ettenger nd J. Smithy served the refreshments.

Agriculturists to Meet.

The Somerset County Board of Agriculture will hold its regular meeting at the court house tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Prof. Edward B. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, will open the discussion on the subject: "The Best Methods of Raising Wheat."

Women's Gowns a Close Second as Horse Show Attraction.

FIRST DAY EVENTS.

Fine Weather Brings Out a Fair-Sized Crowd—Many Fine Bred Animals on Exhibition at the Show.

Man having done his part and the beasts being ready to do theirs, the weather gods hadn't the heart to withhold the one other factor necessary for the second annual horse-show of the Riding and Driving Club, at the Driving Park this afternoon. Every element of complete success marked the opening.

The track never looked prettier. The stretch of green that faced the grandstand, shimmering under thee bright sun and cloudless skies, made a background for the picture formed by ring and grandstand that was nothing short of perfection. No indoor horseshow could ever approach the picturesque effect that greeted the crowd that filled the grandstand at the Driving Park.

In that same picture of ring and stand the summery dresses of the women, all flounces and furbelows, crowned by wonderful creations whose source is Paris, formed a part that caught and filled the eye. If Horse is King, Gown is Queen.

FIVE SPEAK-EASY MEN ARE INDICTED

PLAINFIELDERS PLEAD NOT GUILTY; TRIALS NEXT WEEK.

Defendants in thirty cases indicted by the Grand Jury, were arraigned before Judge Vail in the Union County court at Elizabeth, this morning; completing all but two of the list of sixty-three.

Of this number five were Plainfielders, all charged with the illegal selling of liquor. The charge and plea of not guilty and bail and time set for trial were the same in each case, with the exception of that of Lorenzo Paolia, who was arraigned for the third time on the same charge. His bail was fixed at $500, which he furnished himself. In the other four cases the bail was fixed at $200. The other cases were as follows: Peter Cramer, Thomas Brown, Abraham Freedham and Dominick Parreti. Trial was set for June 15.

LUMBER COMPANY WON.

Robert McNabb Fails in Suit Against Boice, Runyon & Company.

Before a jury in Justice Hand's court yesterday, the suit of Robert McNabb against Boice, Runyon & Company, to recover for the alleged loss suffered through the non-delivery of certain posts, was won by the lumber concern. The jury rendered a verdict of no cause of action. McNabb claimed that the company failed to deliver cedar posts as ordered within the time agreed upon. The company's witnesses testified that cedar posts were not understood in the original order and that they were delivered after notification that the purchaser looked for that kind of post.

It took the jury over an hour to reach a decision. Charles J. McNabb, son of the plaintiff, opposed W. A. Coddington, counsel for the defense.

Concert at Casino.

A special feature of the concert to be given at the Casino on Tuesday night, June 19, by the Plainfield High School Banjo and Mandolin Club, will be a trio, 'cello, violin and piano. Members of the Royal Arcanum are protesting loudly against the increase in rates, which is to go into effect on October 1, under a plan adopted by the Supreme Council at its session at Atlantic City a few days ago. The increase in the case of men past 50 years of age is so great that some of them say they will not be able to pay it, and will either have to give up their membership of reduce the amount of their certificates. The Royal Arcanum is one of the largest fraternal insurance societies in the world, having a membership of 312,000. In this State there are about 25,000 members, of whom almost 1,500 live in Mercer County. Representatives of the Supreme Council will visit councils in which dissatisfaction exists, between now and October 1, and explain the new system. Just what effect the increase in rates will have on the destinies of the Royal Arcanum is a matter of considerable speculation among the members. An advocate of the new rate schedule said: "We have come to the bridge which every assessment insurance society must cross, and have crossed it. Our rates are now permanent and will not be increaced in future. They are materially lower than the rates in the old line insurance companies. We cannot give insurance for less than it costs, of course, but we do give it at cost, plus necessary expenses, which are comparatively trifling. The increase of rates may cause a few of the older members to drop out, but their number will be small. The order will not feel the loss. We are now on a sound business footing and the future of the Royal Arcanum is bound to be prosperous. Needless to say, this optimistic view is not shared by all."

Plainfield, N. J., June 9, 1905.

What has become of Senator Child's press agent?

The Newark News suggests the name of Jim Jeffries for head of the Equitable. There's a knock for Hyde.

Brevity is commendable; but don't bring your story to a finish when it is only half told. Get right to the point and then be wise enough to stop.

Judge George Gray denies that he is to be chairman of the Equitable reorganization committee. The United States Senator has always borne a good reputation and doubtless proposes to hold on to it.

The Daily Press acknowledges the receipt of two contributions today to the free open air band concert fund. William Palmer Smith, of Belvidere avenue, has sent his check for $5 and Paul Taylor Brown, of Belvidere avenue, sent his for a like amount. On top of these comes the check of Charles W. McCutchen for $10. The generosity of these three citizens is fully appreciated and there is no doubt that others will see fit to help the cause in a similar way. There is already enough money in hand to defray the cost of six concerts, but as it is planned to give the masses an opportunity of hearing popular airs without any expense once a week during the summer, any donations to the fund will be acknowledged promptly by this paper and will be turned over to the treasurer as soon as received. Don't forget the first free concert takes place at Concert Park tonight. W. S. Mygrants will be the cornetist and Lew Leever the vocal soloist.

THE FORUM.

The Public Be Blanked.

Editor, The Daily Press:

The 6:57 conductor says he doesn't care a blank what the newspapers say and that they can all go to "Paterson." He also says "We are going to run this train to suit ourselves."

Disgusted Commuter.

The Czar on the 6.57.

Editor, The Daily Press:

The 6:57 commuter that wrote the article published in your valuable paper June 7th, regarding "Conductor's Stupidity," certainly knew what he was writing about. The conductor, or "Czar," as he is frequently called, of the 6:57 train, is one of the most disagreeable unobliging men employed by the Central railroad, and the sooner the company gives him a long vacation, the better it will be for them, and the disgusted commuters of the 6:57 train. I am a 6:57 commuter, but you can bet your sweet life I've got an insurance policy hid away in my years.

School Clock Discussion.

The Borough Board of Education will hold a special meeting Monday night to definitely determine what is to be done in connection with the proposed clock in the Somerset street school tower. It is certain that it will have three faces and there is a possibility that it may have four, as the alterations that will have to be made to the tower will not be any more expensive for the larger number. At the present time it is thought the faces will be placed at a point just above the railing, which is now open but will be enclosed.

Dr. Hillis May Be Speaker.

Though no speaker yet has been announced for the Plainfield High School commencement exercises, it is possible that the selection will be made known tomorrow. It will in all probability be Rev. Dr. Dwight Hillis, of Brooklyn, with whom Mr. Maxson has been in communication since Jacob Riis announced he could not come.

—The horse is king in Plainfield today but the famous Colburn strawberries are the peer of all others in season. Neuman Brothers receive them fresh every day.

Second New Jersey Regiment. The colonel was mounted on a charger. He had for his chief of staff Captain Robert L. Patterson, former adjutant of the Third New Jersey Regiment.

In the afternoon a sham battle was fought in the upper part of Elizabeth. The British were entrenched behind breastworks thrown up at Union Square. The entire Second Regiment participated in the fight.

In the First Batalion were Companies C, I, K and M. Major Wilson Y. Dungan, commanding, carrying national colors, commanded by General Hand.

At the termination of the action the regiment was reformed and a review thereof tendered to Mayor Berry, in Broad street, opposite the First Presbyterian church, followed by regimental parade.

There was a grand water pageant on Staten Island Sound last night in which about 200 boats of all kinds took part. Fire Commissioner Captain Willam T. Cox was commadore of the fleet and all the vessels were illuminated and decorated with Chinese lanterns. There was several pretty and picturesque floats in the procession, which was moved slowly up and down the Kills several times.

There was plenty of music in the parade, while on the Jersey and Staten Island shores hundreds of bonfires were lighted and cannon boomed from wharves at Elizabethport while the marine demonstration was in progress,

MISS MARTHA ZELLIG NOW MRS. STITES

DANCE AND ENTERTAINMENT FOLLOW WEDDING.

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, Miss Martha Jellig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jellig, of Wilson avenue, was married last evening to William Stites, of Whitewood avenue. The ceremony took place at the bride's home at 8 o'clock and was performed by Rev. Lawrence Riggs Howard, pastor of Hope chapel. The young couple stood beneath an arch of ferns and flowers, which comprised the house decorations.

Miss Edith Kreutzfeldt was the bridesmaid and Charles Jellig, Jr., acted as best man. Miss Jellig wore a gown of white mulle with Brussels lace and carried bride roses. Her attendant was attired in white silk and also carried roses. The groom presented to the bride a diamond brooch and to the bridesmaid and best man, pearl and turquoise rings.

Following the ceremony a reception was tendered the young couple by the Gesang and Turn Verein in Saengerbund Hall, the bride's family being members. It was largely attended. Dancing was the feature but an entertainment was presented consisting of zither solos by Frank Jellig, recitations and songs by William Freise, of New York, and songs by the singing section of the Verein.

During the festivities, Mr. and Mrs. Stites received a pleasant surprise when Walter Koeppel, in behalf of the Verein, presented them with a dinner set. There were congratulatory remarks by Henry Haurand and others and at 11 o'clock a supper was served. The young couple left this morning for a trip to Washington and on returning will make their home on Whitewood avenue. The groom is a carpenter by trade and is widely known.

Children Day at First M. E.

Children's Day exercises will be held at the First M. E. church on Sunday at 10:30 in the morning instead of 2:30 o'clock as formerly. The baptism of children by the pastor will be an interesting feature. The school will enter the church led by the vested choir in processional. Music and speaking by members of the school will compose the programme. The public is cordially invited.

W. C. T. U. Memorial Service.

Under the auspices of the Women's Christian Temperance Union a service will be held in the rooms on Madison avenue, Sunday afternoon, in memory of Mrs. Stephen Cahoone and Mrs. Brown, who were members of the Union for several years, and who died recently. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, county president of the Union, will have charge of the service.

—The Plainfield Surprise Store, 324 West Front street, will give $1.00 worth of Red Star stamps free. See adv.

WIFE VISITS SCADUTO; POLICE INVESTIGATING

ITALIAN WHO KILLED FELLOW COUNTRYMAN.

John P. Owens, counsel for Lorenzo Fuci, the murderer of Luigi Scaduto, had a conference with his client in the county jail at Elizabeth this morning. The wife of the prisoner accompnied him.

The meeting between the couple was marked by tears on both sides. The woman is deeply affected by her husband's arrest and the bloody affray that led to it. She is young and her three children are not yet in their teens.

Mr. Owens went to Scaduto's house yesterday. He came away shaken by the atmosphere of wild grief that pervaded the household. The way the woman and her children take the affair indicate that Scaduto is not the sort of Italian to whom duals to the death come natual.

Mr. Owens will not outline his defense—says, in fact, that he doesn't know enough about all the surrounding incidents of the case to form it yet. He says, however, that he believes he has a strong chance to clear his client of a murder charge in any degree.

Chief Kiely went to Elizabeth this morning to confer with the prosecutor, and from there he went to New York to look into the case from that end to seek for possible sidelights on the trouble that led to the fight.

There is a possibility that Justice Fort will call the Grand Jury together for a special session on the case.

The large stock of Plainfield's Oldest Department Store will be closed out as promptly as possible, after which the present firm of Hill & Shupp will retire from active business in Plainfield. Other business matters, together with the care of an estate in Pennsylvania, make it necessary for Mr. Shupp, the active partner, to withdraw from business in Plainfield, and on this account the senior partner, Mr. Hill, also concludes to close out his business interests here.

The departments mentioned below will open the sale and will all be subject to the liberal discount of 20 CENTS ON EACH DOLLAR OR 2 CENTS ON EVERY 10 CENT PURCHASE. AMUSEMENTS.

At Jerseyland Park, formerly known as Galvin's, the new management offer for week commencing June 11, the famous Gilmore's Pickaninny Troupe. Every week something new will be offered, and special open air atractions will be given from time to time. Sunday evening a display of fireworks will be given, and new features will be added to the midway. The new management promises clean and up-to-date attractions and solicits the patronage of the citizens. Let them go and judge for themselves.

In the two short months since its opening, the big New York Hippodrome has become a feature of New York life, and is now looked upon by residents and visitors as an old established institution as much to be regularly patronized as the Subway. "The largest playhouse in the world," at Sixth avenue between Forty-third and forty-fourth streets, has not had one vacant seat at any night performance since the opening and the daily matinees are almost as popular. Four hundred thousand persons have witnessed "A Yankee Circus on Mars," the big musical extravaganza, and "The Raiders," which has been pronounced by all critics the most sensational war drama that has ever been staged.

Brighton Beach Park, Coney Island, made its first bid for popular favor on Monday, May 29th. If all the promises made are realized, this resort will be one of the largest and most attractive in this country. The controlling company has secured seventy-five acres of land with a mile of ocean front, and they are building a board walk over a mile long connecting Brighton Beach with Manhattan Beach. There will be a "Brighton Pike" which promises to be a marvel in the matter of allurement, combining all the best features of the "World's Fair Pike" with a host of novelties. As a great feature there is the Boer War under the direction of Captain A. W. Lewis, the originator and general manager of the enterprise. This was the prime feature of the exposition in St. Louis.

LITERARY.

"On the Newport Road" is the attractive title of the novelette which opens in the June Smart Set. Sewell Ford is the author, and he has written as sprightly a piece of fiction as has recently appeared. The story tells of Mrs. "Billy" Redkirk's social ambitions, her desire that her daughter, Barbara, may make a brilliant marriage, the sudden loss of the Redkirk millions, and their ultimate recovery. The tale is comedy from first to last—bright, clean, clever comedy—and no reader can afford to miss it.

"You will remember with what a gasp of astonishment the country received Commissioner Garfield's report on the Beef Trust," says the publishers of Everybody's Magizine in "With 'Everybody's' Publishers" for June. "Could it be possible that the Beef Trust was the victim of unjust persecutions? Could it be possible that the Beef Trust was the object of pity, as Garfield painted it? Mr. Russell, in this June installment, takes up Mr. Garfield's report and in a calm, unimpassioned, overwhelmingly convincing fashion shows the utter absurdity of the report, gives the real facts and backs them up with proof piled on proof. It is a rare ability that can make a dry business subject interesting. Mr. Russell has the gift in marked degree, and he has never used it to so good purpose as in this June installment of his series."

DeVINNE FIGURE ILLEGAL.

Question Depends on one Word in Auto Law.

A question is being raised whether certain figures used in license numbers on automobiles comply with the requirements of the new automobile law. The figures in question are those known as "Devinne" or numerals which have a width one-half inch in some places and narrower in others.

The law says the markers shall contain separate Arabic numerals "not less than four inches in height, the strokes to be of a width not less than one-half of an inch. The Devinne numerals have been largely sold, and in fact more have been bought in this state and in other states than of any other style.

The figures are made with half-inch strokes with the exception of one or two connecting lines. The question raised is whether every line or stroke should not be of the uniform width of one-half inch in order to meet the requirements of the law.

At Sea Girt Camp.

Three more companies of regulars, Companies F and G from Fort Jay, and Company B from Fort Slocum, of the Eighth Infantry, are now in camp at Sea Girt for rifle practice. There are nearly two hundred men in this detachment and it is expected that they will finish their preliminary practice and record work by June 26, when they will return to their home posts.

—Dr. Francis L. Patton, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, has left for Bermuda, where he will spend the summer on his estate. He was accompanied by Mrs. Patton.

Notable Women

Romantic Career of Myriam Harry, the Author

In Paris the Goncourt academy is an association which annually awards a valuable money prize for the book the members consider to have the most literary merit of any that has appeared during the year. This year messieurs the judges gave the prize to a man, as usual. Next day one of these sapient persons unthinkingly remarked to a lady that of course the money would have gone to Mme. Myriam Harry for her great novel, the "Conquest of Jerusalem," only they did not dare to let a woman have it, because that would establish a troublesome precedent!

Naturally, loyal to their sex as women are today, the French ladies let the story speedily be known and expressed in severe terms their opinion of the injustice of the academy. At this the publishing house of Hachette established a fund for a women's academy, in which yearly a prize of $1,000 should be given to the feminine author who had produced the greatest work for that twelvemonth. Of course the prize was bestowed on Myriam Harry, who in private life is Mme. Perault, wife of a distinguished French sculptor.

The extraordinary success of Myriam Harry's book is due, first, to the fact that she dares to live her own life and write what she feels and thinks, and, second, to the circumstances of that life itself. Her father was a Polish Jew and traveler and her mother was a German. Her father and mother were married in Egypt. She herself was born in Jerusalem. Her first years were spent in Asia Minor. She was educated in Germany, afterward went to Paris, where she spent two years learning French and then began to write in that language.

Mrs. Helen Campbell.

A woman who has done much special service to her own sex as well as general service to humanity is Mrs. Helen Campbell, the author, lecturer and sociologist. She has gone deeply into the historic past as well as the present needs of womankind. In one of her books, "Household Economics," she traces the records of thousands of years and shows how every one of the present commercial industries was invented by women.

The primitive women were mothers who were obliged to provide for their offspring. Mrs. Campbell shows how mother love is the parent of all industry. The savage mother was obliged to go afield to get food to keep her children alive; hence came agriculture and the keeping of flocks and herds. It was often necessary to preserve food for seasons of scarcity; hence the primitive mother devised the preserving which was the beginning of the great canning industry and incidentally of no end of food adulteration for which woman is in no way responsible. In like manner and for the same purpose woman evolved spinning, weaving and sewing.

Grit of the Twentieth Century Woman.

In the woman of today is wakening both a physical and a moral power that she herself has not hitherto suspected she possessed. In Brooklyn recently a young lady who would not give her name sprang at a runaway horse, seized his bridle and after being dragged twenty feet stopped him, while a number of men looked on, not one daring to do what the girl did.

Miss Neuscheler of Newark discovered a man looting her jewel case and bureau. She grabbed him and held him by main force till help arrived. In Boston Miss Ottilene Alderman waked in the night to find a burglar in the room. She ordered him out. He did not go. Then she shot him. Finally a Pennsylvania man tried to beat his wife. She turned on him and defended herself so vigorously that the husband quickly had enough of that fight. He owned up that his wife was the better man.

MARCIA WILLIS CAMPBELL.

A Girl Hunter.

Miss Abbie Taggart is one of the most noted huntswomen of America. During a recent hunting trip in the Lake Tahoe region she killed seven bears and a mountain lion. When she was only three years old one day her father strapped her upon a pony's back, then gave the pony a slap and started it on the run.

CHAPTER III.

A day had dawned on the Presidio Heights as brilliant as its predecessor had been dismal. A soft south wind had kept the fogs of the Pacific far out to sea and cleared the summer sky of every wisp of vapor. The sun of early August shone hot and strong upon the sandy wastes between the western limits of the division camps and the foamy strand beneath the low bluffs, and beat upon the canvas homes of the rejoicing soldiery, slacking cloth and cordage so that the trim tent lines had become broken and jagged, thereby setting the teeth of "Old Squeers" on edge as he gazed grimly from under the brim of his unsightly felt hat and called for his one faithful henchman, the orderly. Even his adjutant could not condone the regimental commander's objectionable traits, for a crustier old villain of a veteran lived not in the line of the army. "Ould Canker" the troopers had dubbed him during the few years he had served in the cavalry, transplanted from a foot regiment at the time of the reorganization, so-called, of the army in '71; but a few years of mounted duty in Arizona and later in the Sioux country had sickened him of cavalry life and he gladly accepted a chance to transfer back to the infantry. Now, 20 years after, risen by degrees to the grade of lieutenant-colonel, he found himself in command of a famous old regiment of regulars, whose colonel had donned the stars of a general officer of volunteers, and the pet name—save the mark—of cavalry days had given place to the unflattering sobriquet derived from that horror of boyish readers—the ill-favored schoolmaster of Dotheboys hall. He had come to the —teenth with a halo of condemnation from the regiment in which he had served as major and won his baleful name, and "the boys" of his command soon learned to like him even less than those who had dubbed him "Squeers," because, as they explained, there wasn't any privilege or pleasure he would not "do the boys" out of if he possibly could. Gordon had promptly tendered his resignation as regimental adjutant when his beloved colonel left the post to report for duty in the army destined for Cuba, but Lieut.-Col. Canker declined to accept it, and fairly told Gordon that, as he hadn't a friend among the subalterns, there was no one else to take it. Then, too, the colonel himself added a word or two and settled the matter.

A big review had been ordered for the morning. An entire brigade of sturdy volunteers was already forming and marching out by battalions to their regimental parades, the men showing in their easy stride and elastic carriage the effects of two months' hard drill and gradually increasing discipline. The regulars were still out in the park, hidden by the dense foliage and busy with their company drills. The adjutant and clerk were at their papers in the big office tent, and only the sentries, the sick and the special duty men remained about the body of camp. There was no one, said Private Noonan to himself, as he paced the pathway in front of the colonel's tent, after having scrupulously saluted him on his appearance: "No wan fur the ould man to whack at, barrin' it's me," but even Canker could find nothing to "whack at" in this veteran soldier who had served in the ranks since the days of the great war and had borne the messages of such men as Sheridan, Thomas and McPherson when Canker himself was sweating under his knapsack and musket. Like most men, even most objectionable men, Canker had some redeeming features, and that was one of them—he had been a private soldier, and a brave one, too, and was proud of it.

But life had little sunshine in it for one of his warped, ill-conditioned nature. There was a profound conviction in the minds of the company officers that the mere sight of happiness or content in the face of a subordinate was more than enough to set Canker's wits to work to wipe it out. There was no doubt whatever in the minds of the subalterns that the main reason why Squeers was so manifestly "down on" Billy Gray was the almost indestructible expression of good nature, jollity and enthusiasm that had shown in the little fellow's face ever since he joined the regiment. "If we call the old man Squeers we should dub Billy Mark Tapley," said Gordon one day, when the lad had laughed off the effect of an unusually acrimonious rasping over a trivial error in the guard report book. "He's no end kind when a fellow's in a fix," said Gray, in explanation, "and all the time he was soaking me I was thinking how he stood by Jimmy Carson in his scrape"—a serious scrape it was, too, for young Carson, detailed to escort certain prisoners to Alcatraz and intrusted with certain funds to be turned over to the chief quartermaster of the department, had unaccountably fallen into a deep sleep aboard the train and awoke to find both funds and prisoners gone. Explanations were useless. The commanding general would listen to no excuse; a court-martial was ordered, and a very worthy young officer's military career seemed about to close under a cloud, when "Old Canker" threw himself into the breach. He had long suspected the sergeant who had accompanied the party in immediate command of the little guard. He hated the commanding general with all his soul, and how it came about no one could thoroughly explain, but one day Canker turned up with indubitable proof that the sergeant was the thief—that he was bribed to bring about the escape of the prisoners, and that he had drugged the fresh spring water he brought in to the young officer after the burning heat of the desert was left behind in the dead of the summer night. Canker even recovered most of the stolen money, for there was a woman in the case, and she had safely stowed it away. Carson was cleared and Canker triumphant. "See what the man can do when his sense of justice is aroused," said the optimists of the army. "Justice be blowed," answered the cynics. "He never would have raised his finger to help Carson but for the joy of proving the general unjust, and a regimental pet, the sergeant—a thief."

Yet Gray reverted to this episode as explanation of his tolerance of Canker's harshness and thereby gave rise to a rejoinder from the lips of a veteran company commander that many a fellow was destined to recall before the regiment was two months older:

"In order to settle it, somebody's got to find his life or his commission in jeopardy. Maybe it'll be you, Billy, and I'm betting you won't find Squeers a guardian angel."

Yet on this sunshiny summer morning, with hope and sunshine and confidence in his handsome, boyish face, Lieut. Gray came bounding up to the presence of the regimental commander as though that sour-visaged soldier were an indulgent uncle who could not say him nay. A stylish open carriage in which were two remarkably pretty girls and a gray-haired, slender gentleman, had reined up in the street opposite the entrance to the row of officers' tents and Canker had ripped out his watch, with an ugly frown on his forehead, for three of his companies had just marched in from drill, and three of their young lieutenants, on the instant of dismissal, had made straight for the vehicle and he half-hoped to find they had lopped off a minute or so of the allotted hour. The sound of merry laughter seemed to grate on his ears. The sight of Gray's beaming face seemed to deepen the gloom in his own. Instinctively he knew the youngster had come to ask a favor and he stood ready to refuse.

A special train of high-grade Pullman equipment will leave New York, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Altoona, and Pittsburg on Monday, July 5. Tickets covering round-trip transportation, Pullman accommodations (one berth) going, and all meals in dining car when traveling on special train, will be sold at the following very low rates: New York, $63.50; Philadelphia, $61.75; Baltimore, $60; Washington, $60; Harrisburg, $59.75; Williamsport, $59.75; Attoona, $58.75; and at proportionate rates from other stations.

Deposit of tickets with joint agent at either Denver, Colorado Springs, or Pueblo not later than July 14 and payment of fee of fifty cents secures an extension of return limit to leave either of the above points not later than August 8.

These liberal return limits will enable tourists to take advantage of the many delightful side trips to resorts in the Colorado Mountains, the Yellowstone Park, the Grand Canyon of Arizona, and the Lewis and Clark Exposition at Portland, for which special reduced-rate tickets will be on sale at Denver, Colorado Springs, and Pueblo.

For further information concerning specific rates, stop-over privileges, and returning routes consult ticket agents. A descriptive itinerary will be mailed upon application to George W. Boyd, general passenger agent, Broad Street station, Philadelphia, Pa. 6 9-13

NEW STATION FOR CRANFORD.

Jersey Central to Build East Bound Structure.

The new east bound Centrall Railroad passenger station at Cranford, on which work will be begun, will be situated on the south side of the four tracks and reached by a subway, completed last fall. The building will be, when completed, the finest local passenger station on the line, and will mark the second step in a comprehensive scheme of improvements planned by Joseph O. Osgood, of North Plainfield, chief engineer of the road. The building will be seventy feet long by twenty-four feet in depth, with a train platform 128 feet long, extending along the front of the station. In the rear of the building will be a porte cochre. The interior will be finished in hard wood, steam-heated and lighted by electricity.

SNAP SHOTS.

A case of being too obedient is reported by a Plainfielder whose son had annoyed him by rushing into his library, where he was writing and disturbing him with his talk. He forbade any more such interruptions and told the son on entering the library to sit down quietly until he was at leisure. A few days later the little son rushed into the library with flushed and excited face, but the father noted with pleasure that he sat down without a word. For a long time the father watched the boy fidgeting in his chair and at length said: "Well, my son, what is it?"

"Oh, papa," exclaimed the boy, "a pipe in the bath room has burst, and the water is running down stairs like sixty."

After Franchises.

At a meeting of the Metuchen borough Council, held Monday evening, the N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Company, which holds a franchise for a line through the main street of the town, tried to obtain an extension to the entire town for seventy-five years. The councilmen, however, have gotten the modern idea that franchises are worth something to the municipality which has them to give, and were slow to respond. Meanwhile W. J. Lansley also appeared at the meeting in the interest of the Hudson and Middlesex Telephone Company and asked for a franchise. Council decided to hold the matter over until next Monday evening when an adjourned meeting will be held to pass upon the applications.

Holy Cross Lawn Fete.

A lawn fete will be held tomorrow afternoon and evening on the grounds of Holy Cross church. It will be given under the auspices of the Choir Boys' Club, and among the many attractive features will be a Punch and Judy show, archery, fish pond and Jack Horner pie. There will also be for sale home made cakes and candy, ice cream, lemonade and fancy articles. Should the day be stormy, it will be held in the parish hall.

Home After Long Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. DuBois and son Herbert, of Putnam avenue, returned to Plainfield, Wednesday, after a trip aggregating 10,000 miles through Arizona, Mexico, California and British Columbia. Their last stop of importance was at the opening of the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland, Oregon, last week.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL'S CRACK-A-JACK NINE

Never in the history of baseball at the Plainfield High School has any team been so successful in its games as the 1905 nine. The schedule, thanks to the able management of Howard G. Lapsley, was the hardest and longest arranged by any of the neighboring school managements, and in spite of the strong playing on the part of their opponents, the local team has come off with a record of thirteen games won out of the sixteen played, a record of which schools of twice its size might well be proud. Of the defeats, two were by college club teams, namely, Camp Bowser and Blair Hall. The only high school nine able to defeat the local team was the all-star Brooklyn Boys' High School, and they accomplished this only after the hardest kind of work, by the score of 12 to 11.

Among the teams who fell victims to the Plainfielders are, Erasmus Hall H. S., Leal's School, Pingry School, Newark Academy, Morris H. S., Cranford H. S., Rutgers Prep. School, Reading Academy, Newark H. S.

The local team has been unusually fortunate in having two fine pitchers. Smith, the crack boxman, and Burt, the clever southpaw. Davis caught both these artists in magnificent style, having the highest fielding average on the team. Doane, on first, let few go by him, and did some sensational fielding stunts, while Thompson, who captained the nine, besides keeping the men together well, did some pretty work at second. Craig, at shortfield, played little short of phenomenally, fielding and bunting prettily. He is distinguished by leading the batters. Conway, on third, played steadily always and beame noted for his heavy hitting. The outfield, Freeman, Brakeley and Rugen, got most anything that came their way. On the whole the nine developed splendid team work and heavy batting ability.

DIAMOND DUST.

Kiernan, at short, is right on his game, playing very fast in the field and is steadily improving in hitting.

Buffalo, of the Eastern League, has a Mathewson, no relation to "Christy," who it is said is making good.

Despite the fact that he occasionally makes an error, Oldring plays his best to win, whether in the field or at the bat.

As a pinch hitter, Connolly is one of the best. Whenever the team needs a hit to win the game, the right fielder is right there with it.

The Junior Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church held its last meeting for the season this afternoon. The League will resume its meetings in the fall.

The Women's Foreign and Home Mission Societies of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church held an all-day sewing meeting yesterday at the home of Mrs. Aaron Brower, near South Plainfield.

The Plainfield team is particular fortunate in having such an excellent third baseman as "Mike" Leonard. He seldom makes an error and he covers his position in a way to please the fans.

McLane, of Fordham College, who is known here and who pitched in the disputed Plainfield-Westfield game last season, has signed to play with Newark, of the Eastern League. He will join the team at the close of the college year.

Phil. Smith, the crack pitcher for the Plainfield High School team, will undoubtedly manage the team next season during his last year in school. He expects to enter Brown University and it is predicted that he will make a second Lynch, as a slab artist.

But one more game remains to be played before the Plainfield High School schedule for the 1905 season will be finished. Tomorrow morning the local High School team will line up against the Pingry School on Crescent Oval. A good game is expected, as this team always makes the Plainfielders hustle.

GOLF.

The golf committee of the Plainfield Country Club has announced that W. L. Glenney is the winner of the cup offered for the best written examination in a school of golf held at the clubhouse on Decoration Day. According to its decision he had the highest percentage. There were ten questions covering all of the principal points of the game and twelve members of the club competed.

No Departmental Nines.

Neither the police nor fire departments are to be regularly represented by nines this year, from present indications. Men with baseball ability are numerous enough in both arms of the city's service, but they are not, for some reason, as anxious to get in the gams as they were two seasons ago.

SHOUVOUS SERVICES.

Celebration of the Hebrew Feast of Weeks Begun Here.

The Hebrews of Plainfield, in common with their brethren of the faith all over the world, began the celebration of Shouvous, the Feast of Weeks, last night. Services were held in the synagogue Children of Israel on New street, and will continue three days, until sundown tomorrow.

Shouvous derives its name from the fact that it begins exactly seven weeks from the second day of the Passover. It commemorates the return of Moses from Mt. Sinai, bearing the tablets of the Law.

It is a season of rejoicing and merrymaking among the Jews. It is customary at this time for the faithful to exchange gifts.

The wedding will be a brilliant affair and will be witnessed by many of the doctor's friends from both the east and the west. Following a trip to Niagara Falls and other points, Dr. and Mrs. Gesswein will come to Plainfield.

SOCIETY APPLAUDS AS HIGH-CLASS EQUINES PASS BEFORE THE JUDGES

Plainfield's Second Annual Horse Show Begins With Every Element of Success.

OVER 300 ENTRIES.

C. W. McCutchen, H. G. Runkle and H. G. McElwaine Get Coveted Blue Ribbons for Animals in Local Classes.

Under circumstances that foretold nothing but success, Plainfield's second annual horse show of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club, began at the Driving Park yesterday afternoon. The day was perfect, almost ideal, the boxes and grandstand were filled with women in summery dress and smartly clad men and the entry list was one of the best that ever awaited the judges.

It comprised every class of riding and driving horses, many of them with scores of blue and red ribbons to their credit, bringing the total list of entries up to 300. New York, Philadelphia, Morristown and Orange have sent their handsomest steeds but so far Plainfield has shown up well. In the awards yesterday afternoon, blue ribbons went to Charles W. McCutchen, H. G. McElwaine and H. G. Runkle, while other local owners secured seconds, thirds and fourths against many competitors. Fifteen classes were gone through with yesterday and as many more will be shown this afternoon, which will be the greater day of the two.

The general committee has provided every facility for caring for its large gathering of guests and the show has proved a social affair as well as an exhibition of all that is best in the equine world. The showing of horses and traps in the ring delighted the eye, an excellent programme by LaVere's band enthralled the ear and there were other features that made them all a delightful combination.

The judges, who are Dr. F. C. Grenside and James G. Marshall, of New York; George Willing, of Philadelphia; Joseph W. Ogden, of Morristown, and Percy Evans, of Warrentown, Va., had a difficult task in selecting winners but gave general satisfaction in the following awards:

Class 16—Sixteen combination and saddle horses, suitable for saddle and harness purposes; horse first shown to an appropriate vehicle and judged as a horse suitable for harness purposes; horse unharnessed in the ring and shown and judged under saddle. Horses best suited for both these purposes awarded the prizes: First—"Jacobite," Miss M. C. Maxwell; second—"My Dream," George Watson, Jr.; third—"All Ablaze," Miss Margaret McCutchen; fourth—"Sporting Times," Mrs. J. G. Lyman.

As the blue, red, yellow and white ribbons were fastened to the horses' bridles after each class ,the spectators applauded vigorously and also at times when the animals were being exhibited. Miss Leila Cruikshank won especial commendation for her riding in class 24 and class 26, for hunters and jumpers. Seated on "McGregor" and "Fassiferee," her own horses, she took the jumps easier, in some instances, than the professional riders from the Westchester Farm. Her skill as an equestrienne was further shown in class 26, when she lost her stirrup through "McGregor" swerving and was pitched forward but quickly regained her place.

Ralph E. Hallock's pony, "Pilot Boy," of which much was expected, was ruled out of the pony classes owing to height. The limit was 14.1 hands and the animal measured 14.2½. This made him eligible to other classes and he was re-entered for today.

The attendance yesterday afternoon was larger than the opening last year and the out-of-town visitors were especially noticeable. The boxes were occupied by Charles J. Fisk, Orville T. Waring, Paul Taylor Brown, George P. Mellick, Lewis E. Waring, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Charles D. Freeman, George A. Beaton, Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Frank DeL. Hyde, Harry G. Runkle, Marion S. NOT TO REINSTATE COP

Police Board Last Night Decided That Hamilton is not Needed.

REPORT MONDAY NIGHT.

Findings Are Kept Secret—Board Heard Testimony—Not Up to Chief Kiely.

It can be stated on excellent authority that Peter Hamilton, former special patrolman, will not be reinstated or appointed as a regular officer, in accordance with his request. While the result of the police Board meeting held last night will not be made public until the adjourned meeting of the Common Council on Monday night, it has been learned that the matter rests entirely with Mayor Buckle and that in view of certain developments it may be said that Mr. Hamilton will not be returned to the force.

Mr. Hamilton, as well as Sergeant Frederickson, attended the meeting of the Police Board, and in the investigation of the former patrolman's case, it is said that it was a question of veracity between Sergeant Frederickson and Mr. Hamilton, as to what occurred on certain occasions, and that weight of opinion favored the former.

It is further alleged that Mr. Hamilton did not prove himself to be subject to discipline, that it was not a matter in which Chief Kiely was direcly interested, as has been intimated. It is said that Mr. Hamilton was informed that in case Mayor Buckle did not appoint him as a regular officer, as was the case, he would naturally cease to be a member of the force, and this thing has been done in the case of others appointed as specials.

It is also stated that Chairman Tyler, of the Police Committee, repeated his former statement that there are no charges against Mr. Hamilton, but that after a service of eighteen months as a special it was decided that he would not measure up to the Police Board's standard of an officer and for this reason he was not made a regular member of the force.

It is also alleged that Mr. Hamilton admitted to the members of the Police Board that he had received courteous and fair treatment while serving as a special officer.

When the Fourth of July comes round this season, the long-expected baseball team for Somerville will be in operation; at least, that is the latest from the board of managers. Anyway, the people of the town have subscribed and paid in $1,000 as a starter, which indicates the sporting blood of the town is still healthy. The old West End grounds used last season, will be abandoned. The Camman Field has been rented and will be enclosed at once. A fine grandstand will be erected. This field is considered better located than the old grounds and is convenient for the trolley.

PLAINFIELD CONQUERORS

Will Try to Wrest Tenth Victory From All-Collegiates.

THE COMBINATION.

The Pitcher and the "Men Behind" Him—Clean Slate for This Season.

Plainfield's unbeaten baseball team plays its tenth game on Crescent Oval this afternoon, its opponents this time being the All-Collegiates. The team has engaged in nine contests on Crescent Oval and has captured every one. The opposing teams have been of good strength and have given good exhibitions of the National game. To use the words of Manager Frank Selee, of the Chicago Nationals, this team is the strongest independent organization in the country and Plainfield is proud of its representative team and will support the management in its efforts to give the best attractions and the best ball.

Associated in the management are Lines Groo and Philip Daab and they are to be congratulated upon the success of their organization.

Walter Cosgrave, the centerfielder, although a comparative stranger here, is one of the most popular men on the team. His fine work for four years on the Princeton 'Varsity team is remembered and he plays the game for all he is worth.

William Beck, who has been doing the most of the pitching, hails from North Hudson. Last summer he pitched for a Long Island team, but gained little attention until he appeared here. He is a steady boxman and has no end of curves and twisters.

"Willie" Deegan, also a member of the pitching staff, is well-known for past performances and he is a great favorite here. He pitched one game Decoration Day afternoon and his work was greatly admired. The fans hope to see him work occasionally.

"Dave" Driscoll, who is captain of the team, has been playing ball for several years, and is unquestionably the best first baseman in this part of the country. He was largely instrumental in getting the present team together, and the fact that he has not made an error on the local diamond this year, shows the kind of ball he is putting up.

Pierre LaMar is recognized as one of the best of catchers. He is in the game from start to finish and is a hard worker. His record is a "top-notch" one. Several league managers have been after him, but he refuses all offers.

Reuben Oldring, second baseman, quickly jumped into fast company and is making good. He frequently makes sensational plays and errors don't count with him so long as he can help to win the game.

"Happy" Kiernan as a short-stop, has few equals. He plays his position with steady, clock-like precision and covers lots of ground. As a pinch hitter he is making a record. Quiet and unassuming he always gets there.

"Mike" Leonard, who covers third base, has long been recognized as a peer in his position. He is a sure fielder and reliable batsman. He picks up hot grounders with ease and is a sure thrower.

"Pete" Cregan, who protects left field, is one of the best known players on the team. His brilliant fielding and timely hits have made him more popular this year than ever. He rarely makes an error.

Michael Connolly, the right-fielder, has more than justified the confidence placed in him by the management. He covers his territory perfectly and can always be counted upon to do his share of the hitting.

WALTER SWALM A BENEDICT.

North Plainfielder Weds Former Plainfielder.

Walter Swalm, son of M. and Mrs. Alburtus Swalm, of Duer street, and Miss Lucy May Doremus, formerly of this city, but now of Rickville Center, L. I., were married this afternoon at the home of the bride. Only a few relatives and near friends of the bride and groom witnessed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Swalm will return here tomorrow night or Monday and will go to housekeeping. Mr. Swalm is employed by H. C. VanEmburgh, civil engineer, and is well known in a large circle of friends.

"Nate" Titsworth Surprised.

'Nate" Titsworth of the Bound Brook Hotel as a rule is not forgetful, but Monday night when twenty-fie of his old friends form Plainfield marched in on him in a body he happenede to think it was his birthday. He was equal to the occasion however, and in an hour or so a collation was served.—Bound Brook State Centre-Record.

GIRL'S TEAM BEGINS BASKETBALL SERIES

SEVENTH GRADE, WHITTIER SCHOOL, WINS FROM EIGHTH GRADE.

The first of a series of five games was played yesterday afternoon by the girls' basketball team of the Seventh and Eighth grades of the Whittier School, on the lawn back of the Casino. The Seventh grade won, 9 to 7.

The game was as close as the score indicates. At the end of the second half the team was tied, 7 to 7. Scarcely had play been started again when a foul gave the Seventh grade a chance to score. Within half a minute another foul led to the required point. Harriett Moody, captain of the Eighth grade, and Barbara Fleming, who led the opposing forces, played star games. Each scored all the goals for her side.

The line-up: Seventh grade—forwards, Barbara Fleming, Mary Bradford; centers, Hariet Knox, Margaret Leggett, Bessie Alpaugh; guards, Louise Andrews, Marion Snyder. Eighth grade—forwards, Madeline Durar, Harriett Moody; centers, Catherine Lambert, Edith Cuming, Pauline De Lany; guards, Irene Dunham, Marion Mann. The referee was Roy Woodhull, coach of the Seventh grade; umpire was Norman Loughlin, the Eighth grade coach. The linesmen were Walter Caldwell and Clyde Doane.

The next game will be played Monday afternoon. Interest in the series is high among the Whittier pupils.

GOD NOT AUTHOR OF EVIL, ITS CREED

BICKNELL YOUNG EXPOUNDS CHRISTIAN SCIENCE'S TEACHINGS.

Bicknell Young delivered an impressive lecture on Christian Science before a large and appreciative congregation in the denomination's church at Cranford last night. Among the people who heard the lecture were a number of Plainfielders.

Mr. Young declared incidently:

"Christian Science does not proclaim a new God nor a new law, but comes declaring the same God, and the same law that Jesus declared, the one infinite eternal God, who is good, and his good and unchangeable law. Christian Science declare the omnipotence, omniscence and omnipresence of God as do all other denominations, and upon that basis shows that evil has no power, knowledge or presence; in other words, that is unreal.

"Christian Science never ascribes evil to God or makes him in any way responsible for it, but shows that evil originates in a belief of material existence entirely apart from God, and unsupported by science or Truth. Of all people, Christian Scientists believe most absolutely in Christ. They accept the teachings of Christ Jesus without reservation. They declare that his command to beal the sick is as binding as that to preach the gospel, and that there is no evidence that it was intended for his time only. It was scientific religion that healed the sick in he time of Jesus and his disciples, and it does the same work now, and must always do it, since his life and work were an example for all time, and his method was a universal and imperishable heritage of man."

J. P. Laire Non-Suited.

In the suit of John P. Laire, of this city, against William A. Struble, of Trenton, to recover $2,500 on an alleged fraud in the sale of the City Laundry plant, a non-suit has been granted by Judge Rallstab, in Mercer Court. The court allowed counsel for the plaintiff a general exception to this ruling. The nonsuit was granted on the grounds the plaintiff had not established the fraud alleged.

Miss Smock, of New York, formerly of Truell Court, has been spending a short time in town.

MYGRANT BROKE RECORD

He Held Tone on Cornet for Two Minutes and Seven Seconds.

FIRST CONCERT.

2,000 People Attended Open-Air Band Entertainment at Concert Park—Popular Programme.

After a year's silence, Concert Park broke out into melody again last night. Two thousand or more people welcomed the return of the weekly band treat.

It was the most successful season opening that Bandmaster Ben LaVere has experienced. He had the best band he has ever gotten together, and the programme was enjoyable all the way through. The enlarged grandstand was filled. and the space outside the ropes was packed. About 600 paid admissions were reported at the entrances. The programme was "pop," with the exception of one number, from top to bottom. The sextette from "Lucia de

BEN LaVERE,
Bandmaster.

Lammermoor" was the only concession to ancient musical traditions, and it was as liberally applauded as the "Little Johnny Jones" selections.

W. S. Mygrant, the cornet soloist, scored the inevitable "hit of the evening." Mr. Mygrant is several things that entitle him to musical consideration and a paragraph all by himself. He is not only a very clever and highly finished cornetist, but he is the only and original tooter against time, and the leader of the 13 th Regiment Band, of Brooklyn. This honor is not regarded with awe in New York, but in the country it looms large enough for mention. Mr. Mygrant demonstrated that he was all three things with signal success.

After his solo, "Polka Equa Tone," by Liberati, which evoked much handclapping and enthusiasm in the grandstand, he went after the long-toot record. Timed by Bandmaster LaVere, he sounded his instrument in one continuous note, without the slightest suggestion of a break, for two minutes and seven seconds. That smashed the previous existing record, which he hung up himself in Prospect Park several years ago, by six seconds. Mr. Mygrant is the only cornetist who has tried for that particular record, but the performance is acknowledged by cornetists to be remarkable and not likely to be beaten by any one who might try the feat. Last night was the first time Mr. Mygrant tried the sustained note since his Prospect Park achievement.

Applause compelled him to render "Sweet Adeline" as an encore, and the people insisted on a repetition of the chorus of that. At LaVere's request, Mygrant took up the baton for the rest of the concert. He conducted the band with a snap and a nerve that carried the musicians into a highly spirited swing. The audience was lavish in its attestation of the fact that Mr. Mygrant can lead a band.

The vocal numbers, which have come to be an expected and regular feature of the concerts, were sung, and well sung, by Lew Leever, a young man with a robust voice and the commendable faculty of singing at an open-air pitch without losing the value of his melody. He sang "Take a Car" and "Sweet Marie." They were illustrated.

Of this number 5,504 are taxed upon their capital stock, issued and out standing, and the remaining ten upon the basis provided by law for the particular classes of corporations to which they belong.

In the thirty-two pages which comprise the June American Boy there is not a dull line; and both in variety and class of matter the paper is head and shoulders above any other periodical for boys. The cover page, entitled, "Texas Bids Goodbye to the President," showing a great throng of happy, smiling faces, makes an appropriate index to the high-class stories and articles in the magazine. Kirk Munroe's stirring story, "For the Mikado," is advanced three chapters. "A Page Without a Pull," being the story of a page in Congress, finishes most happily, and Mr. Spaulding concludes "The Origin and Early History of Baseball." Further chapters of "My Four Years at West Point," and "A French Frog and an American Eagle" are given.

LIGHT ON THE QUESTION!

The question of summer comfort is solved when a Gas Range is installed in the kitchen. It eliminates the drudgery connected with a coal fire as well as the over heated house which accompanies coal-cooked meals. It does away with long fires and gives the housewife time for recreation and pleasure. As extensive meals can be prepared with little labor, unexpected company has no terrors for the household that cooks with gas. We sell ranges from $9.50 to $15.00. $2.00 down and $2.00 a month. Connections are free.

A Wonderful Saving.

The largest Methodist church in Georgia, used 32 gallons of L. & M. mixed with 24 gallons of oil, thus making paint cost about $1.20 per gallon. They calculated to use 100 gallons of other paint. Saved about $80.00, and also got a big donation of L. & M. Dealers gladly sell L. & M., because their customers call for it, and say they used it 12, 14 and even 30 years ago.

Don't pay $1.50 a gallon for linseed oil, which you do in ready-for-use paint.

Buy oil fresh from the barrel at 60 cents per gallon, and mix it with L. & M. Paint.

It makes paint cost about $1.20 per gallon. Sold by

MORTON CHAIRMAN

Former Secretary of Navy to Head Equitable.

ALL OFFICERS RESIGN THEIR POSTS

Hyde Surrenders—Grover Cleveland, George Westinghouse and Morgan J. O'Brien to Be Trustees of Society's Millions.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Paul Morton, who retires from the secretaryship of the navy on July 1, has been elected and has accepted the chairmanship of the board of directors of the Equitable Life Assurance society. His election marks the first and most important step in the reorganization of the society and was followed by the tender of the resignations of President James W. Alexander, Vice President James H. Hyde, Second Vice President Gage E. Tarbell, Third Vice President George T. Wilson and Fourth Vice President William H. McIntyre.

Mr. Morton, as explained by Senator Chauncey M. Depew, was the unanimous choice of the board of directors of the Equitable, although the meeting was not altogether harmonious.

It is known that Brayton Ives and Charles Stewart Smith, who were from the outset of the controversy on the side of the conservative element, protested against some of the proceedings of the meeting and are believed to have voted against Mr. Morton's election.

The new chairman, to further quote Senator Depew, did not consent to take office until he had received positive assurances that he would have a "free hand as to measures and men."

Mr. Hyde "divested" himself of the majority control, but, as made clear in his letter to the board, retains a substantial interest in the society.

All of the resignations submitted to the meeting are subject to the pleasure of Chairman Morton, and none has yet been accepted.

Just what action Mr. Morton will take as to these resignations was not disclosed, but it was strongly intimated that President Alexander and Vice Presidents Tarbell, Wilson and McIntyre retired with the belief that their executive relations with the Equitable had ended.

The interests to which Mr. Hyde disposed of his stock number some two score individuals, led by Thomas F. Ryan, vice president of the Morton Trust company, which has close relations with the Mutual Life Insurance company, one of the Equitable society's principal rivals. Mr. Ryan is said to be heavily insured in the Equitable, as are, according to report, many of the others who acted with him in the purchase of the Hyde holdings.

The price paid for the Hyde estate stock, which is to be trusteed practically in perpetuity, was not disclosed, but estimates vary from $5,500,000 to $5,000,000.

In addition to the 502 shares held by the Hyde estate, which includes the widow of Henry B. Hyde, founder of the society, and his daughter, Vice President Hyde is said to hold between 160 and 170 shares, and it is these holdings which Mr. Untermyer refers to as the "substantial interests" which his client retains.

The men requested to hold the majority stock by Mr. Ryan are former President Grover Cleveland, George Westinghouse of Pittsburg and Morgan J. O'Brien, recently elevated to the chief justiceship of the appellate division of the supreme court of this district.

Mr. Ryan is the acknowledged head of the metropolitan traction companies and only a fortnight ago induced Mr. Morton to ally himself with them.

Mr. Hyde sent a letter to the directors, which says in part:

"Now that the legal rights of the stockholders have been determined by the supreme court of the state, I have reached the conclusion as the result of the most earnest and anxious reflection that the welfare of the society founded by my father and which I have so deeply at heart demands that the stock control shall cease to be vested in any one person and that I should part with a majority of the stock in such form that no one individual shall continue in control of the destinies of the society.

"I have accordingly but not without great hesitation and personal regret sold the stock which my father placed in trust."

Mr. Ryan made public a letter to Mr. Cleveland, who is named as one of the trustees. The letter says in part:

"You may be aware that a bitter controversy exists regarding the management of the Equitable Life Assurance society and that public confidence has been shaken in the safety of the fund under the control of a single block of stock left by the late Henry B. Hyde. This loss of confidence affects a great public trust of more than $400,000,000, representing the savings of over 600,000 policy holders, and the present condition amounts to a public misfortune.

"In the hope of putting an end to this condition and in connection with a change in the executive management of the society I have, together with other policy holders, purchased this block of stock and propose to put it in the hands of a board of trustees having no connection with Wall street, with power to vote it for the election of directors.

"I beg you to act as one of this board with other gentlemen who shall be of a character entirely satisfactory to you.

"I have written similar letters to Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, presiding justice of the appellate division of our supreme court, and to George Westinghouse of Pittsburg, two of the largest policy holders in the society."

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD

We were all at the band concert last night and enjoyed the programme too. Maybe we will annex Plainfield to the 'Plains sometime and have concerts of our own. (Don't forget the building boom, four new houses are under way and more are planned.) Some of the Plainfielders would hardly object to this, as they seem to like Scotch Plains, coming here regularly each Sunday rain or shine.

The annual statement of the borough has been printed in pamphlet form and is ready for distribution among the taxpayers. The report shows a cash balance on hand Feb. 20 of $862.43, a delinquent tax list (against real estate), of $195.88, which against the sidewalk tax $516.79 remains unpaid. The total expenditures for the year 1904 were $7,600.98. The report shows the borough in a healthy financial condition.

Mrs. James H. Parks, who has been spending several months visiting relatives in California, has returned home. Mrs. Parks' sister-in-law returned with her and will spend sometime visiting relatives and friends in the East.

No local entries have been made in the horse show being held at the Plainfield Driving Park, but a number of the lovers of horse flesh from here have been taking in the two-days' programme.

Services tomorrow at the Baptist church will be: Sunday-school, 9:30 a. m.; preaching, 10:45, sermon by pastor, Rev. T. Moore-Smith; B. Y. P. U. meeting, 7:15 p. m.; evening service, 7:45.

All the cars of the Public Service Corporation are now coming to a stop at the Park avenue crossing. That "call-down" from the Township Committee was a good thing.

The All-Plainfield team play the Rahways at Buffalo tomorrow afternoon. The lineup of the All-Plainfields includes several former members of the local ball team.

Only the regular order of routine business was transacted at the Township Committee meeting held in the town rooms last night.

Miss Edna Hunt, who has been spending a week with her cousin, Miss Cora Miller, has returned to her home at Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Monroe have been entertaining Mr. Monroe's sister, Miss Kate Monroe, of Washington street.

A balloon ascension is one of the attractions scheduled at Jerseyland Park tomorrow afternoon.

The weekly meeting of the Bible study class was held last night in the Methodist church.

Rev. Mr. Richards leads the weekly prayer meeting at the Methodist church tonight.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Assessor John Peters has finished his rounds. He is now engaged in totting up his figures. During the year five new structures have been erected in the borough, the largest of which is the Terry house. The approximate total property valuation in the borough is $515,000. This figure, according to the assessor, will not be found to be more than $1,000 out of the way when the exact amount is known.

The two-year-old son of Jeremiah Jacobus climbed a fence in the back yard yesterday afternoon. His little expedition into the strange regions over his head ended in a fall that snapped both bones of his left forearm. Drs. Brakeley and Platt set the bones.

County Superintendent Willis has been invited to deliver the address to the fourth and eighth year graduates of the borough schools He has not yet accepted definitely, but will probably be present. The exercises will be held Tuesday night.

The household goods of Mrs. P. S. Van Fleet were sold at auction by George W. Day yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Cosgrove, New Market. There was a good attendance and rapid sales at good prices were made.

W. A. Sanford entertained a large number of friends at a porch party Thursday night. It was to have been a lawn party, but the weather prevented the execution of the original plans.

Rev. W. W. Casselberry will address a sermon to the graduating class of the borough school tomorrow night. The graduates will sit in a body.

Archibald Brakeley took his last examination for the school year at Princeton University yesterday. He will return home next Wednesday.

Mrs. Catherine Maier visited her daughter, Mrs. Ferdinand Hoch, in Somerville yesterday.

Paul Kratzel has become a painter. He is employed by a Plainfield man.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Regret at the coming departure from Orange of Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann was expressed by several speakers at a meeting of the Ministerial Association of the Oranges, held in Grace church, parish-house, Orange, on Wednesday, and in responding to the eulogistic words of his associates Dr. Mann said that, while his work would be in Boston and he would find pleasure in it, his heart would be in the Oranges. It was the annual meeting of the association.

Many congratulations have been received by Rev. Dr. James M. Farrar, of Brooklyn, over his election as president of the General Synod of the Reformed Church in America, which began its ninety-ninth annual session at Asbury Park, Wednesday. Rev. Dr. Isaac W. Gowen, of New Durham, N. J., was made vice-president. No change was made in the office of permanent clerk. The incumbent, Rev. Dr. William H. Ten Eyck, of New York, has held the position for thirty-five years. Rev. Dr. William De Hart, of Somerville, was also retained as stated clerk. Dr. Farrer, the new president, has been pastor of the First Reformed church of Brooklyn for fifteen years. Routine business was transacted at to-day's sessions. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed this evening. Sunday school work was considered today. A large congregation assembled in the Reformed cuhrch, where the annual synodical sermon was preached by the retiring president, Dr. Zwemer. The synod will remain in session till next Wednesday.

RED KNIGHT.

Gravesend Handicap Made In Record Time of 2:05 1-5.

NEW YORK, June 10.—P. S. P. Randolph's Red Knight won the fourth race, a handicap, one mile and a quarter, at Gravesend, and in doing so created a new track record for the distance, covering it in 2:05 1-5, which is one-fifth of a second faster than Gold Heels' time made in 1902.

Red Knight broke in front and led the field by five lengths, but in the stretch he began to tire, but managed to last long enough to win by a head from Go Between.

The Picket and Alan-a-Dale, both Suburban handicap candidates, started in this race, but both performed badly, finishing away back in the ruck. Guiding Star, the 3 to 2 favorite, won the Hanover stakes, selling, by a length from Leonard Joe Hayman. Only one favorite won.

Sixty-five men selling tips at the entrance to the track were arrested in a lunch by Captain Dooley of Coney Island and all of his reserves, including a half dozen mounted policemen.

The raid was set for 2 p. m. and as the touts began to work the police began to pile them into three wagons. Some of the prisoners fought the police and there was plenty of excitement for the crowd.

The cause of the raid was complaints from the Jockey club and from patrons who had been swindled by fake tips.

The sixty-five prisoners will be arraigned in the Coney Island police court this morning. Summaries:

First Race.—Geranium, first; Right and True, second; Consideration, third.

Second Race.—Outcome, first; Miss Crawford, second; Graceful, third.

Third Race.—Guiding Star, first; Leonard Joe Hayman, second; Veribest third.

Fourth Race.—Red Knight, first; Go Between, second; English Lad, third.

Fifth Race.—Memories, first; Buttons, second; Orthodox, third.

Sixth Race.—Isolation, first; Hammeraway, second; Hekate, third.

FOR NEW REPUBLIC

King Oscar Will Not Yield to Storthing.

FLAG OF UNION IS HAULED DOWN.

Russia and Germany, It Is Said, Will Refuse to Recognize the New Government of Norway—Sovereign Will Avoid War.

COPENHAGEN, June 10.—All hope that King Oscar or Crown Prince Gustave will yield to the request of the Norwegian storthing to place a prince of the house of Bernadotte on the throne of Norway has now disappeared.

The Danish royal family has also set the stamp of disapproval on the acceptance of the throne by a Danish prince.

It is understood that arrangements are actually being made for a national convention in Norway, and this, it is believed, will inevitably result in the declaration of a republic.

According to well informed persons here, Russia and Germany will refuse to recognize the Norwegian government until King Oscar consents to the disruption of the union. Strong efforts are being made to secure similar action by other governments, including that of Denmark, and it is stated that these efforts are meeting with encouragement.

King Oscar is quoted as saying that he would avoid war at any cost.

The national flag of Norway, the tricolor, has been hoisted over Akershus fort at the capital and throughout the country in place of the union flag of Norway and Sweden.

The change was attended by great ceremony at the fort, where the members of the storthing were assembled and 30,000 of the public witnessed the event from points of vantage. The garrison was paraded in front of the quarters of the commandant of the fort, and the commandant read the resolution of the storthing dissolving the union with Sweden.

As the clock in the tower of the fort chimed the union flag, which had floated there since 1814, was hauled down, the troops presented arms, the band played the patriotic air "Sons of Norway," and, after only a momentary interim, the first gun of a national salute boomed, the new flag was broken out and the troops again presented arms. The people then uncovered and cheered wildly, the band adding to the general enthusiasm by playing the popular air "Yes, We Love This Country."

First one and then another took up the words of the song until the whole crowd joined in, after which round after round of cheering again greeted the flag. Three cheers were next given for the fatherland, and the singing of the national anthem concluded the ceremony.

Flood In Montana.

LIVINGSTON, Mont., June 10.—In ten minutes water destroyed $50,000 worth of property here. For three hours all the business district was flooded. Rain fell in torrents. A wall of water four feet high came down the narrow valley, tore up the track and when it reached the station the stream was 1,000 feet wide and two feet deep. The loss on perishable goods in basements is heavy, $10,000 representing the damage sustained by tobacconists and cigarmakers alone.

Wedding of Gustavus Adolphus.

LONDON, June 10.—With the departure of King Alfonso interest in society circles begins to center on the coming wedding of Prince Gustavus Adolphus, eldest son of Crown Prince Gustave of Sweden and Norway, and Princess Margaret Victoria, daughter of the Duke of Connaught, to which unusual attention is drawn by the present crisis between Norway and Sweden. The wedding guests have begun to arrive.

Plainfield, N. J., June 10, 1905.

Loomis and Bowen have met face to face. No casualities.

Surely the Czar of Russia heard of the Svengali influence Mr. Roosevelt has on "his party," before he asked for help.

Norway must have got it into its head that if timid Philadelphia could declare political independence it was time "to sit up and take notice."

Mr. Cleveland will be convinced more than ever now since he has been named as a trustee for the Equitable that "a condition, not a theory, confronts us."

In the capture of Schaduto, the alleged murderer, Sergeant Frederickson has added another achievement to his long and honorable career as a police officer. His record is that of a model cop, he talks little and does much.

When you hear a man denounce all newspapers, either set him down as an ignoramus or a rascal. In nine cases out of ten publicity of his deeds has hurt him and instead of blaming it on himself he takes occasion to abuse the medium which has done a good service to the people by "showing him up in his true colors."

Former Senator James Smith is accused by the Trenton State-Gazette of being the "John Doe," whom Thomas N. McCarter alleges circulated the report that he would give up that $50,000 berth in the P. S. C. Seeing that the Democratic boss made a few hundred thousand out of the Shipbuilding trust, one would expect him to give another fellow half a chance.

When you have a good thing it is bound to be widely appreciated if pushed along by advertising, says the Philadelphia Record. A Western railroad recently introduced sleeping cars with really commodious berths, and used the newspapers to tell the public about them. Presently competing roads noticed that their rival was making inroads on their share of the night travel, so they called a meeting and asked that the "ads" about comfortable sleeping car berths be withdrawn. Naturally the request was refused, whereupon, it is said, the companies operating the old-style sleepers secretly began to cut rates. Yet the first-mentioned road continues to advertise and maintains its lead. People are always willing to pay a little more for the best accomodations, the best service, the best goods. But they have to be told where the best is to be had.

THE FORUM.

Dusty Seats at Station.

Editor The Daily Press:

Have you ever noticed the filthy condition of the seats of the outside benches at the east-bound station at North avenue? A gentleman spoiled a nice black suit by wiping the dirt off one of these benches, ad I almost ruined a new gown, and would have done so, had I not noticed a puddle of something on the bench. Hoping you will publish this in your valued paper to warn others.

A Traveler.

Lather's Side of Dispute.

Editor The Daily Press:

Will you kindly favor Local No. 106 space in your valuable paper, as we would like to enlighten the public in regard to the dissention which has arisen between the lathers and masons of Plainfield as to who has the just right to put on the plaster-board.

In the first place the journeymen masons have no jurisdiction over the plaster-board whatever, nor should they have the right to say who shall put the plaster-board on, as every boss in every city reserves the right to give the plaster-board to the lathers, as it belongs to them.

At the convention held in Pittsburg, there were representatives from every craft connected with the building line, and the work which we claim here, and the lathers throughout the United States, was conceded to us at that convention, so we are only taking the stand for what belongs to us, as we are governed by the International laws, the same as every other craft.

In referring to the article of the 8th inst., the journeymen masons say they took the stand for the plaster-board about two years ago. As far as that goes, that is very true, and we have been fighting them ever since. When the High School was ready for lathing it was to have been all wood lathing throughout, but through the oversight of some one, we don't know who, it was found there was a compulsory law to use either metal lath or plaster-board, so that the use of the plaster-board was adopted, and the trouble commenced then between the lathers and masons.

One of our local members went to the president of the association and tried to bring the trouble to a settlement between the two bodies. We were willing to settle it by an arbitration board, appointing three or five men from every craft connected with the building line, and whatever decision they would render, we were willing to abide by it

Now we want the public to judge if there is any way more fair to settle the matter.

Every union boss in Plainfield has signed a petition and it was handed to the journeymen at their meeting, said petition asking to have it optional with the bosses who shall put the plaster-board on in the future, whether it shall be the lather or the mason, and we were willing to submit to that decision, but it was voted down.

When the hospital was ready for lathing, it was plaster-board throughout, and the masons tried then to take the work from us, but at that time all trades were affiliated with the Trades Council and they knew perfectly well that every trade would have stood by us at that time, for we were justifiable in our demads. As it is now we are fighting them alone, and we, the lathers, intend to hold out for what belongs to us.

CZAR AND MIKADO

President Roosevelt Asks Them to End Conflict.

PEACE MAY COME IMMEDIATELY

Hostile Rulers Accept Friendly Intervention,

TRIUMPH OF AMERICAN DIPLOMACY

"Time Has Come In Interest of Mankind to End Lamentable Strife. United States Friendly to Both Russia and Japan—Whole Civilized World Prays For Peace."

WASHINGTON, June 10.—In the peace negotiations the following dispatch was sent by President Roosevelt through diplomatic channels to the Japanese and Russian governments:

"The president feels that the time has come when, in the interest of all mankind, he must endeavor to see if it is not possible to bring to an end the terrible and lamentable conflict now being waged. With both Russia and Japan the United States has inherited ties of friendship and good will. It hopes for the prosperity and welfare of each, and it feels that the progress of the world is set back by the war between these two great nations.

"The president accordingly urges the Russian and Japanese governments, not only for their own sakes, but in the interest of the whole civilized world, to open direct negotiations for peace with one another.

"The president suggests that these peace negotiations be conducted directly and exclusively between the belligerents—in other words, that there may be a meeting of Russian and Japanese plenipotentiaries or delegates without any intermediary, in order to see if it is not possible for these representatives of the two powers to agree to terms of peace.

"The president earnestly asks that your government do now agree to such a meeting and is asking the government with which you are in conflict likewise to agree. While the president does not feel that any intermediary should be called in in respect to the peace negotiations themselves, he is entirely willing to do what he properly can if the two powers concerned feel that his services will be of aid in arranging the preliminaries as to the time and place of meeting. But if even these preliminaries can be arranged directly between the two powers or in any other way the president will be glad, as his sole purpose is to bring about a meeting which the whole civilized world will pray may result in peace."

When the president left Washington for Rapidan on a two days' trip to Virginia he was confident that the result of the international negotiations for peace in the far east had been successful and that the final blow in the Russo-Japanese war had been struck. So deeply interested is he in bringing the two belligerent nations to a common understanding that he did not leave until he had obtained assurances that his efforts to bring Russia and Japan into contact in an amicable spirit had been successfully concluded.

It is known authoritatively that the exchanges which have been in progress for the past ten days between the Washington government and the powers of the world, including the two belligerent nations, have been successful to an unexpected degree.

President Roosevelt, who has taken the lead in the negotiations, has been accorded the cordial support of the great continental powers, including Russia's nearest friend, France. The direct representations made through Ambassador Meyer at St. Petersburg to the czar were received by Emperor Nicholas in a most friendly spirit. Tokyo responded in an equally amicable way. So near are the two warring powers to amicable contact at this moment that in all Washington circles, official and diplomatic, mere hopefulness has given way to a well grounded certainty.

It is not unlikely that within twenty-four hours a definite statement of the situation may be issued from St. Petersburg, Tokyo or Washington which will throw clear light upon it. That the response of the mikado's government will be favorable to peace no doubt is now entertained.

St. Petersburg advices say that a council of ministers presided over by the emperor in person was held at Tsarskoe-Selo to discuss the situation in regard to the present developments.

His majesty's brother, Grand Duke Michael, who has arrived here from Berlin, is believed to be the bearer of a personal message from Emperor William advising the conclusion of peace.

Ambassador Meyer is in constant communication with Washington and has received a long cipher dispatch from America, which he communicated to the foreign minister in an interview.

Extreme reticence continues to be manifested, but it is apparent that the great announcement for which the world is waiting will not be made from here or from Tokyo, but from Washington. It is not likely to be delayed beyond Monday at the latest. No hitch has occurred, and the outlook continues favorable for peace.

Emperor Nicholas has cabled the following message to Admiral Rojestvensky:

"From my heart I thank you and all the officers of the squadron who have honorably done their duty for your unselfish work for Russia and for me. By the will of the Almighty success was not destined to crown your endeavors, but your boundless bravery will always be a source of pride to the country.

"I wish you a speedy recovery. May God console you all."

The peculiar wording of the message is attracting attention. The restriction of the emperor's thanks to those honorably doing their duty is fanning the ugly talk regarding the surrender of ships and the conduct of some of the crews.

RUSSELL TESTIFIES.

Bowen-Loomis Case Continued by Taft at Capital.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—In the presence of Assistant Secretary of State Loomis and Minister Bowen of Venezuela, Secretary Taft heard a statement from W. W. Russell, the American minister to Colombia, regarding matters connected with what is known as the Bowen-Loomis controversy.

The inquiry concerned chiefly the Mercador claim and Mr. Loomis' connection with it. The testimony of Mr. Russell was not of a sensational character. Its effect on the case cannot be learned at the war department.

At the close of the inquiry Mr. Bowen filed the following request:

"I now have the honor to respectfully suggest that if any doubt remains in your mind as to the culpability of Mr. Loomis I be ordered to return to Caracas and that, with Captain Parker and Consul Hurst, I be instructed to take the testimony of any and all persons acquainted with the facts in this case and be provided with letters requesting Mr. Loomis' bankers and the Venezuelan government to give to me certified copies of any papers that may tend to prove the nature of Mr. Loomis' transactions while he was minister to Venezuela."

Secretary Taft has not yet acted on this request and probably will await the arrival of a Mr. Unwin from New York, formerly connected with an asphalt concern in Caracas, who will be queried regarding the check which is said to have been exchanged between Mr. Loomis and the asphalt company.

At the session Mr. Bowen asked Mr. Russell if the latter had not said to him on one occasion, "I do all the work and Loomis gets all the money."

Mr. Russell replied that he did not think he ever said that, though he might have said he did all the work and "they," referring to the syndicate, got all the profits. Whether he intended to include Mr. Loomis in this reference he was not certain. To Mr. Bowen's question as to what his judgment was about the propriety of a diplomat engaging in private transactions Mr. Russell declined to say, adding that whatever might be his opinion on that subject he would not criticise any one else.

SWEETHEART GAVE HIM AWAY.

Italian Section Hand Accused of Stealing Two Bars of Gold.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., June 10.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Giacano Campollo, the Italian section hand who is alleged to have stolen two gold bars, valued at $11,500, from the ashes of a burned express car on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad at Bethayres.

Campollo, it is said, sailed for Naples a few days ago and is expected soon to reach his home in Italy. The bars belong to the S. S. White Dental Manufacturing company and were being shipped to the New York branch of the concern. In transit the car containing the gold bars and other express matter caught fire near here and was entirely destroyed.

After the embers had cooled Campollo, it is stated, while searching in the ashes found the bars. He is alleged to have told his sweetheart of his good fortune, but because he refused to allow the girl to accompany him to Europe she notified the detectives who were working on the case, and the warrant is the result of the woman's story.

Big Drydock Dewey Launched.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The big floating drydock built for use in the Philippines was launched at Sparrows Point, Md., today. The dock was christened "The Dewey." A daughter of Rear Admiral Endicott, chief of the bureau of yards and docks, acted as sponsor. Admiral Endicott and a party attended the launching. The Dewey is said to be the largest floating drydock in the world and is to be towed to the Philippine Islands.

Sears Estate $4,000,000.

BOSTON, June 10.—Charles F. Choate, attorney for the late J. Montgomery Sears of this city, issued a statement to set at rest, as he said, many rumors concerning the estate. Mr. Choate declares that Mr. Sears' property, which will not exceed $4,000,000, was left by his will entirely to his widow and children.

Thirteen Bodies Still Entombed.

PLYMOUTH, England, June 10.—Submarine boat A-8, which was lost off the breakwater here, rests on an even keel in a sandy bottom. Thirteen bodies are still entombed in the boat, divers who worked all day long only recovering one body. It is expected that the vessel will be refloated today.

DOMESTIC INVENTIONS.

What Modern Mechanical Genius Has Done to Make Housework Easier.

No doubt housekeeping is the one department of human labor that is still far behind the times, yet even here modern invention has devised conveniences and labor saving appliances that make it easier than it used to be. So many are these indeed that by their aid refined women find a real pleasure in doing housework.

Among the newer of the aids to the practical housekeeper is the bread kneading machine. It saves the arm and shoulder strength usually required to work dough to the proper evenly mixed state, and it does the work far more rapidly than can be accomplished "by hand."

Labor saving is, however, not the chief merit of the bread kneading machine. It is that it does away entirely with the necessity of putting the hands into bread dough. That, even at its best, is not agreeable to contemplate. Eating the breadmaker's aura is something we would rather not do if we could help it under any circumstances.

A treasure in the household is the pretty little sewing table with folding legs. Along its side are the inches and divisions which mark a measuring tape, so that here we have the yardstick painted at the edge of the table. This useful little article is not new, but there are thousands of households that are without it, although it is very inexpensive. I know some bachelor girls living in a flat who put the sewing table to a variety of uses. When friends call and play bridge it serves as a card table. When the bachelor maids wish to proffer tea and cake to their friends it constitutes a dining table, on a very small scale of course, but large enough. It may also be drawn up beside a bed or chair to hold the food of an invalid. Then when not in use it can be folded together and placed against the wall, taking no more space than a board.

Doors and Window Screens.

The wire screen which allows doors and windows to be open, letting in air and sunlight, at the same time keeping out all winged as well as crawling pests, is happily now coming into general use. It is surprising, though, that here and there the houses of even well to do persons are without such screens. In some of the mosquito haunted districts of our country life would be unendurable without them. Even the stables have to be provided with the screens. Sometimes a whole veranda is inclosed in the protecting wire cloth, behind which a family may sit at their ease and be happy without having either to slap or to fan away flies and mosquitoes.

Carpet Sweepers and Other Conveniences.

Once, wandering over the earth, tarrying awhile in the isle of Jersey, English channel, an American woman came suddenly on a Yankee carpet sweeper. Heaven knows how it had strayed across the ocean to that spot, where the farm women still cook beside huge fireplaces with swinging cranes! Yet there it was, a genuine message from home to the American woman. It told her anew of the land where inventors have done more to make housekeeping easy than in any other country in the world.

The carpet sweeper is invaluable in a house, yet millions of women even in the United States still daily ply the old dust raising, arm tiring, rug demolishing broom. It is so easy to cleanse a floor with the carpet sweeper! No dust is raised. She who wields the implement passes it back and forth smoothly and firmly over carpet and rug. The terrible lint and fluff that so annoy the neat housekeeper are caught and held in the covered brushes of the machine to be taken out in a mass after the sweeping is done. Corners need to be brushed with a whisk broom, and the sweeper does the rest.

One of the mysteries of the feminine world is that women will persist in going down upon all fours to scrub the floor, wearing the skin off their knees and ruining their clothing, when there is no need of it at all. The long handled mop is now so well made and so easily adjusted when a fresh scrubbing cloth or bunch of cotton yarn is needed that no housekeeper who has regard for convenience will be without one. There, too, are egg whisks, double boilers for cooking rice and other sticky substances, perforated spoons for beating cake and dozens of modern articles that go to make twentieth century housekeeping easier than that of the past.

MARY ELIZABETH BART.

[Copyright, 1899, by F. Tennyson Neely.]

"Colonel, I'd like mightily to go over and see that review this morning, sir; and Mr. Prime is good enough to offer me a seat in his carriage. May I go, sir?"

"You can't go anywhere, sir, with the tents of your company in that disgraceful condition. Just look at them, sir! as ragged as a wash line on a windy day." And Canker scowled angrily at the young fellow standing squarely at attention before him.

"I know that, colonel, but the sun did that while we were out at drill, and the men will straighten everything in ten minutes. I'll give the order now, sir." And Billy looked as though refusal were out of the question.

"You'll stay and see it done, sir, and when it's done—to my satisfaction—will be time enough to ask for favors. Mr. Gordon, send word to the company commanders I wish to see them here at once," continued the senior officer, whirling on his heel and terminating the interview by so doing. It was in Gray's mind for a brief minute to follow and plead. He had made it tell many a time with an obstinate university don, but he knew the carriage was waiting—the carriage load watching, and deep down in his heart there was keen disappointment. He would have given a big slice of his monthly pay to go with that particular party and occupy the seat opposite Amy Lawrence and gaze his fill at her fair face. He well-nigh hated Squeers as he hurried away to hail his first sergeant and give the necessary orders before daring to return to the carriage and report his failure. His bright blue eyes were clouded and his face flushed with vexation, for he saw that the rearmost regiment was even now filing into the Presidio reservation afar off to the north, and that no time was to be lost if his friends were to see the review. The distant measured boom of guns told that the general in whose honor the ceremony was ordered was already approaching the spot, and away over the rolling uplands toward the Golden Gate a cavalry escort rode into view. Billy ground his teeth. "Run and tell them I cannot get leave," he called to a fellow sub. "Squeers has set me to work straightening up camp. Turn out the company, sergeant! Brace the tent cords and align tents," and a mournful wave of his forage cap was the only greeting he dare trust himself to give, as after a few minutes of fruitless waiting, the vacant seat was given to another officer and the carriage rolled rapidly away. A second or two it was hidden from his sight behind the large wall tents along the line of fence, then shot into full view again as he stood at the end of the company street looking eagerly for its reappearance. And then occurred a little thing that was destined to live in his memory for many a day, and that thrilled him with a new and strange delight. He had never been of the so-called "spooney" set at the 'varsity. Pretty girls galore there were about that famous institute, and he had danced at many a student party and romped through many a reel, but the nearest he had ever come to something more than a mere jolly friendship for a girl was the regard in which he held his partner in the "mixed doubles," but that was all on account of her exuberant health, spirits, general comeliness of face and form, and exquisite skill in tennis. But this day a new and eager longing was eating at his heart; a strange, dull pang seemed to seize upon it as he noted in a flash that the seat that was to have been his was occupied by an officer many years his senior, a man he knew only by sight and an enviable reputation, a man whose soldierly, clean-cut face never turned an instant, for his eyes were fixed upon a lovely picture on the opposite seat—Amy Lawrence bending eagerly forward and gazing with her beautiful eyes alight with sympathy, interest and frank liking in search of the sorely disappointed young officer. "There he is!" she cried, though too far away for him to hear, and then, with no more thought of coquetry than a kitten, with no more motive in the world than that of conveying to him an idea of her sorrow, her sympathy, her perhaps pardonable and exaggerated indignation at what she deemed an act of tyranny on the part of his commander, with only an instant in which to convey it all—her sweet face flushed and her eyes flamed with the light of her girlish enthusiasm—in that instant she had kissed her hand to him, and then Col. Armstrong, turning suddenly and sharply to see who could be the object of interest so absorbing, caught one flitting glimpse of Billy Gray lifting his cap in quick acknowledgment, and the words that were on the tip of Armstrong's tongue the moment before were withheld for a more auspicious occasion—and it did not come too soon.

It was only four days after that initial meeting in the general's tent the foggy evening of the girl's first visit to camp, but both in city and on the tented field there had been several occasions on which the colonel had been in conference with Mr. Prime and in company with the young ladies. Junior officers had monopolized the time and attention of the latter, but Armstrong was a close observer and a man who loved all that was strong, high-minded and true in his own sex, and that was pure and sweet and winsome in woman. A keen soldier, he had spent many years in active service, most of them in the hardy, eventful and vigorous life on the Indian frontier. He had been conspicuous in more than one stirring campaign against the red warriors of the plains, had won his medal of honor before his first promotion, and his captaincy by brevet for daring conduct in action long antedated the right to wear the double bars of that grade. He had seen much of the world, at home and abroad; had traveled much, read much, thought much, but these were things of less concern to many a woman in our much married army than the question as to whether he had ever loved much. Certain it was he had never married, but that didn't settle it. Many a man loves, said they, without getting married, forgetful of the other side of the proposition advanced by horrid regimental cynics, that many men marry without getting loved. Armstrong would not have proved an easy man to question on that, or indeed on any other subject which he considered personal to himself. Even in his own regiment in the regular service he had long been looked upon as an exclusive sort of fellow—a man who had no intimates and not many companions, yet, officers and soldiers, he held the respect and esteem of the entire command, even of those whom he kept at a distance, and few are the regiments in which there are not one or two charcters who are not best seen and studied through a binocular. Without being sympathetic, said his critics, Armstrong was "square," but his critics had scant means of knowing whether he was sympathetic or not. He was a steadfast fellow, an unswerving, uncompromising sort of man, a man who would never have done for a diplomat, and could never have been elected to office. But he was truthful, just, and as the English officer reluctantly said of Lucan, whom he hated: "Yes—damn him—he is brave." The men whom he did not seem to like in the army and who disliked him accordingly, were compelled to admit, to themselves at least, that their reasons were comprised in the above-recorded, regrettable, but unmistakable fact—he didn't like them. Another trait, unpopular, was that he knew when and how to say no. He smoked too much, perhaps, and talked too little for those who would use his words as witnesses against him. He never gambled, he rarely drank, he never lent nor borrowed. He was a bachelor, yet would never join a "mess," but kept house himself and usually had some favored comrade living with him. He was 40 and did not look 35. He was tall, erect, athletic, hardy and graceful in build, and his face was one of the best to be seen in many a line of officers at parade. His eyes were steel gray and clear and penetrating, his features clear-cut, almost too delicately cut, thought some of the best friends he had among the men. His hair was brown, sprinkled liberally with silver; his mouth, an admirable mouth in every way, was shaded and half-hidden by a long, drooping mustache to which, some men thought and some women said, his tapering white fingers paid too much attention, but I doubt if a knowledge of this criticism would have led to the faintest alteration in the habit. Generally the expression of Armstrong's face was grave, and, on duty a trifle stern; and not ten people in the world were aware what humor could twinkle in the clear, keen eyes, or twitch about the corners of that mobile mouth. There were no five who knew the tenderness that lay in hiding there, for Armstrong had few living kindred and they were men. There lived not, as he drove this glorious August morning to the breezy uplands beyond the camps, one woman who could say she had seen those eyes of Armstrong's melt and glow with love. As for Amy Lawrence, she was not dreaming of such a thing.

GIRL RUNS AN ENGINE WITH VETERAN'S SKILL.

Maid of Nineteen the Hero of Novel Run from St. Louis to Valley Park.

St. Louis.—Among those who attended the social session here of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen recently was Miss Bessie Craig, of Fort Worth, Tex., who enlivened the proceedings with some songs. Although not licensed, Miss Craig, who is but 19, is experienced as an engineer, and she proved the fact by taking the 'Frisco passenger train as far as Valley Park.

Enveloping her tall figure was a light colored cravenette. On her head, jauntily set, was a small cap, from under which a tall, blond pompadour looked. On her slender hands Miss Craig wore buckskin gauntlets, and her dainty feet were incased in tan shoes.

When the conductor called "All aboard," she grasped the throttle and guided the train out through the "grand puzzle" with as much precision as any engineer who runs into Union station.

Miss Craig was practically raised on a locomotive. Her father, G. H. Craig, is one of the best known engineers that runs on southern roads. Since she was a little girl it has been the custom of her father to often take her with him on his daily runs. To the child he taught every detail and intricacy of a locomotive, until there was little she did not know concerning one.

When she was older and her hand was strong enough Engineer Craig, sitting beside her, allowed the girl engineer to make the complete run.

So attached has Miss Craig become to the vocation of running an engine that she sincerely desires to become a real engineer with a run all to herself.

At home, besides being called the "Engineer Girl," Miss Craig is known as "The Cowboy Girl." She rides a pitching bronco with the ease of a plainsman and can throw a lariat as true. She is also an accomplished vocalist and possesses a soprano voice of rare quality.

"I could make my living singing," she said, "but I don't care for it as I do running an engine. Applause from an audience is all right but it doesn't compare with the exhilaration and excitement of controlling a big engine and having the safety of hundreds of people in your hands. So I want to be an engineer."

At the request of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen special permission was given Miss Craig to run the engine by Superintendent Moore, of the Terminal.

TRAGEDY FROM A JOKE.

Man Frightened His Wife Into Madness and Then in Remorse Kills Himself.

Paris.—The death of one person and hopeless insanity of another have resulted from a silly practical joke. Edmond Lelouse, wishing to frighten his wife, dressed up a wax figure, the head of which and one of the hands he lightly attached to the body by means of gum and placed it in bed.

While Lelouse was watching the proceedings from behind draperies his wife, about to retire, grasped what she supposed in the semi-darkness to be her husband's hand, but which was in reality that of the wax figure.

The hand, cold and clammy, detached itself from the limb and remained in her grasp. With a cry of terror, Mme. Lelouse let the hand drop to the ground and flung her arms around the figure's neck, when the head also became detached and rolled down upon the floor.

The terror-stricken woman ran madly down the stairs, where she was stopped by some neighbors. When the police arrived it was found that she had become raving mad. She was conveyed to an asylum.

When the husband was told of the hopelessness of his wife's condition, he poisoned himself by swallowing a dose of nitric acid.

Mail Car Used as Barber Shop.

Philadelphia.—A trolley mail car was put to an unusual use the other day, having been temporarily turned into a barber shop while standing on a switch on Market street in front of the post office. The hair and beard of one of the conductors needed trimming, so a colored employe who knows something of the barber trade was called upon, a stool was procured and in full view of late pedestrians the act was done. When his hair and beard had been trimmed the "barber" vigorously wielded a whisk, and once more the car became a mail car instead of a barber shop.

PATRICK MUST DIE.

Verdict In Millionaire Rice Murder Case Affirmed by Courts.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 10.—The court of appeals has confirmed the conviction of Albert T. Patrick, who was found guilty of the murder of William Marsh Rice, an aged millionaire of New York city, after a sensational trial before Recorder Goff.

David B. Hill prepared Patrick's appeal to the high court, and it is said that the convicted man himself materially assisted his counsel in preparing the case for final argument.

The case reached the court of appeals March 14 of this year, when David B. Hill, who appeared for the appellant, based his argument for a reversal mainly on the contention that the condition of Rice's body revealed by the post mortem examination might have been caused by fluids used in embalming.

The prevailing opinion is by Judge Gray, with whom concur Judges Bartlett, Haight and Werner. There is a dissenting opinion by Judge O'Brien, Chief Judge Cullen and Judge Vann concurring, Chief Judge Cullen filing also a memorandum.

The accused was a New York lawyer and has succeeded in postponing the ultimate decision of his fate for more than three years by a display of acumen and resourcefulness that has excited the wonder of the members of the bar and the public at large. The opinion of the court, written by Judge Gray, is very exhaustive, reviewing the formidable record in every detail and containing upward of 16,000 words.

Judge Gray sets forth that the theory of the people was that the defendant had conspired with Charles F. Jones, the valet, or, as sometimes called, the secretary of Rice, to kill Rice and that the defendant procured Jones to administer chloroform to him while he was asleep in the accomplishment of their joint purpose. This purpose, they say, was fathered by the defendant to obtain possession of Rice's estate, which was a large one.

ALFONSO LEAVES ENGLAND.

Young King Visited Windsor Castle and Eton College.

LONDON, June 10.—King Edward, King Alfonso and their suits visited Windsor castle, where the Spanish king for the first time saw the magnificent palace. He visited the royal apartments and became enthusiastic over the splendid views which, however, were to some extent spoiled by continued heavy rain.

His majesty was given an enthusiastic welcome by the boys of Eton college. He afterward drove to Frogmore to visit the tomb of Queen Victoria.

King Alfonso has been decorated with the royal Victorian chain by King Edward, and the members of his suit received a number of high orders.

The royal visitor left London this morning and sailed at noon from Dover.

King Edward has accepted from King Alfonso the colonelcy in chief of a Spanish regiment. King Alfonso invited King Edward and Queen Alexandra to visit Spain at their earliest opportunity, and it is probable that the invitation will be accepted for 1906.

PROSECUTOR TO GIVE SCADUTO SPEEDY TRIAL

IF BLOOD POISONING SETS IN, PRISONER WILL DIE.

John P. Owens, counsel for Luigi Scaduto, the fish-peddler murderer, held a conference with County Prosecuter English in the latter's office in Elizabeth, yesterday, regarding his client's trial. The conference developed the fact that Scaduto's case will be pushed through without loss of time by the county authorities.

The prosecutor said definitely that the Grand Jury would be recalled to bring in the indictment. Counsellor Owens expects his client to be brought to trial at an early date. Three physicians held a consultation on Scaduto yesterday. His wound is bothering him, and the doctors say his condition is serious, if not exactly dangerous. If blood poisoning sets in, Scaduto will never live to be tried.

It is not certain now that the preliminary hearing will be held in this city, as was at first proposed. Mr. Owens thinks it will be, but the prosecutor, it is understood, desires to have the hearing in Elizabeth, and his wishes in this direction may be deferred to. Scaduto will not be put on the stand at the hearing.

TELEPHONE A NECESSITY.

About 1,400 in Use in Plainfield Now.

The increase in the business of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company in this city since January 1, has been remarkable, and the company is now obliged to make provisions for taking care of the large number of new subscribers. Within a short time two new sections will be added to the switchboard and this will allow an increase of nearly two hundred additional subscribers.

Manager C. W. Runyon has been making efforts to have the company build another story on the present structure so that the operating department could be moved there, thus allowing the first floor for the use of the various departments. This improvement will be made sooner or later, but the company does not feel like undertaking it at present. The company is much pleased with the large business in this city and vicinity and is doing all in its power to give patrons good service.

END OF THE HORSE SHOW

Still Larger Attendance and Fine Array of Entries.

LOCAL HORSES WIN.

Riding and Driving Club Pleased With the Result and Decides to Have Three Days Next Year.

With a still larger crowd in attendance than was present on the opening day, Plainfield's second annual horse show came to a close with the judging of sixteen classes Saturday afternoon. Society folk from this city, New York, Morristown and the Oranges filled the boxes and grandstand and the unanimous verdict was that the Riding and Driving Club had succeeded in making the affir the best outside of Madison Square Garden in the metropolitan section.

As on the previous day, the entries of Mrs. John Gerken, Miss Mollie Maxwell and Charles T. Proctor stood out prominently in nearly every class, but the local horses did not fare so badly. W. J. Buttfield's Miss Banahan and C. W. McCutchen's Reuben T were second and third respectively in the class for roadsters, open to all; Craig A. Marsh's handsome black gelding Black Diamond got two red ribbons in competition with many others in the saddle classes, and Lawrence B. Smith's Fox won the open pony class. In the local classes, All Ablaze, owned by Miss Margaret McCutchen, and Ragney, owned by Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, got blue ribbons in the saddle and harness classes respectively.

Probably the prettiest class for the day was 13, the last on the card. It brought out sixteen handsome runabout rings, making an appearance that won rounds of applause from the spectators. The pick of all the other classes were represented and they gave the judges a hard time in selecting winners. It narrowed down to the blue for Mrs. Gerken's Newsboy; the red for New Market, belonging to Charles Holloway, of Baltimore; the yellow for A. B. Maclay's Norah ,and the white for Tonzo Sauvage's Lord Nelson. The pony classes also brought out a great array of little fellows, who had to divided honors with their drivers. Lawrence Smith's Fox was an easy winner, while little Miss Catherine Sperry's method of handling the ribbons helped to get second place for her Roland. The cutest rig of the lot was Edward M. VanBuren' Jr.'s, with Billy, driven by the young man himself like a veteran. He was dressed in white with a frilled collar and looked his very best for the benefit, perhaps, of a tiny little girl, also in white, who nestled at his side.

In class 34 for saddle horses, the riding of little Miss Bourne, of Westfield, was one of the features of the show. She wore a boy's costume set off by a jaunty sombrero and rode astride. At one point, the cantering of her mount caused her to lose her stirrup adn she would have fallen but for clinging to the animal's neck. The judges and clerks of the course rushed to aid her, but she quickly regained her place and refused their proffered assistance. When coming on the track she got into a tight place through two four-in-hands closing in on her. A serious accident might have occurred but for the quickness of C. F. Lawton, handling the ribbons on Miss Luella Day's entry, throwing his leaders over and then turning his coach around. Miss Bourne maintained her composure and did not seem to be in the least disconcerted.

The saddle horses in Class 9 were so evenly matched the judging required nearly double the usual time. The spectators picked Charles T. Proctor's Hot Stuff to win, but it missed first and second and got the yellow. George D. King's King George was first and John Doyle's The Banker, second.

The summary:

Class 3—Four roadsters and best appointed rig: Won by Auditor B, Alfred B. Maclay; Miss Banahan, W. J. Buttfield, second; Reuben T, C .W. McCutchen, third.

Class 35—Six saddle horses, over 15.1 hands: Won by Hilda, J. Larocque, Jr.; Black Diamond, C. A. Marsh, second; Molly, Miss Helen R. Hooley, third; Lady Rose, George A. Beaton, fourth.

Class 33—Five ponies in harness: Won by Miss Belle, Miss Natalie Fairbairn; Charlie, Miss Marjorie W. Brown, second; Bo-Peep, Miss Blanche Buttfield, third.

Class 9—Nine horses in harness, over 15.3 hands: Won by King George, George D. King; The Banker, John Doyle, second; Hot Stuff, Charles T. Proctor, third; Hyacinth, Tonzo Sauvage, fourth.

Class 32—Nine ponies in harness, 13 hands or under: Won by Fox, Lawrence B. Smith; Roland, Miss Catherine Sperry, second; Billy, Ed-

CHARGE OF BIGAMY AGAINST BOOT BLACK

SKELLY'S LAST NUPTIAL VENTURE LAUNCHED BY SQUIRE MOSHER.

Warrants on three charges, assault and battery, abduction and bigamy, are the outcome of the marriage in this city on Thursday of Lewis Skelly, formerly a boot black in New Brunswick, and Miss Louise Cinquigrani, the seventeen-year-old daughter of Julian Cinquigrani, a local fruit dealer in that place.

On Wednesday Miss Louise was in court at New Brunswick as the complainant against Carl Dabrino, whom she charged with abducting her to Philadelphia. Carl denied the charge and the girl confessed, after much questioning, that she had gone willingly and had been told by her father to swear as she nad done. The case was temporarily dismissed with the understanding that they would marry.

The next day the girl was married by Justice Mosher, in this city, to Louis Skelly, who has been married twice before, having now a wife whom he married on being divorced from his first wife. The mother of the girl has now taken a hand in the matter and had warrants sworn out before Justice Sedam against her husband, charging him with assaulting her and with abducting his own daughter. It is alleged by the mother that her husband brought his daughter to this city by force and made her marry Skelly.

An affidavit seting forth that Skelly is guilty of bigamy has been sworn to before Justice Sedam in New Brunswick, who has the record of Skelly's marriage to his present wife, now said to be living in Staten Island with another man. This affidavit will be sent to this city where a warrant for the arrest of Skelly on this charge will be issued.

Skelly was recently appointed interpreter for the Plainfield police force, it is said.

The box and grandstand seats were apportioned without the least trouble and Mr. Edwards had a personally selected corps of assistants who saw to it that everyone was seated comfortably.

Guests were present from Newark, Scotch Plains, Cranford, Pottersville, Annandale, Griggstown, Bound Brook, Jersey City, besides North Plainfield and this city.

The house wast attractively decorated with roses, peonies, daisies and greens. The effect in the parlor, where the ceremony was performed, was particularly charming.

The bride was attenedd by Miss Linda R. Rowland, sister of the bridegroom, and Charles F. Neagle, brother of the bride, was best man. The bride was given away by her father. Miss Marion Goodwin, of Scotch Plains, played the nuptial marches.

The bride was gowned in white silk mulle, and wore a veil caught up with white rosebuds; she carried bridal roses. Miss Rowland wore Persian lawn over yellow, and carried sweet peas and carnations.

SPEEDY TRIAL SURE FOR THE MURDERER

GRAND JURY TO BE RECALLED FOR SCADITE'S CASE.

There is every reason to believe that Luigi Scadite, who on Wednesday murdered, at Plainfield, Lorenzo Fouch, a fellow countryman, will be given a speedy trial. The indications are that he will be tried in the present term of court.

Prosecutor of the Pleas N. C. J. English informed a reporter that the present grand jurors would probably be recalled at an early date for the purpose of hearing the evidence now being collected against Scadite, and returning an indictment in accordance with the facts.

Mr. English said that if an indictment were found against Scadite, he would be speedily brought to trial. That is Justice Fort's desire.

Under the old custom of discharging grand jurors early in the term, Scadite would have been obliged to have remained in jail until October next before an indictment could have been found against him.

Jail Physician Alonzo Pettit, assisted by Dr. James S. Green, visited the jail and probed for the bullet, which it was thought might have lodged somewhere in Scadite's jaw. After an hour's labor the surgeons, unable to locate the ball, decided that the leaden pellet, after entering Scadite's jaw, had passed out his mouth.

While there is no telling yet as to how serious Scadite's injury may prove, he appeared much improved this morning and ate his breakfast with evident relish.

The State is not yet prepared to make public what damaging evidence it may have obtained against the murderer. Mr. English says, however, tha the beginning of the fight was witnessed by a number of workmen employed at the Scott Press Works, in this city, near where Fouch met his death. Whether any of these witnesses saw Scadite when with knife or dagger he literally cut and stabbed Fouch to pieces, the authorities do not say.

Mr. English said that Fouch, the murdered man, had peddled fish at Plainfield under a license for about three years, and was about to renew that license when he met his death. Shortly before he was killed he met Scadite peddling fish, the latter not having a license. Fouch warned him not to sell, under threat of prosecution. It is believed that this threat angered Scadite to such an extent that he resolved to put Fouch out of the way.

Snapped Collar Bone.

In coasting down Dugway hill yesterday morning, Harry De Meza, West Second street, was thrown over the handle bars of his bicycle. He landed on his right shoulder and splintered his collar bone. He was taken to the hospital in a carriage, and the fracture was reduced. The injury is a bad one and will keep his arm strapped to his side for a month.

After Sidewalk Bicyclists.

Complaints to the borough police that bicyclists made it a habit of riding on the sidewalk on upper Somerset street, led to Chief Weiss stationing himself at a point near Codington avenue at 7 o'clock this morning. He caught John Underhill and Elmer Ackor, of Watchung, violating the ordinance and they were ordered to appear before Recorder Doud tonight.

CAMP WOOLFE SEEKS A SITE AS ITS HOME

FRESH AIR ASSOCIATION MUST REMOVE WORK FROM WESTFIELD.

The annual meeting of the Union Fresh Air Mission Association will be held in the chapel of the Presbyterian church, Westfield, tomorrow evening. On account of the death of the president of the association, George E. Woolfe, who owned the camp grounds, it has become necessary to remove the camp to other quarters, the grounds having been sold.

A committee will report upon a site at Keansburg, on Raritan Bay, where the camp guests will have the privileges of a very beautiful shelving beach, which will furnish an endless amount of entertainment for the children and mothers. Owing to the nature of the buildings now used at Camp Woolfe, it will be impossible to move them.

As friends of the cause will recognize, this is a very important meeting of the association, and Arthur N. Pierson, the first vice-president, is anxious that every society affiliated with the work should have its delegates for the year appointed and have them present at the meeting tomorrow evening. Presidents of societies who may not have been advised of this matter by the corresponding secretaries are urged to take immediate action. No society should be unrepresented. Mr. Pierson suggests that the president be one of the delegation from each constituent organization.

The camp will be some what removed from the workers and supporters, but the same good work will be carried on. It is believed that the new location will be more enjoyable to the camp guests than was the old site.

An invitation is also extended to anyone who has sufficient interest in the work to attend this meeting.

PERJURY SENTENCES ON TWO FRENCH WITNESSES REDUCED,

The Appellate Court of Paris, years' to one year's imprisonment the sentences imposed on Masse and Moranne, the two men acused of giving false testimony in the Charles L. Fair will case, in which Mrs. Fair's relatives at New Market fought for millions.

Masse and Moranne are the bicyclists who were touring at the time of the automobile accident, August 14, 1902, which resulted in the death of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Fair, of SanFrancisco. The men said they had seen the Fairs thrown out, but the testimony showed that they were not present.

The Court of Criminal Appeals of Paris on December 22 reversed the lower court's decision condemning Masse and Moranne to three years' imprisonment for perjury. The Appellate Court sustained the prisoners' plea that, as the Fair case was compromised without trial in the United States, their alleged false testimony was not used in the American courts, and therefore worked no injury.

Only a few friends witnessed the ceremony.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom departed for Roxborough, Pa., where the former's father resides and where they were tendered a reception in the evening. They are to spend their honeymoon at various places in Maryland and Virginia and later will make their home in Philadelphia, where Mr. Blye holds a responsible position in one of the leading hospitals.

Children's Day was observed in many of the Protestant churches yesterday with appropriate services. Following are the principal ones:

Hope Chapel.

An unusually large attendance witnessed the exercises at Hope chapel. The school sang anthems and recitations were rendered by the pupils as follows:

"Our Children's Day," Grace Graves, Miriam Emery, Clara Weber, Minnie Muir, Mary Alive Duncan; "The Fruitful Tree," Anna Warnock, Ida Pearson, Annie Smith; "The Bright Little Sunbeams," Helen Taylor, Florence Taylor, Mary Thompson, Mildred Meeker; "The Lord Made All," Maud Mundy, Annie Shirley, Ida Louden, Mabel Hunter, Mabel Prince; "Too Big," Willie Richmond; "If All the Flowers Were Roses," Ruth Kenny, Lillian Shirley, Beatrice Apgar, Carrie Baker, Una Eckert; "The Upward Way," Charles Kregar, Willie Richmond, George Leighs; "Roses," Jessie Duncan; "The Lord Jesus," May Morley.

In addition an address was given by Leander N. Lovell and remarks were made by Superintendent Squires and Rev. L. R. Howard.

The decorations were a feature, great banks of daisies and cut flowers gracing the platform. Canary birds in cages, suspended from the ceiling, were a decided novelty, but very appropriate. The feathered songsters gave a sweet chorus of trills every time the school sang, making a pretty effect.

The decorations were arranged by a committee composed of Mr. and Mrs. William Jones, Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. William Gray and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hangliter.

First M. E. Church.

Children's Day exercises were held at the First M. E. church yesterday morning under the auspices of the Sunday school. The church was attractively decorated with roses and daisies. James R .Joy, superintendent of the Sunday school, was in charge of the programme.

The members of the school entered the church singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers." After the opening exercises, there was the presentation of infants for baptism. The pastor, Rev. A. C. McCrea, baptized children. This was followed with an anthem, "Swell the Anthem," by the vested choir. The beginner's class then gave recitations and songs, followed with the singing, "O Word of God Incarnate," by the school. The primary department then took part in an exercise, "Gods' Gifts to Us—Useful, Beautiful, Holy," followed with a song, "For the Beauty of the Earth," by the school. Another exercise, "What We Can Give," was given by the primary department. The pastor, Rev. A. C. McCrea, delivered a short appropriate address to the children. The programme was concluded with an offertory anthem, "The Lord is Exalted," by the choir, the doxology and benediction.

First Baptist.

The feature of the Children's Day exercises at the First Baptist church Sunday-school yesterday afternoon was the presentation of a bouquet of pink roses to Mrs. Sims, the oldest member of the church. by Dorothy LeMatty, aged three years, the youngest member of the Sunday school. The presentation was made after C. W. McCutchen concluded an interesting address to the children. The programme was in charge of Mrs. J. A. Powlison, superintendent of the primary department, and was as follows: Recitation, "Children's Day," Elmer Rickert; song, primary department; song, "Wonderful Children's Days," Florence Neal, Violet Cronce, Lillian VanWinkle; recitation, Lawrence French; "Sunbeam Song," children's chorus; recitations, Harold Martin, Edith Rickert; "Song of Life," primary department; recitation, Lester Chandler; missionary recitation, primary girls; song, Junior department.

Congregational Church.

The Children's Day service at the Congregational church was combined with the regular morning service. The observance was largely attended, and the church was attractively decorated with flowers and growing plants. An exercise was rendered by five of the primary children, "If All Flowers Were Roses," in which Thelma Curtis, Edna Mundy, Helen Weseman, Harold Tomlinson and Carter Goodrich sang and recited. NATURAL PUNCTUATION.

"How would you punctuate this sentence?" asked the teacher of grammar and rhetoric:

"'As John opened the book three five-dollar bills evidently placed there by his cousin fluttered out from between the pages and were caught up by the breeze.'"

"I think, professor, if you would allow me, I should first make a dash after the bills," said the pupil, promptly.

"The Dixie" Mosquito Canopy

Can Be Attached to Any Bed

The Dixie Canopy is no experiment, but has stood the test for years, improvements having been made each year, until we can say without fear of contradiction that it is the most perfect mosquito canopy ever put before the American people. It is easily attached to any style of Wood, Brass, Iron or Folding Bed without defacing the same.

It is the only frame that can be taken off of the bed without the use of a screwdriver or other tool. Anyone can remove it and put it up again.

The entire frame is metal, light and durable; it has no wooden parts where bugs can lodge.

It affords the best ventilation, being high from the sleeper, and having a headpiece about five feet square, without folds or cross sticks, the hot air readily escapes.

We have the Dixie Canopy for three-quarter and full size beds at..... 2.75

FAST LINE TROLLEY CAR RAMS AN AUTOMOBILE

OCCUPANTS OF THE MACHINE NARROWLY ESCAPE INJURY.

A serious accident between an automobile owned by F. H. Ball, of Myrtle avenue, and being driven by his brother, Charles Ball, and an eastbound Trenton trolley car, was narrowly averted at the corner of Madison avenue and West Front street, yesterday noon. While the auto was damaged considerably, Mr. Ball and his niece, Miss Ball, who were in the machine, escaped injury.

The auto was going through Madison avenue toward Front street, under slow speed, and several carriages standing near the First M. E. church, obscured the vision of the motorman on the car preventing him from seeing the machine until too close to avert a collision. Mr. Ball turned his machine to the right and had almost stopped it, when the car ran into it, tossing it to one side of the road. The left front wheel and the right hind wheel, as well as the guards and springs were damaged to such an extent that the machine could not be operated, and the glass in the vestibule of the car was shattered.

The machine is one that was made by the owner and it is capable of high speed. Charles Ball claims that the motorman did not sound his gong and that the car was travelling at a lively rate of speed when the collision occurred.

The show was a distinct success both socially and financially and the Riding and Driving Club members were highly pleased with the reward for their labors. The dealers who had horses entered were profuse in their commendations for treatment accorded them and at the close Saturday night presented the finance committee with $100 as a start for the prize fund next year. It is too early to discuss plans for the third affair but the club has already given it out that it will be for three days instead of two.

THE LOOMIS CHECK

Mysterious Document to the Front In Asphalt Case.

TAFT ANXIOUS TO WIND UP AFFAIR

Nothing Has Happened to Change Mr. Taft's Conclusion That Bowen Has Failed to Make Good His Charges.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The mysterious $10,000 check transaction has again come to the front in the Bowen-Loomis scandal. Minister Bowen was at the war department with Harry Unwin, formerly the traveling auditor for the New York and Bermudez Asphalt company. The latter made some sensational statements to the secretary, which would have had more weight had they been in the nature of direct rather than of hearsay evidence.

Mr. Unwin informed Secretary Taft that some years ago, about the time of the alleged passage of a $10,000 check between the asphalt company and Mr. Loomis, he accounted for a check of this denomination. He thought it was made payable to Henry Willard Bean, who was then one of the managers of the company in Venezuela.

Mr. Unwin told the secretary that it was "whispered in the New York office" that the check was intended for Mr. Loomis. Mr. Unwin was uncertain as to dates, but said that there were other men in the company who could tell all about the transaction. He gave the names of several of them, including Messrs. Atkinson, Huntington and Cartland, and Secretary Taft promised to send for them and get their evidence. Mr. Bowen is hopeful that these men will clear up all doubt on the matter of the check business and thus permit the case to come to an immediate close.

Mr. Loomis has always denied that he received a $10,000 check from the asphalt company. He admits he got a check for $5,000 from the corporation, and this fact is verified by Mr. Bean. Mr. Loomis says that he deposited an amount equal to the check in a Venezuela bank to the credit of the asphalt company and that the transaction was merely an accommodation to him by which he could get some American money before leaving for home.

Secretary Taft is anxious to have positive information on this matter, for it is the only thing that stands in the way of winding up the inquiry. He sent an agent to Philadelphia to see Mr. John Mack of the asphalt trust to get certain records and books that may throw light on the subject.

Mr. Mack has promised to produce all the books of the treasurer of the company, together with certain vouchers bearing on transactions at the time Mr. Loomis was minister to Venezuela. These papers will be here today. An agent has also been sent to ex-President Barbour of the asphalt company in order to get certain desired information. If no definite evidence should be produced in the next few days concerning the $10,000 check business Secretary Taft will close the inquiry and make his report to the president. Nothing has happened during the past week to cause Mr. Taft to change his conclusion that Mr. Bowen has failed to make good his charges against Mr. Loomis.

FEAST OF ROSES.

Governor Pennypacker Delivered Memorial Address at Lancaster.

LANCASTER, Pa., June 12.—The annual "feast of roses" was held in the Lutheran church at Manheim and had as its central figure Governor Pennypacker, who delivered the memorial address.

S. L. Kinsey, editor of the York Dispatch, paid the rose to Miss Martha Horning of Newport, R. I., a lineal descendant of Baron Henry William Stiegel, who before the Revolutionary war gave to the congregation the land on which the church edifice stands today and who in his deed of the land stipulated an annual rental of "one red rose to be paid in June." R. K. Buehrle, superintendent of the public schools of Lancaster, received the rose in behalf of the heirs. Rev. Dr. D. M. Gilbert of Harrisburg preached the memorial sermon.

Governor Pennypacker in his address did not refer to Baron Stiegel and only in the most casual way to the ceremony of the red rose. He confined himself to the early German settlers of Pennsylvania. During the service he was presented with a goblet made by Baron Stiegel, who had the first glass factory in America. It is about 175 years old, and there is only one other of the kind in existence.

Mrs. Myers Guilty of Murder.

LIBERTY, Mo., June 12.—A jury found Mrs. Agnes Myers of Kansas City guilty in the first degree of murder of her husband, Clarence Myers. Death is the penalty. Frank Hottman, her paramour, and Mrs. Myers killed Myers so that the murderess might be free to marry Hottman. Hottman is under sentence of death.

George E. Seney Dead.

TIFFIN, O., June 12.—George E. Seney, congressman from 1883 to 1891, is dead of heart disease here. He was author of "Seney's Ohio Code." He served in the civil war as quartermaster of the One Hundred and First Ohio Infantry.

Plainfield, N. J., June 12, 1905.

Who is Pete Hamilton's little black man?

Don't forget that Wednesday, June 14, is Flag day.

Pennsylvania is a great State—Philadelphia Record.

"Great" and "notorious" must be synonyms in the Quaker City.

Adage admonishes you to "make hay while the sun shines," but T. Roosevelt says to Nicholas "I'll make sun shine without Hay."

Former Mayor Saunders has consolidated two big manfacturing concerns and still has hopes of bringing about a merger of the borough and city.

The West End avenue philosopher says that the pictures of ponies in the committee room at the horse show were simply immense. Waterboy was not to be found, although Highball and other favorites of the racing season were in evidence.

Plainfield's poor will lose good friends in Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Minford, who sold their handsome home and are about to take up their residence in New York city. Mrs. Minford, particularly, has done much to help the sick and needy and her charity was laways of the unostentacious kind.

The honor which has come to former Mayor William L. Saunders in being chosen president of the Rand-Ingersoll Company, the largest corporation of its kind in the world, is pleasing to his friends. Mr. Saunders is a broad gauged business man with singular executive abilities and moreover is a citizen of which any comunity might well be proud.

The decision of Joseph Hill and Charles Shupp to retire from business here will remove a firm that has been known for upright business dealings. Both men are of the honest type of retail merchant who does not resort to catch-penny devices or fake bargain schemes to get the customers' dollars, and their departure from the local field will be regretted generally.

In addition to the contributions of William Palmer Smith, Paul Taylor Brown and Charles W. McCutchen, previously acknowledged, The Daily Press has received a check from J. W. Jackson for ten dollars and from a "friend" for five dollars to be applied to the free open-air band concert fund. The donations are appreciated and the quick response of these public spirited citizens should prompt other wealthy residents to help along the cause. Provided a sufficient sum can be raised, band concerts will be given for the benefit of the masses one night a week during the season.

Prosecutor Lloyd, of Camden county, contributes his friendly services to the cause of automobiling. The South Jerseyman declares that automobiles have the same rights as other vehicles. The prosecutor should be decorated with a medal of the reckless order of life or death autoists. But why need he come to the succor of these much-abused mortals who are kind enough to turn Jersey's finely macadamized highways into speed boulevards. They enforce their rights without the aid of the law, for "they are a law unto themselves." If you have the impudence to drive a horse on the highway nowadays, you do so at your own risk. Should the passing autoist be kind enough to shoot by without taking a wheel off your vehicle, you should pardon his roar of delight as he sees clouds of dust in his path covering over you. Don't worry about the rights of the autoist—he'll take care of himself.

—Neuman Brothers receive their vegetables fresh each day; everything is crisp and nice when sold. A dozen varieties to select from.

COULDN'T HIT BILL BECK

All-Collegiate Goes on Plainfield's List 11 to 1.

MAHONEY THUMPED.

Star Twirler of Visitors Hit Fifteen Times — Kiernan's Fast Work.

It would appear that something more than college training is necessary to break a well developed winning streak. The All-Collegiate young men came out here Saturday afternoon, chockfull of erudition and confidence, to lambast a big, gaping hole in Plainfield's record. Their erudition escaped unscathed, but their confidence was busted into scattered chunks, 11 to 1. At last accounts the record was doing as well as could be expected and showing symptoms of growing.

To glide over the painful details, what happened to the All-Collegiate yoths was much and consistent pounding, and a sever case of freeze-up from Mr. W. Beck, of Weehawken, Hudson county. The more W. Beck disports himself in this vicinity the firmer becomes the conviction that he is a flinger of superior capabilities and eclat.

It was a bad attack of Beckitis that queered the learned bunch. They played fast, and carried themselves at all stages like handy youths who knew how to do chores in the field wtih neatness and despatch at all times, their errors being but slightly ochreized and quite excusable. But they couldn't reach Willie. He had them badly Buffaloed. Two of their six sparse welts came in the eighth, when William mercifully let up, and three of the biffs came from the trusty stick of Mr. O'Hare, the idol of Harlem.

As for us, we played in Class A, and took all the colored ribbons at the bat and in the open. Mr. Mahoney, a debonair youth and a hot favortie as an All-Collegiate twirler, got hizzen quick and much Every man in the home galaxy landed on him excepting Livingston. Livingston took Cosgrave's place in the field, having hied himself to the gory field whereon Yale and Princeton sought to smear a horrible defeat on each other. Cossy is an old Princeton player and pants every time he hears of Eli and the Tiger getting together. Livingston was useful, at that; he dished up some handy sacrifices. Mahoney was raked for fifteen thumps, including three-baggers by Connolly and Oldring and two-timers by Connolly and Cregan.

Not a taint blotted the record of our heroes in the field. Kiernan broke into the distinguished class with a string of red-hot stops and loolee chucks. Six assists did he turn off, and all of them teasers.

Paddy Cotter, one of last year's Westfield catchers, was back of the bat, and he got a magnanimous welcome. Paddy's bright smile indicated the relief he feels at getting out of bad company. He played without a black mark and landed one of the six welts.

The erudite athletes didn't hatch their goose-eggs until the eighth. Up to that time they couldn't hit when soaks meant profit, although they had several opportunities owing to passes and steals and an occasional biff. Fallon kicked over the whitewash bucket with a two-base hit on top of Bouche's pop to Oldring, after O'Hara's three-sacker to center.

WESTFIELD KILLS TIME PLAYING XAVIER A. C.

FARCICAL BASEBALL EXHIBITION AT RECREATION PARK.

The Westfield nine defeated the Xavier A. C. players, of New York, at Recreation Park, Saturday afternoon by a score of 14 to 2. The Xaviers defeated Summit and Summit beat Westfield, but the Westfield nine after the fifth inning changed every player's position in order to give the visiting players a chance to score. Every Westfield man had a turn in the pitcher's box, and "Red" Waller, the star twirler of the Westfield nine, caught a fly with one hand in the field. The scorers for the day could not keep score on account of so many changes in positions. The game was a farce, and the large audience was not very well pleased. The score:

FUNDS FOR S. A.

Special Meeting Last Night for that Purpose.

Under the auspices of the local corps of the Salvation Army and with a view to obtaining subscriptions to the fund for the new building to be erected on East Second street, a meeting was held in the First Baptist church, last night.

Major Sheppard, who has charge of the Salvation Army work in New Jersey, presided, assisted by Adjutant Magee, of the local corps. The services opened with prayer by Rev. George Francis, and after introductory remarks by Major Sheppard, his wife gave the discourse of the evening.

At the conclusion of the service a colection was received for the local work. Rev. Mr. Francis closed the meeting with prayer and the benediction.

Golf Handicap List Issued.

Leighton Calkins has issued the handicap list of the New Jersey State Golf Association. There are 850 players rated. JAPAN'S TERMS TOLD Russia Surprised at Mikado's Moderation.

MAY BE A TREATY OF WASHINGTON

Peace Commissioners Named—European Diplomats Praise Roosevelt as Peacemaker—Practical Armistice Exists.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—A special from St. Petersburg says that Russia is waiting for Japan to fix the time and the place when and where the Japanese terms will be placed in the hands of Russia's representative. The foreign office expects that the delay will be brief.

The emperor's government would prefer that Paris should be the scene of the initial step for peace. The Russian representative will probably be Baron Rosen, but he will not be a plenipotentiary with full power to negotiate. His duty will practically be confined to the reception and transmission to his government of the Japanese terms for decision as to whether they afford a basis for actual peace negotiations.

The Japanese plenipotentiaries to arrange terms of peace, it is said, will be Marquis Ito, Premier Katsura, Foreign Minister Komura, Marquis Yamagata, and others are being suggested for possible heads of the commission.

St. Petersburg dispatches say that Russia has already practically obtained Japan's conditions and that they have proved so surprisingly moderate that Russia certainly will accept them as a basis for negotiations.

Japan's acceptance of the president's offer of peace reached the state department in a cablegram from Mr. Griscom. Russia's reply followed later.

An interesting fact regarding the negotiations is the powerful influence brought to bear upon Russia by France to accept the offer of the president and appoint plenipotentiaries to discuss peace with representatives of Japan.

Although no official announcement has been made, there are indirect assurances, both from officials and diplomats, that the belligerents have agreed to begin negotiations for peace, that an armistice will certainly follow and that the plenipotentiaries of the foes will soon meet at a capital to be mutually agreed upon.

This capital may be Washington. Mr. Kogoro Takahira, Japanese minister, when asked if there was a possibility of negotiations being opened at The Hague, said that he did not think so. Further than this he declared that he was unadvised by his government as to the answer made to President Roosevelt or the place where Japan's diplomats would meet those of Russia to bargain for peace.

There has already been a practical suspension of hostilities in Manchuria, for the Japanese legation has heard nothing further of the recently reported forward movement of Oyama's army against Linevitch.

Tokyo dispatches say that the Japanese continue to maintain an attitude of reserve toward the question of peace. It seems to be the popular fear that Japan would sacrifice the advantage of Admiral Togo's victory as well as Field Marshal Oyama's opportunities by consenting to an armistice now. It is felt that Togo's victory opens the entire Russian Pacific coast to invasion and that Oyama is capable of speedily taking Harbin, cutting the railway and isolating Vladivostok. It is also feared that the Russians will take advantage of an armistice to improve their positions and to strengthen their forces.

There is a general demand that Japan should carefully safeguard its interests if an armistice is declared.

According to the best opinion, Russia is prepared to abandon the whole of her Manchurian adventure and give guarantees. The rub will come upon the question of an indemnity which, it is the concensus of opinion in diplomatic circles, Japan will exact, but if it should be moderate and sugar coated so that it could be liquidated by the sale of the Chinese Eastern railroad and the cession of Russian property and leases in the Kwangtung peninsula it might be overcome.

Russia probably will insist on holding the railroad to Vladivostok through northern Manchuria and will never submit to the humiliation of disarmament in her only port in the Pacific nor to the inhibition against having warships in those waters.

Considering the situation of the two countries, members of the diplomatic corps feel that Japan's status in the Pacific is so firmly established that she can afford to dispense with the exaction of so bitter a condition. Though the feeling against a cession of actual territory is strong, the island of Sakhalin, over which Japan and Russia once exercised a codominion, might be ceded or as an offset to the cession of that island all fishing and other Russian rights in the Kommander islands might be handed over to Japan.

President Roosevelt, through Ambassador Meyer, has sent a personal message of thanks to Emperor Nicholas for the reception of his appeal.

In diplomatic circles it is felt that Great Britain can now play a great role in seconding the president's initiative by restraining her ally and counseling moderate terms. Harsh and humiliating terms will never be accepted by Russia.

A Paris dispatch says that President Roosevelt's success in opening a way for peace negotiations between Russia and Japan is the absorbing theme in European politics, and France has forgotten her own troubles with Germany over Morocco to join in enthusiastic approval of the American initiative. Portraits of President Roosevelt, Ambassador Meyer, Minister Takahira and Ambassador Cassini appear in all the journals, with pictures of the White House as the scene of the historic origin of the peace movement.

Without exception comment on President Roosevelt's action is favorable, with the expression of a slight sense of disappointment that France as the ally of Russia has not taken a more prominent part in effecting the preliminaries.

Baron Rosen, the new Russian ambassador to the United States, who has arrived in Paris on his way to Washington, is mentioned as the probable Russian peace plenipotentiary.

A SHORT HOLIDAY.

President Reached Washington From Virginia Farm Last Night.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—After a two days' sojourn with Mrs. Roosevelt at the picturesque little woodland home recently purchased by her near Charlottesville, Va., the president returned to Washington last night. Accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, he arrived at the Pennsylvania station at 9:50 o'clock via the Southern railway.

As they entered the White House they were greeted cordially by Secretary Taft and Secretary Loeb, who were awaiting their arrival. The president was in excellent spirits, evidently having enjoyed his outing immensely. As he grasped Secretary Taft's hand in a hearty clasp he inquired facetiously, "Are you still sitting on the lid?" The secretary assured the president that the lid was still down.

After a discussion of developments since the president's departure, the conference lasting about half an hour, Secretary Loeb authorized the announcement that nothing concerning negotiations for peace in the far east would be made public. This conclusion was reached by the president in view of the situation as it was shown in the official advices received in his absence, with only a part of which he was familiar before he reached the White House.

It is not possible at this time to indicate when the formal replies from Russia and Japan to the president's identical notes will be given to the public. It is possible it may be today and it may not be for several days. The situation is quite satisfactory to the president, and assurance is given that the withholding of the notes is not due to any hitch in the negotiations.

Before the responses of the Russian and Japanese governments are published they will be transmitted formally by the president, the Japanese note to the St. Petersburg government and the Russian note to the government at Tokyo. The transmission of the notes will conclude the preliminary negotiations for peace initiated by the president and practically will conclude this government's work in those negotiations.

Officially informed that the response to the president's appeal is favorable, it will remain for the Russian and Japanese governments to effect an arrangement for a temporary armistice, pending a direct discussion of terms for permanent peace. Information received here both in governmental and diplomatic quarters indicates that Japan will suggest where the first meeting of the representatives of the belligerent powers will take place and that Russia will accede to that suggestion.

AUTO PLUNGED UNDER.

Chicago Car Returning From Wedding Met Fatal Mishap.

CHICAGO, June 12.—For the second time in six months an automobile filled with men and women plunged through the open Rush street bridge at 8 o'clock at night, and two men and one woman were drowned. The victims of the accident are J. G. Kurtzman and his wife and Edwin Hartley, all of this city.

Mrs. Jeremiah Runyon, said to be a woman of wealth from New York city and for the last three weeks a patron of the Lexington hotel, was taken from the river in a half drowned state and was removed to a hospital, where she now lies in a serious condition, being prostrated by a nervous shock.

W. H. Hoops, Jr., son of the president of the Cadillac Automobile company, was driving the machine. He, too, was rescued and will recover.

The party had attended the wedding of Miss Eva Swovelin, daughter of Mrs. Runyon, to C. H. Foster, general manager of the Cadillac company. After a wedding dinner at the Auditorium Mr. and Mrs. Foster left on their honeymoon journey to the east.

The automobile party went to a summer garden on the north side. They returned through a heavy rain, and the chauffeur could not see clearly ahead of him.

At a rapid pace the big machine was driven toward the Rush street bridge, which had been turned for the passing of a boat. In front of the open draw stood another automobile, but Hoops failed to see the machine in time to stop his own.

To avoid a collision he turned quickly to one side, and the machine he was driving dashed over the embankment and tumbled to the water thirty feet below. It all happened so quickly that nearby pedestrians did not realize the situation until the women screamed in terror.

Automobile and passengers sank twenty feet into the water. A passing scow hurried to the rescue, and the crew managed to save Mrs. Runyon and Mr. Hoops. They worked at a disadvantage in the darkness and could not find the others of the party.

Feminine Snapshots

How Shall the Unfortunate Feminine Sex Please Everybody?

Woman, marry! That's your business, commands the old fogy who is always with us. Suppose she does marry and finds she must afterward earn her own living or starve? Married woman, get back home and stay there! You've no right to take the bread out of the mouths of single women. Starve if you will and let your children starve, but don't come in competition with the single woman, once more thunders the old fogy. For twenty years the New York board of education has been thrashing over the aged straw of the question whether married women may be "permitted" to teach in the public schools, and when the kneil of the twentieth century strikes it will probably be at it still. In connection with this may be mentioned some recent statistics of married men who desert their families. Last year 574 such abandoned families applied for aid to the Public Charities organization in New York. There were 1,565 children in the families thus abandoned by their alleged breadwinners. The cause of the man's desertion of the helpless ones for whose existence on this plane he is responsible is in the majority of the cases, so far as they can be hunted down, intemperance on his part, frequently combined with laziness. One deserter claimed that his wife was a religious fanatic and very deaf and suspicious besides. In this case one's sympathies are with the deserter, but he appears to be the sole victim. The others are simply no account men. Yet all the world is desperately shooing woman into matrimony. Then after she is in and finds herself tied to a man who either cannot or will not maintain her in the style she has a right to expect, if she tries to earn her own bread all the world is up again and tries to shoo her out of life. Nice planet this is for a woman to live on, isn't it?

The best way to succeed and the easiest in the long run for women who know they can do something is to start enterprises of their own. The posts in established industries are already largely filled by men who are not going to give their places up, and, indeed, there is no reason why they should. But let the woman who is strong, determined and shrewd—the more gentle and womanly she is the better, also—think things over carefully, decide what she can do, then begin it on her own account and stick to it till success comes. A notable example of the wisdom of this policy is Miss Mattie Sheridan, founder and editor of a lively little art and society magazine in New York. Miss Sheridan was a Louisville girl who knew how to write. She went bravely to the great city, where success is so hard to gain, starting first as a newspaper contributor. She won speedily a foothold that would have satisfied many, but not Mattie Sheridan. After several years she founded a periodical of her own, which has made her independent socially and financially.

When you hear a woman say she has all the rights she wants you may conclude she has for sure all the rights she is capable of exercising.

I wonder why it is that benevolent working people do not start a mission among the benighted rich to teach them how to do something useful.

What would the newspapers of New York do without these two headlines: "Women In Panic In Trolley Crash," "Women In Panic In Ferry Crash?"

Most people would be very much surprised to learn what their greatest faults are in the estimation of their acquaintances, and they would indignantly deny that they possessed such faults.

A curious thought has come into my mind. Lately I saw a picture of Hiram Cronk, the old soldier of 1812, who died a little while ago at the age of 105. Grouped around him were also half tone pictures of his children, aged eighty and thereabout. The portrait of the venerable Hiram himself looked not a day older than that of his eighty-year-old son. Now, if an individual 105 years old looks no older than eighty, why should the person of eighty look any older than fifty-five? See? Why should not the scale slide backward in the same proportion?

The greater the victory the greater must be the struggle to gain it.

A bachelor man, explaining why so many of his sex do not marry, says: "We all go on the theory that no man, however good, is good enough for a woman. That is why we don't get married. Are bachelors happy? Well, they think they are." And are bachelor girls happy? Well, they, too, think they are.

A bill was introduced in the last New Jersey legislature to stop hanging women for murder in that state. This is plain justice. If capital punishment is ever justifiable it should never be inflicted on women till women have the right to sit on juries that condemn members of their sex.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

[Copyright, 1899, by F. Tennyson Neely.]

She was not even looking at him. Her thoughts at the moment were drifting back to that usually light-hearted boy who stood, gazing so disconsolately after them as they drove away, her eyes were intent upon an approaching group that presently reclaimed her wandering thoughts.

Coming up Point Lobos avenue strode a party of four—all soldiers. One of these, wild-eyed, bareheaded, dishevveled, his clothing torn, his wrists lashed behind him, walked between two armed guards. The fourth, a sergeant, followed at their heels. Miss Lawrence had just time to note that the downcast face was dark and oval and refined, when it was suddenly uplifted at sound of the whirring carriage wheels. A light of recognition, almost of terror, flashed across it, and with one bound the prisoner sprang from between his guards, dove almost under the noses of the startled team, and darted through the wide open doorway of a corner saloon. He was out of sight in a second.

CHAPTER IV.

The review that morning had drawn a crowd to the drill grounds that baffled the efforts of the guards. Carriages from camps and carriages from town, carts from the suburbs, equestrians from the parks and pedestrians from everywhere had gradually encroached within kicking distance of the heels of the cavalry escorting the general commanding the department, and that official noted with unerring eye that the populace was coming up on his flanks, so to speak, at the moment when the etiquette of the service required that he should be gazing only to his immediate front and responding to the salutes of the marching column. Back of him, ranged in long, single rank, was drawn up what the newspapers unanimously described as a "brilliant" staff, despite the fact that all were in somber campaign uniform and several had never been so rated before. In their rear, in turn, was the line of mounted orderlies and farther still the silent rank of the escorting troop. Sentries had been posted to keep the throng at proper distance, but double their force could have accomplished nothing—the omniscient corporal could not help them, and after asking one or two stray officers what they would do about it, the sentries gave way and the crowd swarmed in. It was just as the head of the long tramping column came opposite the reviewing point, and the brigade commander and his staff, turning out after saluting, found their allotted station on the right of the reviewing party completely taken up by the mass of eager spectators. A minute or so was required before the trouble could be remedied, for just as the officers and orderlies were endeavoring to induce the populace to give way — a thing the American always resists with a gay good humor that is peculiarly his own—a nervous hack driver on the outskirts backed his bulky trap with unexpected force, and penned between it and the wheels of a newly-arrived and much more presentable equipage a fair equestrian who shrieked with fright and clung to her pommel as her excited "mount" lashed out with his heels and made splinters of the hack's rearmost spokes and felloes. Down went the hack on its axle point. Out sprang a tall officer from the open carriage, and in a second, it seemed, transferred the panic-stricken horsewoman from the seismatic saddle to the safety of his own seat, and the ministrations of the two young women and the gray-haired civilian who were the latest arrivals. This done, and after one quick glance at the lady's helpless escort, a young officer from the Presidio, he shouldered his way through the crowd and stood, presently, on its inner edge, an unperturbed and most interested spectator. Battalion after battalion, in heavy marching order, in the dark blue service dress, with campaign hats and leggins, with ranks well closed and long, well-aligned fronts, with accurate trace of the guides and well-judged distance, the great regiments came striding down the gentle slope, conscious, every officer and man, of the admiration they commanded. Armstrong, himself commander of a fine regiment of volunteers in another brigade, looked upon them with a soldier's eye, and looked approvingly. Then, as the rearmost company passed the reviewing point and gentlemen with two stars on each shoulder extended their congratulations to the reviewed commander with one, Armstrong also made his way among the mounted officers in his calm, deliberate fashion, heedless of threatening heels and crowding forehands, until he, too, could say his word of cordial greeting. He had to wait a few minutes, for the general officers were grouped and talking earnestly. He heard a few words and knew well enough what was meant—that quantities of stores intended for the soldiers, even dainties contributed by the Red Cross society, had been stolen from time to time and spirited off in the dead of night, and doubtless sold in town for the benefit of a pack of unknown scoundrels enlisted for no better purpose. In his own regiment his system had been so strict that no loss was discoverable, but in certain others the deficit was great. Complaints were loud, and the camp commander, stung possibly by comments from the city, had urged his officers to unusual effort, and had promised punishment to the extent of the law on the guilty parties whenever or wherever found.

Even as he was exchanging a word with the brigadier, Armstrong heard the exclamation: "By Jove—they've caught another!" for with a grim smile of gratification the camp commander had read and turned over to his adjutant general a brief dispatch just handed him by a mounted orderly who had galloped fast.

"One of your irreproachables, Armstrong," said one of the staff, with something half sneer, half taunt, as he too read and then passed the paper to the judge advocate of the division.

Armstrong turned with his usual deliberation. There was ever about him a quiet dignity of manner that was the delight of his friends and despair of his foes.

"What is his name?" he calmly asked.

"That young fellow at Canker's headquarters you took so much interest in a day or so ago," was the reply.

"That does not give his name—nor identify him as one of my men," said Armstrong, coolly.

"Oh, well, I didn't say he belonged to your command," was the staff officer's response. "You devoted a good deal of time to him, that's all. Possibly you suspected him."

"If you mean the young soldier in Gordon's office, —teenth infantry, I would be slow to suspect him of any crime," said Armstrong, with something almost like a drawl, so slow and deliberate was his manner, and now the steel gray eyes and the fair, clear-cut face were turned straight upon the snapping black eyes and dark features of the other. There was no love lost there. One could tell without so much as seeing.

"You're off, then! That commissary sergeant gave him away the very evening you were looking him over—he got wind of it and skipped, and to-day came back in handcuffs."

"All of which may be as you say, and still not warrant your reference to him as one of my irreproachables," answered Armstrong, "and it will take more than the evidence you refer to to make me believe him guilty."

By this time much of the crowd and most of the vehicles had driven away. The generals still sat in saddles chatting earnestly together, while their staff officers listened in some impatience to the conversation just recorded. Everybody knew the fault was not Armstrong's, but it was jarring to have to sit and hearken to the controversy. "Don't ever twit or try funny business with Armstrong," once said a regimental sage. He had no sense of humor—of that kind. Those who best knew him knew that Armstrong never tolerated unjust accusations, great or small. In his desire to say an irritating thing to a man he both envied and respected, the staff officer had not confined himself to the facts, and it proved a boomerang. It was true that two days before, calling at Gordon's official tent while several other officers were present at an investigation then going on, Armstrong was seen to be greatly interested in the appearance and testimony of Gordon's young, dark-eyed clerk, and after the conference asked many questions about and finally asked to speak with him. Then young Morton was again missing when he was wanted, and the next heard of him he was either absent without leave—or a deserter.

And now once again Armstrong's eyes had lighted on that boy. Seated opposite Miss Lawrence as the carriage whirled across Point Lobos avenue, and watching her unobtrusively, he saw the sudden light of alarm and excitement in her expressive face, heard the faint exclamation as her gloved hand grasped the rail of the seat, felt the quick sway of the vehicle as the horses shied in fright at some object beyond his vision. Then as they dashed on he had seen the running guard and, just vanishing within the portals of the corner building, the slim figure of the escaping prisoner. He saw the quivering hands tearing at their fastenings. He knew he had seen that figure before now. He turned to the driver and bade him stop a minute, but it took 50 yards of effort before the spirited horses could be calmed and brought to a halt at the curb. To the startled inquiries of Mr. Prime and his daughter as to the cause of the excitement and the running and shouting he answered simply: "A prisoner escaped, I think," and sent a passing corporal to inquire the result. The man came back in a minute.

"They got him easy, sir. He had no show. His hands were tied behind his back and he couldn't climb," was the brief report.

"They have not hurt him, I hope," said Armstrong.

TROLLEYS IN HEAD-ON SMASH

Many Princeton-Yale Baseball Patrons Injured.

TRENTON, N. J., June 12.—Fifteen or twenty persons were injured, several seriously and two perhaps fatally, in a head-on collision between two heavily loaded cars on the Johnson trolley line between this city and Princeton, one car being bound to Trenton with spectators of the Yale Princeton baseball game, the other en route to Princeton with Trenton residents to see the presentation of "The Pretenders" by the Princeton Dramatic club.

The accident occurred one mile east of Lawrenceville on a level, straight single tracked road, and its cause cannot be accounted for. One theory is that the signal lights had been tampered with, as considerable of this mischief has been going on in the vicinity for some time. The road is guarded by signal lights, which are controlled by switches at the turnouts.

Mr. Parsons, who, with his wife, was on the Trenton car, said:

"We had passed Lawrenceville and were bowling along at a rapid rate when the accident occurred. I was seated with my back to the front of the car and was some distance from Mrs. Parsons. Suddenly several women arose and screamed, and the next instant there was a terrible crash. Every one was thrown violently about the car, although only those who jumped from their seats were badly hurt. The Princeton car was badly wrecked and passengers had been hurled in every direction.

"The women were taken from the wreckage first and then the men. Dr Thomas H. Mackenzie of this city was a passenger and did good work. Trenton was telephoned to for aid, and a relief car, with doctors and nurses, was sent out. The injured were loaded on this car and were brought back to Trenton. Ambulances were in waiting, and the victims were removed to the hospitals or to their homes."

SENTENCED HIS FRIEND.

Ex-President Bigelow Got Ten Years In Prison.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 12.—Frank G. Bigelow, confessed defaulter in the sum of $1,500,000 of the funds of the First National bank of Milwaukee while president of the bank, pleaded guilty to an indictment of ten counts, each count a violation of the national banking laws, and was sentenced by United States District Judge Joseph V. Quarles to ten years' imprisonment at hard labor in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Judge Quarles in passing sentence dwelt on the circumstances surrounding the case and with emotion referred to his own long personal friendship for Bigelow. Bigelow was visibly affected, although he bore himself with remarkable fortitude.

Bigelow said he knew the nature of the indictment and waived the reading of the ten counts. At Bigelow's request the defendant had no counsel.

"Being familiar with the indictment, what is your plea?" said Judge Quarles. "Are you guilty or not guilty?"

Bigelow rose, looked squarely at the judge and said, "Guilty."

Bigelow was president of the First National bank of Milwaukee and was arrested on April 24, charged with the embezzlement of more than $100,000 of the bank's funds. He later confessed to the board of directors of the bank that he was a defaulter to the extent of $1,450,000.

Bigelow confessed he had misdirected the funds of the bank and that an examination of his books would show that he was indebted to the bank for more than $1,450,000.

The money, he said, had been lost in speculation in wheat and stocks and that not a dollar of it could be recovered.

He was formerly president of the American Bankers' association. It was also alleged that he had caused a shortage in the funds of various great estates which he managed.

WILL SPRING THE TRAP.

Convict Barker to Be His Own Executioner.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 12.—Frank Barker, convicted of the murder of his brother Daniel and also his brother's wife and now confined in the Nebraska penitentiary awaiting the noose of the hangman for his double crime, is to be his own executioner.

The Nebraska supreme court fixed the execution for Friday, June 16. The law requires that all legal executions in Nebraska shall be at the penitentiary under the supervision of the warden.

As Warden Beemer shrinks from the duty of springing the trap, Barker has stepped into the breach and informed the warden that he will be his own hangman. Barker has frankly confessed that he is guilty and admits that he deserves the punishment which the law prescribes.

New Hatchery For Bass.

CHICAGO, June 12.—The United States Fish commission, with the assistance of the Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville Railway company, has established a hatchery at Cedar Lake, Ind. The inclosure is 40 by 200 feet, and it is expected that as many as 50,000 young fish, principally bass, will be hatched every year.

AN UP TO DATE HUNT

Old Time Indian Buffalo Chase at Bliss, Okla.

SHOT FROM FLYING MOTOR CAR.

President Ordered Exhibition Stopped by State Troops—Indian Agent's Message Says, "God Pity the Editors!"

BLISS, Okla., June 12.—Despite the opposition aroused by Dan Beard in New York and the action of the federal and the local authorities the buffalo hunt on 101 ranch was held, as promised. One animal was killed by Dr. H. F. Thomas of Chicago. The hunt was led by old Geronimo and was participated in by twenty-five cowboys and a band of Indians in full war paint.

Dr. Thomas fired the shot from his automobile, which had been in the chase during the several hours which it lasted. He was injured in an automobile accident in Chicago recently and has since been sojourning with the Miller brothers at 101 ranch. Dr. Thomas has two automobiles here and has entered many races.

As soon as the beast fell old Geronimo, despite his eighty years, leaped from his horse and fired two shots into the buffalo and then with his hunting knife cut its throat.

Miss Lucille Mulhall, the noted woman rider, took part in the chase, which was full of excitement, as frequently the buffalo, maddened by his pursuers, who tried to drive him to a certain place for the killing, would turn and charge.

Reports having reached President Roosevelt from members of the National Editorial association that the killing of the buffalo would be an act of brutality, he instructed the governor of Oklahoma to stop it by sending troops to 101 ranch.

Upon learning this the Miller brothers decided that the killing should take place before the troops could arrive, and accordingly the entertainment was held in a pasture field, which was surrounded by many hundreds of spectators.

It is believed that pressure will be brought to bear whereby more buffaloes can be killed, and lengthy telegrams are being sent to the president assuring him that there was nothing inhuman in the killing of the first buffalo, which will be barbecued. The troops have not arrived, but are expected today by order of Secretary Taft.

Geronimo is here in charge of Captain Luke Stover and sixteen troopers from Fort Sill, who will be responsible for his safe keeping. The old chief had numerous powwows, and a grand powwow is to be held shortly in which Indians, scouts and cowboys will take part.

Secretary Hitchcock has been sent the following dispatch from Superintendent Noble, in charge of the Ponca Indian agency, Oklahoma:

"Replying to your telegram, I respectfully advise that no buffalo of any description will be slaughtered at the celebration today in honor of the National Editorial association on Ponca tribal, nor will any inhuman or objectional act be permitted. Prior to the receipt of your telegram last night Joe Miller had killed one old male buffalo on the land owned by himself, the meat of which he proposes to serve to the editors. God pity the editors! No more buffalo will be killed whatsoever, as the Millers propose to raise a large herd on their ranch."

A DOUBLE LIFE.

Death Revealed That Deacon Had Two Wives Living.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 12.—It is said that Peter H. Deacon, who died recently in Chicago, had lived a double life for twenty years, having at the same time families in Somerville, Mass., a suburb of Boston, and in Milwaukee.

Deacon came west twenty years ago and married Fannie Adeline Wilcox. He was known as the agent for a knitting manufacturing firm and had an office in Milwaukee. Deacon was a leading supporter of the St. James Episcopal church. At the same time he had a wife and seven children residing in Somerville, Mass., having been married to Anna J. Tuite in Somerville by the Rev. James Healy in 1868. The second marriage took place nearly twenty years later.

The story of the double life leaked out when John Keating, husband of a daughter born of Deacon's first marriage, came west for the purpose of securing proofs of Deacon's death and adjusting two life insurance policies. According to Keating's story, Deacon for many years represented to the wife in Massachusetts that he was a traveling man and that his business kept him in the west most of the time. His visits to his eastern home were limited to about two each year. The only western address known to his eastern family was the Hotel Wellington, Chicago. For a long time Mr. Deacon supported the Somerville family, but shortly before his death his contributions ceased altogether.

Vice Consul Murdered.

TANGIER, June 12.—Moorish robbers entered the Austrian vice consulate at Mazagan and murdered Vice Consul Madden, a British subject, who also represented Denmark and who had been established there for many years. They also fired at and wounded his wife. The assassins escaped. The Austrian and British authorities have sent energetic protests to the sultan's foreign minister.

"Thrift," says Russell Sage, "is so essential to happiness, that the failure so practice it, is to me, incomprehensible. It is such an easy, simple thing, and it means so much; it is the foundation of success in business, of contentment in the home, of standing in the community. It stimulates industry. It begets independence and self-confidence."

SUPERB PRODUCTIONS.

Al Fresco Plays Make a Great Hit on Casino Grounds.

Though witnessed by slim audiences, the "al fresco" performances of "As You Like It" and "The Merchant of Venice," on the Casino grounds, Saturday afternoon and evening, were in every way the equal of the best indoor productions yet seen in the city. The cast was made up of members of the Frohman companies, headed by Sidney Herbert and Miss Alida Cortelyou, both of whom exhibited ability much beyond the ordinary, while the supporting artists were of the best. The scenery and effects were complete, making the performances a rare treat.

The appearance of the company was brought about by W. S. Angleman ,for the benefit of the Netherwood Fresh Air Fund, but it is to visit Plainfield again through the efforts of Maze Edwards, manager of the Casino.

SYNOD'S CENTENARY.

Reformed Church Plans Celebration for Next Year.

The general synod of the Reformed Church in America, which is still in session at Asbury Park, will next year observe its centenary anniversary, a period which it is proposed to fittingly celebrate and make an occasion long to be remembered in the whole church.

Rev. Dr. Coe, pastor of the Collegiate Church, New York, the oldest church in the denomination, and with 178 years more of ecclesiastical history at its back than has the general synod, this morning at the session suggested that a resolution offered by Elder Rusk, providing for a committee of five to arrange a programme for the centennial, be referred to the committee of arrangements for the next meeting place pending a communication from the collegiate consistory, which, he said, would in October, no doubt, extend a formal invitation to the synod to observe at this historic centre its 100th anniversary.

What form the celebration will take was not discussed by the synod. Probably it will be outlined by the committee of arrangements in October.

COMMON COUNCIL WORK

Tax Ordinance for Schools Adopted on Second Reading—$150 to Fight Maple Tree Scale.

Owing to the death of Bernard Clark, which occurred on Friday, June 9, his widow, Mrs. Anna Mary Clark, communicated with the Common Council last night, asking that body to transfer the liquor license held by the late Bernard Clark to his sons, John Clark and Frank Clark, to whom were bequeathed the business located at Liberty and West Third streets. Mrs. Clark is the executrix of the will. The matter was referred to the police commitee for further invsetigation regarding the will. William Newcorn, Esq., representing Mrs. Clark, endeavored to have the transfer made last night, but Mr. Tyler thought it best to have the matter lay over until the next meeting of the Common Council.

Street Lights.

Charles W. Leveridge and others petitioned for street lights on Grant avenue, between Eighth street and Sherman avenue, and the matter was referred to the lights committee. The annual report of the directors of the public library and reading room was received; referred to the finance committee and filed.

Auctioneer's License Refused.

On motion of Chairman Tyler, of the Police Board, the application of Reubenstein Brothers, New York jewelers, for an auctioneer's license here, was refused and the firm's check was returned.

School Appropriation.

Mr. Tolles introduced a supplement to the tax ordinance providing for the raising of $70,000, the amount decided upon by the Board of School Estimate, thought to be necessary to maintain the public schools for the coming year, and $260 interest on the $13,000 school bonds recently issued to complete the new High School. The $70,000 is exclusive of that received from the county and State, and is to be raised by assessment and collected the same as other tax. The ordinance was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised.

Miscellaneous.

On motion of Mr. Tolles the clerk was authorized to subscribe for five copies of the Municipal Journal, $2 each for one year. Other resolutions offered by Mr. Tolles and adopted prvoided for an appropriation of $40 to paint the city flag pole and gild the weather vane and to transfer $300 from the general fund to the poor fund.

Flagging Refused.

Mr. Wilson returned the petition of J. D. Loizeaux and others, asking the flagging be laid on Madison avenue, between Stelle avenue and Randolph road, with the information that the street at that point has not been accepted and the Common Council has no jurisdiction.

A Hydrant Wanted.

Mr .Bullock returned the petition of F. L .C. Martin, asking for a hydrant on Park avenue, between North avenue and Fourth street, and he offered a resolution providing that one four-way hydrant be located at a point to be decided upon by Chief Doane.

Trolley Matters.

Mr. Higham ,chairman of the committee on public affairs, stated that the complaint referred to in the petition of Robert L. Lee and others regarding the poor condition of the frogs and switch in the trolley tracks on West Fourth street, near Grant avenue, had been referred to the Public Service Corporation and was being attended to by the general superintendent. He also stated that the company has the right to install a turnout on Arlington avenue, near Randolph road, and it was thought that this would improve the fifteen-minute service on the Arlington avenue line.

Pedlers' Licenses.

Mr. Tyler remarked that it has always been the desire of applicants for pedlers' licenses that the same be granted the same night they are presented, and he suggested that they make it a point to present them early enough to have such action taken. Mr. Daniel suggested that some one member, at least, see the applications in advance and endorse them, according to rule 11 of the city ordinance.

More Lights.

On motion of Mr. Murphy, chairman of the lights and trees committee, the application of H. Le Cox and others for lights on West Third street ,between Clinton and Darrow avenues, be returned for correction, the location not being right.

$150 to Fight Scales.

Mr. Murphy again brought up the question of adopting some measures

CADMUS PROPERTY CLEAR

Reversal of Shaefer Judgment Allows Sale to Proceed.

BIG REALTY DEAL.

By a decision of the New Jersey Supreme Court, handed down at Trenton yesterday, the $5,000 verdict rendered William B. Shaefer by the Union County Circuit Court in his damage suit against Abram L. Cadmus, was set aside and a new trial granted the defendant. The reversal has a bearing on the proposed sale of the Cadmus property on Myrtle and West End avenues to a local syndicate as the judgment affected the estate and prevented the heirs from giving clear title. This being removed, the deal will be passed, probably today, and the improvements planned for that section many months ago will be put through as soon as possible.

Shaefer was employed at the Commercial mills on South Second street, owned by Abram Cadmus, and sustained severe injuries by the breaking of a plank bridge connecting two parts of the building. He brought suit for damages, alleging the planks had rotted and that the owner was aware of the danger, getting the $5,000 verdict. Cadmus refused to pay the amount and through his lawyer, James Powers, of Newark, applied to the Supreme Court for a rule to show cause why he should not be granted a new trial.

At this time the Cadmus heirs, of which A. L. Cadmus is one, had all but closed a deal to sell the property in North Plainfield to Charles W. McCutchen, Mayor N. B. Smalley and others, for developement. The papers were about to be signed when Schaefer's counsel, Craig A. Marsh, attached the property to secure the payment of the damages to his client. This prevented the heirs from giving clear title and the syndicate was unable to complete the purchase until the attachment was removed. The members also threatened to bring suit against Abram Cadmus for blocking negotiations and he was between two fires when the decision of yesterday freed him. The property is now cleared of all encumbrance and one of the most important local realty deals in recent years will be consummated. What is now practically farm land, will be turned into a residential tract to be known as "Rockview Heights" and will rival the Washington Park district.

The parting by the heirs of this portion of the estate takes from the Cadmus family property that has been in its possession continuously since 1748. An immense tract was purchased in that year by Deric Cadmus, a local settler. It extended from the base of the mountains along what is now West End avenue as far as West Seventh street, with portions lying west as far as Clinton avenue and east to Giraud and Plainfield avenues. He cultivated a portion of it and one section of 400 acres he gave rent free to a man named Vermeule. The latter resided on it thirty-five years and at the death of Deric Cadmus, when his sons claimed it, he refused to give it up. The family did not press the claim and the tract was the first of the original purchase to become detached. In course of time many more acres were sold but the one particular portion soon to be "Rockview Heights" was never owned by any others but members of the Cadmus family.

Surprise Party.

Miss Agnes A. Leighs was tendered a surprise party Saturday afternoon at the home of her parents, on West Fourth street, the occasion being her twelfth birthday. Among those present were Ruth Kenny, Jeannette and Margaret Neal, Marion and Madeline Blimm, Hannah, Esther and Henry Brandt, Esther and Thomas Mattell, Theodore Martin, Walter McKinley, Elmer Dehart, Russell Cose and Georgie E. Leighs.

Philadelphia Mayor Begins Trimming Expenses at City Hall.

TEST WITH MACHINE.

Rapid Transit Franchise Fight Comes Up Before Committee—He Predicts a Victory.

Philadelphia, June 13—Samuel Salter, formerly a member of the Legislature, yesterday resigned his $2,000 place as assistant to the Chief Clerk in the office of the County Commissioner. Soon after he was acquitted of a charge of ballot box stuffing in Durham's ward, some years ago, Salter was appointed to the place, which was created by special vote of the City Councils.

Salter's resignation created a sensation at the City Hall. It is regarded as a confession of weakness on the part of the Durham machine. Since the gas uprising there had been a clamor for his removal. The County Commissioners say the resignation came voluntarily. Salter says he is going into business.

Mayor Weaver, in pursuance of his plan to reduce the cost of running the City Government yesterday dismissed sixty-five employes of the Bureau of City Property and fourteen from the Electrical Bureau. Among the discharged men are plumbers, carpenters, cleaners, etc., most of them employed in the City Hall. A saving of $41,476.25 annually will be the result of the decapitation. George G. Pierie, chief of the bureau, admitted to Director Potter that the sixty-five men were never needed. Similar discharges in many bureaus are looked for this week.

The real battle for control of the City Councils will be fought out between Mayor Weaver and the organization when the Councils Committee on street railways meets this afternoon to consider bills repealing the four trolley ordinances recently passed giving franchises to the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company. The franchises convey the right to operate cars on 110 miles additional of streets without compensation to the city.

NO INQUEST ON THE FISH PEDDLER MURDER

CORONER THINKS ONE UNNECESSARY —DEFENCE SECVRES WITNESSES.

No inquest will be held into the murder of Lorenzo Fouci, the fish peddler killed by his rival, Luigi Scaduto, on North avenue last week. Coroner's Physician Westcott, of Fanwood, so informed John P. Owens, counsel for Scaduti, who is held at the county jail, ending his examination before a justice, yesterday.

The facts in the case so far as they relate to the actual killing, are so plain that an inquest is felt to be unnecessary. Counsellor Owens might compel the holding of an inquest if he saw fit, but he is just as well satisfied to have the case go before the Grand Jury as it is, and will make no objection.

No date has been set for Scaduti's preliminary examination. Mr. Owens saw Prosecutor English in regard to it yesterday. The prosecutor said he was holding back the matter until Chief Kiely had completed the chain of evidence on which the State will rest its case. The chief is still working on the evidence, and it is not certain that the examination will be held until next week, although there is a possibility that it will be called by the end of the present week.

For the same reason that is holding back the examination, the recall of the Grand Jury is still undecided. The prosecutor will not advise Justice Fort to bring the jurymen back until he knows where he stands as to the evidence.

For the first time, yesterday, Counsellor Owens said without reserve that Scaduti's defense will be self-defense. He said that he had found a number of witnesses, and was prepared to establish the fact that Fouci was the aggressor and that Scaduti was compelled to wield his knife to save his own life.

"Are you prepared to prove that Fouct made threats against Scaduti's life?" he was asked.

"I am not saying as to that," replied the lawyer "The State will receive some surprises before this thing is over."

Cashier's Vacation.

David M. Runyon, cashier of the First National Bank, started today on a sea voyage to Portland, Me., for the benefit of his health. He will not remain any time and expects to return Friday.

PLAINFIELD TO PLAY SERIES WITH SOMERVILLE

MANAGER DAAB TO ARRANGE GAMES THIS WEEK.

It now looks as though the Somerville fans are in earnest about getting a team together to meet the local organization and there is joy among the lovers of the game here. Somervillians always were good sports and when they came to town last season and cleaned up the Plainfield team by a good-sized score there was more enthusiasm to the square inch that was to be found in whole tests.

Thoughts of a series of games with Somerville brings back to the minds of the Plainfield fans the old rivalry and such contests would revive this interest as nothing else would. Manager Daab expects to meet Bert Conklin, of Somerville, this week, and there is every indication that a series will be arranged.

The Somerville fans always follow their team and back it to the limit and in case games are scheduled for July 4, there will be a great outpouring of people from the county seat and all roads will lead to Plainfield that day or any other day that the teams meet. It is understood that Mr. Conklin has his eye on some of the best material in this part of the country and knowing the strength of Plainfield's team, will come here prepared to turn the trick.

AMES BROOKS READ CLASS DAY POEM

PLAINFIELDER'S PART IN PRINCETON SENIOR'S EXERCISES.

The annual class day of Princeton University opened yesterday at Princeton in a steady rain. Ames Brooks, a son of C. E. Brooks, of Plainfield, took a prominent part in the exercises. The weather did not mar the opening exercises in Alexander Hall, but the ivy planting and the promenade concert on the front campus were hindered. The cannon exercises, usually held in the open air, around the old Revolutionary cannon, were held yesterday afternoon in Alexander Hall.

President Woodrow Wilson began the ceremony by introducing Seaver Jones, of East Orange, the master of ceremonies, from the graduating class. Mr. Jones then introduced James L. Semple, of Philadelphia, who delivered the class oration.

The class poem was read by its author, Ames Brooks, of this city. The class ivy was planted in front of Nassau Hall beneath a marble slab marked "Class of 1905 Ivy." The ivy oration was delivered by Chester Walcott, of Chicago.

DR. GROSSMAN WEDS MISS MARY S. EMMONS

CEREMONY PLANNED FOR JUNE 24 BUT HASTENED BY BRIDE'S ILLNESS.

Though originally planned to take place on June 24, at the bride's home in Washington, D. C., the wedding of Miss Mary S. Emmons to Dr. Maximilian P. Groszmann was privately celebrated last night at the home of the groom's daughter, Mrs. A. J. Steinberger, at Watchung Crest. The bride recently underwent an operation for appendicitis and the after effect left her in a severe nervous condition that made it advisable to hold the ceremony much sooner than was expected. It was very simple and was performed by Rev. Dr. Alfred Moldenke, of New York.

The witnesses included the bride's father, George E .Emmons, of Washington; her sister, Miss Edith W. Emmons; the groom's daughter and his son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Steinberger, and his youngest son, W. H. Groszmann; also, the bride's physician, Dr. William H. Murray; Dr. Nathan Oppenheim, of New York, an old friend of Dr. Groszmann, and Dr. Richard Moldenke, of the Castle.

Mrs. Groszmann is being cared for at Mrs. Steinberger's home, where she will remain until she has fully recovered her strength. She was formerly a member of Dr. Groszmann's teaching corps at Watchung Crest, and is a young woman of much personal charm.

Good Shooting.

Dr. Leonard shot twenty straight targets at the rifle range of the Independent Gun Club yesterday afternoon, at 200 years. The feat was accomplished during practice, but a number of club members and gunning enthusiasts witnessed it.

Upon its final adoption all will be in readiness to begin the work.

The checks of all unsuccessful bidders were ordered returned through a resolution offered by Mr. Wilson.

Adjust Assessments.

It being the desire of the Common Council to affect an adjustment of assessments for benefits and damages in relation to the sanitary work completed during the past year, this work was referred to the commissioners, Robert A. Meeker, J. W. Murray, Jr., and S. P. T. Wilbur, who will take up this work and report later.

The Work Completed.

The sewer work referred to is that executed by Patrick T. Plunkitt and James Maybury & Sons, the contract price being $25,617.00, and that of Stone & Grossart, the contract price being $8,760.

A FOUR-FACED CLOCK

Borough Timepiece May Also Do Night Duty.

A QUESTION OF COST.

Board of Education to Pay $1,078 for the System but Hesitates at Standing for Light.

Following an hour's discussion of plans and suggestions, the borough Board of Education at a special meeting last night, decided to have the proposed clock on the Somerset street building have four faces, so that it can be seen from all sides. Though not talked of before, the members went still further, and now propose to have the dials of glass for illuminating purposes at night, the final decision being left until it can be learned where the cost of maintenance is to be placed. To keep the number of lights necessary in the tower would mean an expense of not more than $128 a year, and the board did not see its way clear to add this to the budget.

The street clock is to be connected with an electric system of twenty-six other clocks, to be located in various parts of the building, the entire cost being $1,078. The mechanism will be operated by electricity and will be so arranged that bells for the different class periods will be rung automatically. At the present time it is done by a boy, who is paid $10 a year to watch the clock and press the buttons at the required moments.

Plans for the system were drawn by a standard concern for Chairman Cooley, of the Building and Grounds committee, and the board had its preference of several styles. It also looked over plans for altering the tower, and concluded the best and cheapest way is to remove the railing now on it and have the clock faces in the open space. The openings not occupied by the dials will be boarded up.

As the illumination at night had been asked for by citizens, the board took the request into consideration, but awaited final action while the borough council is questioned on the light problem. There were members of the board who believed that it could be secured much cheaper than the estimated cost of $128 for eight lights and that it can easily be arranged for.

Several minor matters of importance were transacted at the meeting, among them the ordering of new furniture for the school buildings and the swearing in of Nelson Miller as a member of the board to succeed the late John Valiant.

$7,500 Verdict Set Aside.

Yesterday was opinion day in the Supreme Court in Trenton, and some decisions of interest in Middlesex county were handed down. In the suit of Josephine Fuchs, executor of Joseph A. Fuchs, against the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, the verdict of $7,500 which the plaintiff recovered in that court at Middlesex county last December, was set aside and a new trial ordered.

MISS MARY VAN EPS SUED BY LAWYER

COURT RESERVES DECISION AS TO HER LIABILITY FOR FEES.

A case was tried yesterday before Judge Atwater in the District Court, Elizabeth, in which Clarence Garretson, Esq., of Somerville and New York, was seeking to recover from Miss Mary VanEps, of East Fifth street, this city, $300 as legal fees for work performed for Miss VanEps.

Early in 1904, Mr. Garretson claims that he was employed by Miss VanEps to look up a man against whom she wanted to bring a suit. He says that after spending three months on the case and employing expert witnesses to locate the man, who was evidently in hiding trying to avoid apprehension, Miss VanEps called off the case, and when he rendered a bill for $300 for services, she refused to pay it.

Miss VanEps, through her counsel, S. S. Swackhamer, Esq., contended that according to the agreement Mr. Garretson was not to charge his client anything unless he found the man and obtained judgment against him. The name of the man wanted by Miss VanEps was not given in court, and Judge Atwater reserved decision in the case.

Butchers Sue.

Through Counsellor F. J. Blatz, suit has been brought by Moore & Scheelein, butchers, against M. A. Quaas, on contract, in Justice Mosher's court. The case will be heard on June 21.

HAMILTON IS DROPPED

Police Board Makes Its Report to Common Council.

MAYOR SUPPORTS CHIEF

Mr. Buckle Firm In His Decision Not to Make Appointment Without Mr. Kiely's Approval.

As requested by the Common Council at the June meting, the Police Board, through Mr. Tyler, chairman of the police committee, presented a report at the adjourned meeting held last night on the case of Peter Hamilton, who, through a petition signed by many business men and others, asked for reinstatement to the police force and appointment as a regular patrolman. As stated in The Daily Press on Saturday, the Police Board, together with Chief Kiely, Sergeant Frederickson and Mr. Hamilton, met on Friday night and reviewed the case of the former officer at length. At that time it was decided that Mr. Hamilton would not be taken back on the force, and in the meantime the board prepared a report on the case.

Hamilton Absent.

Much to the surprise of the spectators in the lobby, neither Mr. Hamilton or his counsel, William G. De Meza, Esq., was present at the meeting of the Common Council, it having been intimated that both would be there and that Mr. De Meza would have something to say.

This is the report of the Police Board and it is expected that nothing further will be heard of the matter:

The Board of Police, to whom, at the meeting of the Common Council, on June 5, the petition of William H. Ulmer and others looking to the appointment of Peter Hamilton as a police officer wes refused, report back the petition and show:

Mayor's Power.

That, under the existing laws, the power of appointment of officers of the police force is vested in the mayor of the city, subject to confirmation by the Common Council.

That, early in May it was made known to the Board of Police (which board consists of three members of the police committee of the Common Council, the mayor of the city and the president of the Common Council) that Peter Hamilton, who for about eighteen months had been a special policeman, and during that time ,or most of it, had been assigned to duties as a patrolman, had expressed a desire to be informed whether his appointment as a regular officer was contemplated, and that if such appointment was not contemplated he desired to seek other employment.

Hamilton Not Wanted.

At a meeting of the Board of Police held late in May the question of appointment of Special Officer Hamilton as a regular officer was discussed, and at the request of the mayor the views of the chief and sergeant of police concerning the aptitude, conduct and general qualifications of Mr. Hamilton were sought, and such views were to the effect that the efficiency of the police force would not be increased by such apointment, and the board at that time, in an informal manner and with a view to aiding the mayor in determining whether the appointment would be beneficial, inquired into the grounds upon which the views of the chief and sergeant were founded, and after such injuiry, upon the question coming up whether the board would recommend to the mayor that he appoint Mr. Hamilton as a regular officer, it was determined not to make such recommendation.

Board Unanimous.

After the petition above mentioned had been referred to it, a special meeting of the board was held last Friday night, June 9, at which all the members of the board were present, and also the chief and sergeant of police and Mr. Hamilton. Mr. Hamilton was informed by the chief and the sergeant, respectively, of all the particualrs of his conduct as a special officer during the past eighteen months, which led them to decline that he be appointed to the regular force. After a thorough review of the whole subject at considerable length in Mr. Hamilton's presence, and after hearing Mr. Hamilton's statements in answer to each matter separately, the board again unanimously decided not to appoint Mr. Hamilton to the regular force.

Board's Decision.

The Board of Police is of the opinion that it can and ought to do nothing further in reference to the subject matter of the petition, for the further reason that the power of appointment is vested solely in the mayor, and any action which the Board of Police might take in reference to an appointment would be, at best, advisory only. Furthermore, the Common Council has no juris-

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Children's Day was observed in the Baptist and Presbyterian churches Sunday. The programme at the Presbyterian church, which was presented in the morning, was as follows: Song, school; responsive reading, led by Rev. W. W. Casselberry, pastor; invocation, Mr. Bogardus; chorus, school; address by pastor and infant baptism; chorus, school; exercise, primary class; song, school; recitation, Della Fedderman; solo, Beatrice Cameron; address, Superintendent A. A. Lake; chorus, school; recitation, Laura Todd; chorus, school; duet, Emma Baldwin and Janet Lake; exercise, Bessie Morris, Ruth Schneider, Edna De Hart, Edith Wyckoff, May Day, Edith Hamilton, Geraldine Dunham, Dorothy Cameron, Nellie Vail, Violetta Staples, Florence Voorhees, Irma Baldwin. The infant baptized was Edward Langley Terry, son of W. E. Terry. In the evening Rev. Mr. Casselberry preached a sermon of advice to the graduating class. Three of the seven graduates were present. The Baptist church celebration was held in the evening. The programme included recitations by Emile Nelson, George Nelson, Hannah Nelson, Hazel Piddington, Clifford Nagle, Edith Van Nuis, Josie Mitze, Emily Piddington and Bessie Jacobs, and several exercises, one of which, "The Arch of Fame," was particularly elaborate and striking; twelve girls took part in it, with organ accompaniment. Addresses were made by Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor, and Rev. H. N. Jordan, pastor of the Seventh-day Baptist church. The committee was composed of Mrs. W. J. Nelson, Miss Agnes Woodcock, Miss Cora Dayton. The music was unusually good. Miss Estelle M. Sofield was organist and Mahlon R. Dayton, chorister.

Nothing definite developed from the conference of the Council and Col. Hine over the trolley loop matter Saturday afternoon. The powwow was simply a general discussion of the situation. Rumors that the company is to put its old threat of placing the Y-switch at Jefferson avenue into execution are flying thick again. Not too much stock is to be placed in this, for several reasons, the chief of which is that the shortening of the run will necessitate a change in the schedule; another reason is that the move would discourage home building in Dunellen, which the company doesn't want to do. Mr. Sandford, whose large property would be affected by the location of the terminus in the western end of the borough, is said to have declared that he will make trouble for the company if they locate anywhere but there. He claims the road's title to land over which its track runs near his place is tainted, and that action by him, under his title, would result in ousting them from possession. He says the council gave them permission to run over streets that were not yet dedicated or accepted by the borough.

At the meeting of the C. E. Society Sunday night, Rev. W. W. Casselberry, of the Presbyterian church, emphasized his objection to dancing. "I am glad I got up the petition against the commencement dance," he is said to have declared. "I would stop all dancing in Dunellen, if I could." His stand on dancing has caused a flutter or two among the young people of his church, and, to a certain extent, of the borough, especially among the girls. It is the general impression, however, that the ripple of excitement will die down.

Half of the graduating class of the high school were unable to be present at the Presbyterian church Sunday night to hear Rev. W. W. Casselberry's special sermon, on account of their religion. The four girls are members of the Catholic church, which forbids its followers to enter the houses of worship of all other sects.

On Thursday night of next week the Lincolns, well known lecturers, will deliver one of their noted "Travelogues" on Alaska at the Presbyterian church. Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln are know here and a heavy attendance is expected.

Mrs. Tucker, a New York lecturer, delivered a travel talk at the Presbyterian church last night. The lecture was well attended.

SOMERSET FARMERS HEAR PROF. VOORHEES

"HOW TO GROW WHEAT," SUBJECT OF DISCUSSION.

Farmers from all parts of Somerset county gathered in the court house at Somerville Saturday afternoon to attend the quarterly meeting of the County Board of Agriculture.

The chief attraction was the speech of Prof. E. B. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, on 'How to Grow Wheat." He said he heartily believed that now, when wheat is $1 a bushel ,the farmers should give more time and attention to growing wheat. A great essential is the selection of variety with the idea of getting one that will make the yield larger. The old Mediterranean is the standard variety. For the large, strong grains it is the best. The selection of soil is another feature. Medium clay makes a good wheat soil. The red shale is a clay loam. It is an advantage to have a compact soil, because that gives the wheat plant more of a chance to get a hold before the hard winter comes on. In the preparation of the soil no mistake should be made in having it compact, so the roots can get down below. The speaker said wheat would do better if not seeded with grass.

Rev. Dr. LeFevre offered resolutions of respect touching the death of former Senator John G. Schenck, of Neshanic, an agriculturist of the old school and the father of the President, Judge L. H. Schenck.

TO COMPEL SAFETY DEVICES.

United States Suing Lehigh Valley as Object Lesson to Other Roads.

United States District Attorney John B. Vreeland has begun suit for the government at Trenton to compel the Lehigh Valley Railroad to pay $100 each for four cases of violation of the section of the Inter-State Commerce act referring to hand holds on engines and automatic coupling attachments.

The bill of complaint filed in the United States District Court recites that on February 24 and 25 the Lehigh Valley Company sent an engine from Packerton, Penn., to South Plainfield without the life saving devices. The suit is based on that section of the act which requires railroad companies to equip their engines and cars with life saving and safety devices.

Loud Protest Against Jumping of Rates.

The revolt in the Royal Arcanum over the sudden jump in insurance rates keeps on growing. There is a general suspicion among the members that the new rates were inspired by one of the old-line life insurance companies ,which is scheming to squeeze all the old men out of the Arcanum and then grab what is left of the insurance feature of the order.

De Witt Clinton Council, of Brooklyn, has joined the ranks of other organizations which, under the leadership of Franklin Council, are demanding that the Supreme Council reconvene and reconsider the proposed rates.

Corporation at Bay.

New Brunswick, June 13.—Chas. A. Bloomfield, of Metuchen, is one man in this State who has made a corporation come to his terms. The Lehigh Valley Railroad was granted the right to build its line through the property of the Bloomfields to Perth Amboy several years ago. Later the Central Electric Light Company absorbed the plant at Perth Amboy with that at Metuchen ,and found it necessary to connect the two with an electric line . The company decided to run it along the Lehigh Valley Railroad, but when the work of stringing wires reached the property of Mr. Bloomfield it stopped. He agreed to give the right of way desired under conditions that the company thought unreasonable. The company found the expense would be too great to go any other way, and it finally consented to the terms offered by Mr. Bloomfield. He asked for all the electric lights he might require for twenty years, and now has his home illuminated inside and out, his grounds being ablaze with electricity at night.

Golf Links Damaged.

Orange, June 13.—Police Marshal "Hank" Trenchard, of South Orange, has his best sleuths out hunting certain well known young men who try their skill at cross country riding on the South Orange Field Club golf links. The links have been used as a steeplechase course for the horsemen, the bunkers forming excellent jumps. The links have been damage dby the horses. Chairman Rice, of the golf committee, placed a watch on the links, but was unable to catch the offenders, and has new asked to have the police interfere.

TOO MUCH LIQUOR IN FANWOOD TOWNSHIP

INCREASE OF DRUNKENNESS CAUSES MUCH ALARM.

The residents of the east end of Fanwood township, near Graceland, are indignant over the promiscuous granting of liquor licenses in that section of the township and at a meeting of the township committee on Friday night, Mr. Jackman, a resident from that section, complained of the disgraceful scenes which are witnessed on South avenue and other streets in Graceland every Sunday afternoon and night. He said that drunken people were permitted to remain on the streets in a helpless condition, and the self-respecting part of the community was frequently insulted.

He also said that these same people were allowed to tear down fences and otherwise destroy property, and when the residents remonstrated, they were grossly insulted and invited into the road to fight, and in making a protest he said that he vocied the sentiment of the best element.

The township committee, it is said, is practically powerless in the matter, as the licenses are granted by the courts at Elizabeth. It would be necessary for the residents to obtain evidence and present it to the prosecutor. One year ago there was but one licensed hotel in that end of the township, but now there are three, and at the May term of court a license was granted to the Manhattan Club. This place is within a stone's throw of Galbraith's roadhouse, whose proprietor, Dan. Galbraith, was indicted by the last Grand Jury for keeping a disorderly house, and he will be tried at the present term of court.

Only last fall a license was granted for a place near the park after the courts ha drefused several times to license the place in that neighborhood and after strong remonstrances were presented. The last two licenses granted make a total of eight in Fanwood township, with a population of less than 2,000 people. These do not include the one licensed place in Fanwood borough. The residents are beginning to think it is time that a halt is called on the "free-for-all" method of granting licenses which seems to be in vogue at present.

A special train of high-grade Pullman equipment will leave New York, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Altoona, and Pittsburg on Monday, July 5. Tickets covering round-trip transportation, Pullman accommodations (one berth) going, and all meals in dining car when traveling on special train, will be sold at the following very low rates: New York, $63.50; Philadelphia, $61.75; Baltimore, $60; Washington, $60; Harrisburg, $59.75; Williamsport, $59.75; Altoona, $58.75; and at proportionate rates from other stations.

These tickets will be good for passage to either Denver, Colorado Sprins, or Pueblo, and will be good for return passage on regular trains to leave either of the above-mentioned points not later than July 14. Great Cable System.

It is interesting to note the progress that is being made towards establishing cable connections with the most distant and remote parts of the world and the advances that have been made during the past few years in perfecting and extending the great cable sytems. The Postal Telegraph Cable Company in connection with the Commercial Pacific-Cable Company have just announced that the new cable extension between Guam and Yap and Yap and Menado is now completed and open and that they are ready to accept business for points in Java, Sumatra, Celebes Islands and other Dutch East Indies. An evidence of the quickness of communication by cable was shown yesterday, when a Plainfielder sent a cablegram from the local office to Paris and recived an answer in fifty minutes.

The State's highest court having upheld the constitutionality of the anti-pigeon-shooting law, Jersey justice will now be done to brutes masquerading as "gentlemen" who find sport in slaughter. The Riverton Gun Club is a blot on the State, second only to what the Gloucester race track was before it was legislated out of existence. It is sincerely hoped that the Riverton gang of "gentlemen," hailing from Philadelphia, will find it necessary to dispose of the club house. They are a disgrace to the State.

PREACHED TO PUPILS OF THE HIGH SCHOOL

DR. SNODGRASS WAS LISTENED TO WITH EAGER ATTENTION.

The senior class of the Perth Amboy High School attended the service in Simpson Methodist church Sunday night and listened to a most excellent sermon by Dr. W. C. Snodgrass. The front of the church was beautifully decorated in the class colors, carnation and gold, and a large class pin was placed over the organ.

Dr. Snodgrass took his text from Esther 6:12. The main thought of his sermon was that we should think less of the trials and experiences of life, and more of what is left of us after we have gone through those trials. He pleaded strongly for an education and congratulated the class for the great success they have attained.—Perth Amboy Chronicle.

JUDGMENTS IN CHILD LABOR ACT CASES OFF

SUPREME COURT SETS ASIDE TWO NEWARK VERDICTS.

Trenton, June 13.—The Supreme Court set aside yesterday the two judgments for $50 each recovered before Judge Lintott in the district court of Newark against Anton F. Dieterle and Johnson & Murphy for the employment of children under fourteen years of age. The suits were brought by the attorney-general in the name of Lewis T. Bryant as factory inspector.

The judgments were reserved on the ground that the state of demand failed to set forth the act under which the penalty was demanded. As originally drawn by the attorney-general's office, the demand did set forth the act, but Judge Lintott held that this was improper, and to avoid a non-suit the demand was amended. The amendment under the decision of the Supreme Court was fatal. The decision in no way affects the validity of the factory act.

No Hope for Cordova.

Trenton, June 13.—Prosecutor Berdine yesterday moved before the Supreme Court for the dismissal of the writ of error taken out in the conviction of J. Frank Cordova on the ground of want of due prosecution of the writ. Lawyer Cook took out the writ immediately after Cordova's conviction. The writ was dismissed. This settles the efforts to get the former minister out of prison and he will have to serve his full term unless the court of pardons steps in and grants a pardon.

Christianizing Cadets.

F. H. Andrews, one of the central committeemen of the Y. M. C. A. chapel's Sunday-school, delivered an address on Y. M. C. A. work at the military and naval academies at West Point and Annapolis, before the Trinity church Christian Endeavor Society last night. Mr. Andrews has been engaged in the work since 1902 and has made several addresses to the cadets. His talk was very interesting. A good-sized attendance was present.

Boys' Club Entertainment.

The third entertainment under the auspices of the Boys' Club will be held at Hope chapel on Friday night, at 8 o'clock. The programme will include "A Trip to Wonderland," by Hal Merton, magician.

PEACE TERMS AT HAGUE

Cassini in Conference With President Learns Japan's News.

NO HITCH LIKELY

Geneva Mentioned, but Czar Prefers Hague as Place for Peace Conference.

Washington, D. C., June 13.—Count Cassini called at the White House last night by appointment to discuss with the President the selection of a place for the peace conference. This subject had been discussed by the President in his conference with the Japanese Minister during the afternoon. Count Cassini learned from the President last night Japan's view about this, and also asto the number of plenipotentiaries.

On one point Count Cassini and Mr. Takahira are agreed, and that is the undesirability of Washington for a mid-summer conference. What else was talked about at the conference is not known, Count Cassini not feeling at liberty to discuss his visit in any particular.

It is understood in a high official quarter here that Marquis Ito, Baron Komura, Minister for Foreign Affairs, and Gen. Yamagata, Chief of Staff, are the three under consideration by the Emperor as plenipotentiaries, and that the inclination of the belligerents is that each select two plenipotentiaries . M. Nelidoff is understood to have been tentatively selected by Russia, and it is suggested as possible that he may be assisted by Baron Rosen, though this lacks official confirmation.

Elimination of Washington as the probable choice of the belligerents for their place of peacemaking would not preclude the selection of an American city. Japan does not wish Paris, and Russia is unfavorable to Mukden or Chefoo. Both are opposed to Washington for climatic reasons, though neither would oppose the selection of an American watering place, and among those already mentioned are Newport and Manchester-by-the-Sea.

Of the places under consideration in Europe, it is said, Russia might accept The Hague. Geneva is also considered, and it would not be objectionable to Japan. A long conference with the Russian Embassy yesterday afternoon between Mr. Van Swinderin, the Netherlands Minister, and Count Cassini, strengthened the belief that Russia was seriously considering the selection of The Hague for the scene of the negotiations.

In addition to his information to the President, Count Cassini permitted an official statement to go forth from the Russian Embassy that Russia's representatives would be plenipotentiaries with the same powers as are given by the Mikado to his own envoys.

It can be stated authoritatively that nothing but news favorable to peace has come officially to Count Cassini from his Government for a week. The rumors to the contrary have been mistaken and misleading. There has been no hitch anywhere in the negotiations since the Kaiser, acting on the request of Baron Speck von Sternburg in accordance with the President's request, assured the Czar of America's entire impartiality.

Mr. Miller in the School Board.

Nelson A. Miller, who was elected a member of the North Plainfield Board of Education to succeed the late John Valiant, took the oath of office, last night, and occupied his seat for the first time at the special meeing. Mr. Miller has been a close observer of school matters and by his manner indicated that he will become a valued member of the board.

Presbytery to Meet.

The Presbytery of Elizabeth will meet in the chapel of the Third church, Elizabeth, on Monday morning, June 19, at 10:30 o'clock, for the purpose of acting upon a request of the Rev. Dr. George Hubbard Payson, for a certificate of dismission to the Classis of Paramus, Reformed Church of America.

diction of the matter at the present time. If the appointment of Mr. Hamilton had been made by the mayor and a petition in his favor addressed to the Common Council, it might perhaps have been pertinent as a guide to the Council in determining whether such appointment should be confirmed, but in the absence of such appointment by the mayor, the Board of Police is of opinion that the Common Council could not properly take any action in the matter.

In view of the fact that the mayor has now stated to the Board of Police that he would not appoint Mr. Hamilton as a regular member of the police force without the approval of the chief of police, even though he were recommended by the board, it would seem that further action on the part of the board, or even of the Council, would be gratuitous.

JERSEY CENTRAL MAY ABSORB N. J. AND P.R.R.

VISIT OF OFFICIALS TO MORRIS COUNTY RAILROAD GIVES RISE TO A REPORT,

It is believed that the visit of President George F. Baer, of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad system, with a large delegation of New Jersey Central Railroad officials, including W. G. Besler, of this city, vice president and general manager; C. W. Huntington, general superintendent; E. E. Kirwin, superintendent; C. M. Burt, of this city, general passenger agent; J. A. Taylor, general auditor; William McIntosh, of this city, superintendent of motive power; J. O. Osgood, of this city, chief of engineers, and J. E. McNulty, assistant trainmaster, to Mendham, N. J., of the country, means that there is a deal on by which the New Jersey Central Railroad will absorb the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Railroad, which runs from Whitehouse station to Morristown.

These officials, accompanied by Superintendent Peter Latourette, of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania, made a trip over the latter road in the private cars Atlas and Central. This tour of inspection has been considered an unusual proceeding.

A report was circulated some months ago that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company had acquired control of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and that it would connect it with the Flemington branch by building an extension from Whitehouse station to Flemington. This rumor seems to have ben premature.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Heir to the Hoorah" at the Hudson is now the only survivor of the "straight" plays of the season, and it is to continue indefinitely there, with the cooling plant in working order. The play is entertaining in its contrasts of western and eastern ways and humor, the baby healing the family quarrel is a pretty bit of sentiment, and the company is good. From the start the show was a success and there has been no dimunition in the size of the audiences on each successive night. Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays.

There have been improvements since last summer in the glass inclosed theatre on the roof of the New Amsterdam. It is brightly lighted and prettily decorated now, and the balcony has been rebuilt so that the lines of sight are better and the seats more roomy. This summer the show is as good as the house. It begins with a "Gilbert and Sullivan review," a medley of characters ,songs and incdients from "The Mikado," "Iolanthe," "Patience," "The Pirates of Penzance," and "Pinafore." Nobody has forgotten them, and the pleasure that they gave. Only the youngest do not know them, and it will be good for them to learn. Then comes a very local extravaganza, "Lifting the Lid." McNally—and probably the players and the stage manager—made the dialogue, and Jerome and Schwartz the rhymes and tunes. The scenes are Longacre Square, Columbus Circle, Field's Theatre, and Sherry's. Among the "characters" are Commissioner McAdoo, Mr. Jerome, Hammerstein, Lawson, "Honest" John Kelly, and other local celebrities thinly disguised.

The Best Medium.

A Philadelphia merchant who spends hundreds of thousands of dollars every year for advertising was asked the other day what newspaper he considered the best medium through which to reach the public. His answer was unhesitatingly "The Philadelphia Record." Then he went on to say: "I have used 'The Reocrd' for years—in fact, ever since I have been advertising, and I find that it brings me the best results. It isn't necessary to experiment with 'The Record.' The experienced business man realizes that the money he spends to reach the readers of that paper is money well invested. 'The Record' is read thoroughly. A great many people ,men especially, make a practice of buying several newspapers during the course of a day. They glance over the pages casually to see if there is anything of particular interest, and then throw them aside. But I have come to the conclusion from long observance that 'The Record' is the paper that is read thoroughly from beginning to end." The Philadelphia merchant was undoubtedly right. There is no disputing the fact that "The Record" is the most popular paper in Philadelphia, and its influence throughout the surrounding country is evidenced by its claim to the largest circulaiton of any newspaper published in the State of Pennsylvania, a claim that is without doubt based upon actual figures. Nor is this strange, considering its merits. It is in every sense of the term a family paper—clean, wholesome, bright, entertaining, a welcome visitor to the home circle. The growth of "The Record" is a gratifying tribute to the integrity of its methods. It is always fair and above board; it has nothing to conceal, and it is in every respect a model newspaper. More power to it!

Charles B. Morse, of Franklin place, has recovered from an attack of tonsilitis.

HOT WEATHER GOWNS.

Costumes, Parasols and Millinery For the Summer Days.

I have a young friend who spends her summers in a small country hotel, and during four consecutive seasons she worked steadily and hard to make herself a lace dress, all to be wrought on a surface of batiste. When it was completed that particular style had been put into that strange place where all old fashions are stored and no one knoweth where. All that beautiful work went for nothing, for now lace gowns are not in the swim—that is, if you go to buy a gown which shall be a thing of beauty and a joy until one's rival comes out with a prettier one. Now, instead of the graceful sweep of a plain skirt overlaid with lace the skirts are flounced and plaited and treated in such a manner as to require from ten to twenty-five yards of material. Is that a forerunner of the crinoline that certain manufacturers have been trying to force women to wear for many past seasons? It may be.

Well, to return to lace dresses. If there are few gowns all of duchess lace or Limerick or Cluny or Irish crochet, there are many pretty light laces set on the edges of the flounces and on all places where it can be put and deep cuffs, yokes and insets, and sometimes one may find lace inset in the skirt if the material is suitable. No matter where lace is put, it is pretty and an ornament. The parasols are light and gracefully trimmed with lace put on in many fanciful ways. One, for instance, had the body of the parasol made of closely shirred pink chiffon, with a regular fluff at the point, then a row of black silk guipure lace, with three little tabs of black velvet fastened so that they would fall on each rib from the black line, then another row of shirring and a full ruffle of chiffon, with a row of fine valenciennes half an inch wide set on straight. The handle was of ivory, with inset pieces of fine Whitby jet. This parasol cost $75. A young girl who saw it with me went home and covered her white parosol with pink chiffon in exactly the same way, and it was every bit as fine, only hers had a coral handle. But who was to know that the original was of carved ivory and jet?

The majority of parasols are plainer this season, although there are many of the fluffy kind for summer days and pretty toilets when there is no rain. One pretty plain silk one had little tabs of black lace half an inch wide beginning from under the edge and extending part way up the body. More pieces are laid at the point so that they are like a star. A dainty little bow of pink ribbon is at the handle, and that reminds me that all the summer parasols have bows of ribbon at the handle. Some very unusual parasols are made of brocaded silk, with a full ruching of white chiffon along the edges. Others seem to have had a special design woven for them in the factories, for the edges show a fancy stripe that otherwise could not have been brought there. Pink, apple, green mauve and soft old rose in many shades are seen, and so is deep ox blood red. Blue I have not yet beheld. It would be an anomaly.

Among the lovely fancies in lace for the adornment of summer dresses are the circular lace berthas. They are about four inches deep and three feet long, but are curved like a flat collar.

For summer afternoons there is no end to the light and lovely stuffs, but of them all veilings and eolienne are the best, while the rich and useful mohairs are a close second. In the illustration is a soft tan veiling, with a vest front of white cut embroidery, now so popular, and a bias band two shades darker around the skirt above the flounce and along the front of the tucked blouse and sleeves, with their cuffs of the cut work. A hat such as Captain Marryat describes in one of his once popular novels is wide of brim and bound around the crown with blue and white ribbon, and a crush belt of the same is brought to a sharp point, though some folks predicted that there would be no pointed belts this season.

A mohair suit for a young lady is in a pale, frosty blue, the skirt entirely plain save for the perfection of the finish. The waist is in sailor style, with white silk castle braid on the collar. The V is of tucked white linen, and it is high, like a stock. The sleeves are cut square, but tucked into shape nearly to the elbow.

The hat is of blue chip of the exact shade of the mohair and is trimmed with a piece of silk mull, with cut out work. This falls over the brim in the back like a long plume. This silk mull can be washed if soiled. To wash it lay it in well soaped water awhile, then clap it between the hands till dry and iron.

OLIVE HARPER.

[Copyright, 1899, by F. Tennyson Neely.]

"No, sir. He hurt them—one of 'em, at least, before he'd surrender when they nabbed him in town. This time he submitted all right—said he only ran in for a glass of beer, and was laughing-like when I got there."

"Very well. That'll do. Go on, driver. We haven't a minute to lose if we are to see the review," he continued, as he stepped lightly to his seat. "I saw nothing of this affair," said Miss Prime. "What was it all about?"

"Nor could I see," added her father. "I heard shouts and after we passed saw the guard, but no fugitive."

"It is just as well—indeed, I'm glad you didn't, uncle," answered Miss Lawrence, turning even as she spoke and gazing wistfully back. "He looked so young, and seemed so desperate, and had such a—I don't know—hunted look on his face—poor fellow."

And then the carriage reached the entrance to the reservation and the subject, and the second object of Miss Lawrence's sympathies evoked that day, were for the time forgotten. Possibly Mrs. Garrison was partly responsible for this, for hardly had they rounded the bend in the road that brought them in full view, from the left, or southern flank, of the long line of masses in which the brigade was formed, than there came cantering up to them, all gay good humor, all smiles and saucy coquetry, their hostess of the evening at the general's tent. She was mounted on a sorry-looking horse, but the "habit" was a triumph of art, and it well became her petite, rounded figure.

No one who really analyzed Mrs. Frank Garrison's features could say that she was a pretty woman. No one who looked merely at the general effect when she was out for conquest could deny it. Col. Armstrong, placidly observant as usual, was quick to note the glances that shot between the cousins on the rear seat as the little lady came blithely alongside. He knew her, and saw that they were beginning to be as wise as he, for the smiles with which they greeted her were but wintry reflections of those that beamed upon her radiant face. Prime, paterfamilias, bent cordially forward in welcome, but her quick eyes had recognized the fourth occupant by this time, and there was a little less of assurance in her manner from that instant.

"How perfectly delicious!" she cried. "I feared from what you said yesterday you weren't coming, and so I never ordered the carriage, but came out in saddle—I can't stay on horseback with such a wreck as this, but every decent horse in the Presidio had to go out with the generals and staffs, you know, and I had to take what I could get—both horse and escort," she added, in a confidential tone. "Oh!—May I present Mr. Ellis? He knows you all by name already." (The youth in attendance and a McClellan tree two sizes too big for him, lifted his cap and strove to smile; he had ridden nothing harder than a park back before that day). "Frank says I talk of nothing else. But where's Mr. Gray? Surely I thought he would be with you." This for Armstrong's benefit in case he were in the least interested in either damsel.

"Mr. Gray was detained by some duties in camp," explained Miss Prime, with just a trace of reserve that was lost upon neither their new companion nor the colonel. It settled a matter the placid officer was revolving in his mind.

"Pardon us, Mrs. Garrison," he said, briefly. "We must hurry. Go on, driver."

"Oh, I can keep up," was the indomitable answer, "even on this creature." And Mrs. Garrison proved her words by whipping her steed into a lunging canter, and, sitting him admirably, rode gallantly alongside, and just where Mr. Prime could not but see and admire, since Col. Armstrong would not look at all. He had entered into an explanation of the ceremony by that time well under way, and Miss Lawrence's great soft brown eyes were fixed upon him attentively when, perhaps, she should have been gazing at the maneuvers. Like those latter, possibly, her thoughts were changing direction.

Not ten minutes later occurred the collision between the hack and the heels that resulted in the demolition of one and "demoralization" of the rider of the victor. While the latter was led away by the obedient Mr. Ellis lest the sight of him should bring on another nervous attack, Mrs. Garrison was suffering herself to be comforted. Her nerves were gone, but she had not lost her head. Lots of Presidio dames and damsels were up on the heights that day in such vehicles as the post afforded. None appeared in anything so stylish and elegant as the carriage of the Prime party. She was a new and comparative stranger there, and it would vastly enhance her social prestige, she argued, to be seen in such "swell" surroundings. With a little tact and management she might even arrange matters so that, willy nilly, her friends would drive her thither instead of taking Col. Armstrong back to camp. That would be a stroke worth playing. She owed Stanley Armstrong a bitter grudge, and had nursed it long. She had known him ten years and hated him nine of them. Where they met and when it really matters not. In the army people meet and part in a hundred places when they never expected to meet again. She had married Frank Garrison in a hand gallop, said the garrison chronicles, "before she had known him two months," said the men, "before he knew her at all," said the women. She was four years his senior, if the chaplain could be believed, and five months his junior if she could. Whatever might have been the discrepancy in their ages at the time of the ceremony no one would suspect the truth who saw them now. It was he who looked aged and careworn and harassed, and she who preserved her youthful bloom and vivacity.

And now, as she reclined as though still too weak and shaken to leave the carriage and return to saddle, her quick wits were planning the scheme that should result in her retaining, and his losing, the coveted seat. There was little time to lose. Most of the crowd had scattered, and she well knew that he was only waiting for her to leave before he would return. Almost at the instant her opportunity came. A covered wagon reined suddenly alongside and kind and sympathetic voices hailed her: "Do let us drive you home, Mrs. Garrison; you must have been terribly shaken." She recognized at once the wife and daughter of a prominent officer of the post.

"Oh, how kind you are," she cried. "I was hoping some one would come. Indeed, I did get a little wrench." And then, as she moved, with a sudden gasp of pain, she clasped Miss Lawrence's extended hand.

"Indeed, you must not move, Mrs. Garrison," said that young lady. "We will drive you home at once." Miss Prime and her father were adding their pleas. She looked up, smiling faintly.

"We will drive you home at once."

"I fear I must trouble you," she faltered. "Oh, how stupid of me! But about Stanley Armstrong—I haven't even thanked him. Ah, well—he knows. We've been—such good friends for years—dear old fellow!"

JOURNALISTIC OPINION.

Jersey Roads the Model.

Ohio's State Road Commissioner has been visiting New Jersey, and like all others who are honestly looking for a good system of road improvement, he has declared this State's to be the best, and the Jersey roads will form the model for the projected new roads in the Buckeye State.—Elizabeth Journal.

Should Have Taken the Whole Girl.

Three years ago a Jersey City girl got $15,000 for her heart. Yesterday she got $5,000 for her nose from same fellow. This proves expensive. Had he married her, the assault would have come to $5 and any justice will tie the knot for $1.—Paterson Guardian.

Applies to All Dogs.

Most people construe the law in reference to dogs running at large as covering only hounds or hunting dogs. As a matter of fact the law says: "all dogs," and under that provision it is unlawful to have any dog of any kind, size or breed, running at large through the street. Those who are annoyed by the animals have their remedy in the law.—Sussex Register.

Spirit of 1776 Still Lives.

Elizabeth has had dark days since the trying times of the war periods mentioned, but the ancestors of the men who defeated the country's enemies and overcame the problems of foundation building have shown the same spirit of patriotism, sacrifice and adherence to right, with the result that misfortune has been heroically met, adversity overcome, and the highway of progress rapidly traveled.—Elizabeth Journal.

"Jersey End" to Norway-Sweden Imbroglio.

Of course there is a "Jersey end" to every story. Take the international incident of the dissolution of the relations between Sweden and Norway. It was the Swedish settlers along the Delaware, whose descendants founded Swedesboro, that paved the way for the English under Penn. And from what we can understand the Swedes of today and the sturdy old fellows who came over here to carve out a colony on the Zuydt Riviere had national traits in common.

The Wonder of It.

Legitimate business being a little quiet in the newspaper line in the southern part of the State, the correspondents have turned their attention to manufacturing snake stories and the quality of some of those that come up from that section is equal to those that drift in from Monmouth and Hunterdon counties where the finest grade of applejack that ever cured a tooth ache, is made. One of these raconteurs tells of a snake in the outskirts of Camden, that stole twenty-four eggs laid by a full grown hen in twenty-four days. It was a black snake and the wonder is that after swallowing the whites of two dozen eggs, it didn't look pale at least.—Trenton State Gazette.

Quicker Than Stokes.

Governor Higgins, of New York, began much later than Governor Stokes to handle the left-over legislative bills, and he has completed the job. No less than 760 bills were enacted into laws. More than a hundred were permitted by the Governor to die. The assurance is given by Governor Higgins that no vicious bill has been signed. It is due to him also that some vicious bills never got as far as the executive chamber. They died when he signified his purpose to veto them if passed. In New York a two-thirds vote of both Houses of the Legislature is necessary to pass a bill over the executive veto, and that prerogative makes the Governor the master in State legislation. The power has been well used by Governors Roosevelt, Odell and Higgins with splendid results for the State.—Newark Advertiser.

The State's Oldest Newspaper.

In commenting upon the celebration of the 125th anniversary of the battle of Elizabethtown, observed last Thursday, the Elizabeth Journal refers with pardonable pride to the fact that the first number of the Journal was issued on February 16, 1779, more than a year before the historic engagement, and that it is consequently one of the oldest newspapers in the United States. Its founder, Sheppard Kollock, was a patriot soldier who was induced by the leaders of the cause of liberty to put aside his sword that he might use his pen in defence of the colonies. The early history and vicissitudes of the Journal, if set forth at length, would doubtless make interesting reading. It seems to have shared the fortunes of the Continental army in East Jersey and its diminutive plant was carted from place to place to escape capture, but never far from Elizabeth, where it became permanently established at the close of the Revolution and has since remained, a beacon in the community and a benefit to the State. This is a notable anniversary for our esteemed contemporary as well as for Elizabethtown.—Camden Post-Tele-

Alleged Kidnapper in Contempt.

Mrs. Louis Vedder Collins, of Caldwell, N. J., has been ordered by Vice-Chancellor John R. Emery to appear before him on Thursday to show cause why she should not be adjudged kidnapping, on May 24 last, of Elsie Louise Livingston, her twelve-year-old daughter by her first husband.

AT MARCONNIER.

Children's Day Exercises Held at the Chapel.

Interesting Children's Day exercises were held at Marconnier chapel, Sunday afternoon, under the auspices of the Sunday-school. A new feature was a cross of flowers, composed of twenty-seven bunches of flowers, placed so as to form the cross by as many little children. The flowers were afterward sent to St. Luke's Hospital, New York city. The chapel was otherwise attractively decorated with flowers. Mrs. J. W. Schenck, superintendent, was in charge.

A. C. Beckstein, a friend of the chapel, was present, and made a few appropriate remarks to the children. There was also special music. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Young sang a solo and members of Trinity Reformed church choir were present and assisted in the singing. The chapel was filled with members and friends and the exercises were greatly enjoyed by all.

Miss Laura Vanderbeck, of Hunterdon county, has been visiting at the home of Mrs. D. M. Van Vliet, of Washington avenue.

FANWOOD BRIDE FOR A WESTFIELD MAN

MISS MARY C. HENRY IS NOW MRS. J. C. TITUS.

At the home of the bride, on Martine avenue, Fanwood, Miss Mary Catharine Henry, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Henry, and Jonathan Clawson Titus, of Westfield, were married yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The house was beautifully decorated with daisies and oak leaves.

Rev. Mr. Greenwood, of the First Baptist church of Westfield, pastor of the groom, performed the ceremony. Miss Mary Titus, sister of the groom, played the wedding march from Lohengrin. The bride and groom were unattended. She was dressed in a blue silk traveling suit. Only the relatives and a few friends were present.

Following the ceremony a collation was served and the couple received the congratulations and best wishes of their friends. They received many presents. The groom's gift to the bride was a chest of silver.

Mr. and Mrs. Titus left for a two weeks' trip to Niagara Falls and Washington. Upon their return they will reside in Brooklyn, where the groom holds a responsible position in the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

PIGEON ACT HELD VALID

State's Supreme Tribunal's Decision Announced.

SOUNDS DEATH KNELL

Upsets Riverton Gun Club's Appeal — Opinion Written by Justice Fort.

Trenton, June 13—By a decision of the Supreme Court, announced yesterday, the Bacheller anti-pigeon shooting act was sustained. The act prohibits the shooting of live pigeons from traps.

The law was passed at a special session of the Legislature, held April 12, 1904. This session was called in response to a general public sentiment, the regular session having failed to pass the bill. There was great opposition to the bill by the members of the many gun clubs of the State, and shortly after the bill was passed the Riverton Gun Club of Burlington County decided to test the law.

Test Shoot September 30, 1904.

The test shoot was held by the club on its grounds September 30 last. The shooting was done by Rudolph F. Harned, of Merchantville, and Charles W. Davis, of the Colonnade Hotel, Philadelphia, in the presence of Constable Anderson Shinn, of Burlington, who represented Prosecutor Atkinson, of Burlington County, and Policeman J. J. Tomes, of Palmyra, who was there as a witness. Harned missed his bird, but Davis killed his. Both the kil and miss were made so that all phases of the act might be tested. Davis and Harned were at once arrested, bailed, and on October 20 last convicted by a jury in the Quarter Sessions Court at M. Holly, Judge Gaskil presiding. On the defendants were imposed the full penalty provided by the act.

History of Case.

A writ of error was taken, and the case carried to the Supreme Court.

The cases were argued on February 21 last, before Chief Justice Gummere and Justices Fort and Garretson, by Sherrerd Depue and Samuel Kalisch, both of Newark, and Samuel Pennington Rotan, the latter of the Pennsylvania bar, for the plaintiffs; Samuel A. Atkinson, Theodore Backes and Attorney-General Robert H. McCarter appeared for the State.

Justice Fort wrote the opinions announced yesterday, both being concurred in by Chief Justice Gummere and Justice Garretson.

The first opinion refers to Davis's case. It was read by Justice Fort, who said that the Harned case was decided on the same grounds.

Gun Club's Property.

The Riverton Gun Club property is worth about $30,00 and is one of the finest in South Jersey. At the time the test shoot took place Mr. Depue, of counsel for the club, said that the test was not made in a spirit of defiance of the law, but simply and solely in order that the question of its constitutionality might be finally determined.

The club, it was explained, had a large investment, whihc was adversely affected by the anti-pigeon shooting law, but if the law should be adjudged to be constitutional the club would abide by the decision without further demur.

The opinion said in part:

It is not a curtailment of the right of property to prevent a person from using his animals or fowls as a target, whether to be shot at for amusement or as a test of skill in marksmanship.

Under the police power, the legislature may prescribe how animals may be killed by their owner, in order that they may be used for food. They may fix by statute the times, places and manner for such killing. By limiting the method or prescribing the manner of killing, they do not infringe upon the rights of property of the owner.

At the time the test shooting took place at the Riverton Gun Club, counsel for the club said that the test was not made to defy the law, but solely to settle the constitutionality of the act.

LAST MEETING.

Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary Suspends for the Summer—Expects Visitors.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. held its last meeting of the season yesterday. Activities will be suspended now until the second Monday in October.

Four new members were elected, making the total membership 241. The auxiliary is still the largest in the State. It is paying for all repair work on the Y. M. C. A. building, from the fund established by the fair and sale held last fall.

Wednesday afternoon a delegation of forty or more women from the Port Richmond, S. I., auxiliary are to visit the association here, and a committee from the local auxiliary will meet and welcome them.

CELEBRATION OF THE 4TH IN NEW MARKET

OLD FASHIONED OBSERVANTS PLANNED BY JR. O. U. A. M., OF VILLAGE.

New Market will recall the old-fashioned Independence Day celebration on the coming Fourth. Under the auspices of Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., the little village, after which one of the hottest running fights of the Revolutionary War has been named, will mark the day with a spread-eagle observance that is calculated to make the Hon squirm and jolt the Anglo-American entente heavily.

Until several years ago it was customary for the New Market Juniors to hold a lively Fourth of July celebration, and the memory of the events is still green in this vicinity. At a meeting last night, the council unanimously decided to revive the custom, and a committee was appointed to make all arrangements. Frank Randolph, Harry Piddington and Charles Day were put on the committee. They have $70 as the nucleus of a celebration fund.

The celebration will be held in Vail's Grove, on the property of F. P. Vail, on the bank of New Market pond. Other Junior O. U. A. M. councils in this city and vicinity will be invited to join in the observance, and a great time is expected.

It will be an all-day affair, with all sorts of contests, land and aquatic, besides speaking by local and distinguished orators. Prizes will be offered in the athletic events.

OUTDOOR ATHLETIC FIELD FOR Y. M. C. A.

YARD BACK OF ASSOCIATION BUILDING TO BE ENCLOSED.

Arrangements have been completed for conducting outdoor athletics at the Y. M. C. A. this summer. The yard back of the association building, formerly devoted to tennis, will be fitted up for the purpose. The tennis courts have been transferred to lots on Westervelt avenue.

The yard is to be enclosed and facilities for basketball, handball and other sports to which space may be applied will be installed.

Estimates on the work of enclosing the grounds have been secured by Physical Director Henckel, and the new field will be open to the members in a day or two.

The new feature of Y. M. C. A. sports is certain to be popular with the members, and tend much to keep the gymnasium membership together during the warm weather to a greater extent than heretofore. Basketball and handball tournaments will probably be organized.

SUCCESSFUL SEASON OF HIGH SCHOOL A. A.

PRINCIPAL TRAVELL CONGRATULATES THE ORGANIZATION.

After one of the most successful all-round athletic seasons, the remainder of the business in the Plainfield High School Athletic Association was completed this morning. Howard Craig presided at the assembly. Harry Thompson, secretary and treasurer of the Athletic Association, first read the minutes of the two previous meetings, which were accepted.

The treasurer's report was read. It showed a balance of $21.19. I. W. Travell, principal of the school, spoke of the determined effort of the football team ins pite of many reverses, the good showing in basketball, the championship form in gymnastics and finally the unequalled success of the baseball team. Mr. Travell said that in his opinion, four fellows stand out prominently as leaders of the team and most athletic work.

In the first place Howard Craig was commended for his management of the athletic association and laso for his splendid work on the field. Thompson's captainship called forth applause. Lapsley's management of the team, starting with debt and ending with a balance on hand, seemed remarkable, while Mr. Best, faculty director, was encored again and again.

"Three Men in a Boat."

In their effrots to land an immense snapping turtle that hooked on to one of their catfish lines at New Market, last night, J. H. Staats, George Voehl and Fred Sandford took an impromptu bath in the upper lake. All three anglers were seated in a boat when the snapper anchored to a line and started away. In the hurry to head him off or make him captive the boat went over. The turtle was caught, however, and is now a prisoner in a barrel at the Kensington hotel.

WOMAN GOES TO JAIL FOR A HUNDRED DAYS

MRS. JULIA SAUERARKER HEAVILY PUNISHED FOR ATTACKING OFFICER MYERS.

Charged with drunkenness and disorder and resisting arrest, Mrs. Julia Suaeracker, of East Fourth street, was arraigned before Judge Runyon in the city court this morning. After hearing the tale of Officer Myers, who arrested her, the magistrate sent Mrs. Saueracker to jail for 100 days—fifty days straight with a fine of $50 attached.

A man named Beck, in whose house the Saueracker, husband and wife, live, called the cop in shortly after 9 o'clock last night. The officer told the judge that he found Mrs. Saueracker in the midst of a drunken outburst. According to Myers, she refused to quiet down when he admonished her, and went at him hammer and tongs when he placed her under arrest. She armed herself with a chunk of iron, and when Myers took that away from her she clawed him like a wildcat. He was compelled to send for the patrol wagon, and even with Driver O'Gorman's assistance he had a tough job getting her into the hurry-up rig and to the station house.

After the hearing was over and the woman had been committed, her husband came to Chief Kiely with a story to the effect that Beck had pummeled and kicked his wife brutally before calling the officer. He was told to make a complaint if he had witnesses to the alleged assault.

FUTSEY CADETTS CAUGHT RUNNING A "SPEAK-EASY"

COSTS HIM $27 TO ESCAPE THE BOROUGH JAIL.

Arrested by Chief Marshal Weiss on a charge of selling liquor on the "speak-easy" plan, Futsey Cadetts, who keeps a tailoring shop near the Somerset street bridge, was fined $20 and given seven days in the borough jial, by Recorder Doud, last night. He paid the fine and this morning produced another $7 for the days, and was let go. The evidence against him was secured through Frazee Connett, who was arrested Sunday, nad who said he had procured liquor in Cadetts' place.

Elmer Ackor and John Underhill, who were caught riding bicycles on the sidewalk on upper Somerset street, were fined $3 each.

Wants Board Bill Paid.

Jeremiah F. Burns, a North Plainfield hotel keeper, has sued William Lutton, of Jersey City, in the district court, in that city, on contract. The hotel man claims that Lutton, who is a contracting plumber, boarded a gang of hotel men at his hotel several months ago while executing a contract here, and has never settled the bill. F. J. Blatz is Burns' counsel.

They Call Him "Togo."

William Jeffery, the Park avenue real estate man, is the possessor of a thoroughbred Japanese spaniel, one of the prettiest of its kind seen in the city. It was presented him by H. A. Todd, who purchased it in New York a short time ago. Of course, his name is "Togo."

ALEX KANE WINS.

His Judgment Against Filmore Baptist Church Sustained.

Another decision was rendered yesterday in the case of the Filmore Baptist church against Alexander Kane, which is a continuation of much trouble between these parties begun some time ago. In the Supreme Court at Trenton Judge Swayze gave a decision in favor of Mr. Kane, maintaining that he did not enter judgment prematurely in his action against the church, as claimed by the congregation through their counsel, W. S. Angleman, Esq.

The plaintiff claims that Mr. Kane had no right to enter a judgment when he did ,inasmuch as the congregation had paid money in advance to him. The contention is purely one of statutory construction and Judge Swayze decided that Mr. Kane did not enter judgment prematurely.

It is the intention of Mr. Angleman to take the case to the Court of Errors and Appeals and it will be argued at the November term of court.

Mr. Kane, it will be remembered, dispossessed the congregation from property owned by him, being assisted in his efforts by deputies from the office of Sheriff Coriell. At the time nothing was said about money being paid in advance to hold the property, and Kane denies the claim of the plaintiff regarding the advance money.

MUST MOVE FAT FACTORY

Alton Citizens Give Glazier Until July 1 to Get Out.

THREATEN INJUNCTION.

Plan to Locate at South Plainfield Opposed by Citizens of That Place.

A temporary suspension of hostilities has been declared in the war the residents of Alton have been waging for the extermination of Glazier's fat-rending factory, which has been doing business at Alton for several years. The truce is only a temporary one, however, and expires July 1, unless Glazier moves the bone of contention to some other place. He is meeting with opposition, however, for no one wants this kind of an industry. The residents' war has been a strenuous one and has been the means of stirring up a factional feeling between the friends of Glazier and his opponents.

Two years ago the Board of Health of Fanwood Township was asked to declare the place a nuisance and menace to public health, and an investigation was made. But after the board demanded certain improvements it allowed the nuisance to continue. Later the residents placed the matter before the State Board of Health. An official visited the scene, but nothing was done. According to friends of Glazier, he reported that he could not discover any nuisance or that the fat factory was a menace to health. In consequence the State board refused to take any action.

On the other hand, those who had been petitioning to have the factory closed, declared that the representative of the board called on a convenient day, when the wind was right and other conditions favorable to carrying off the stench of fat and other materials used. By this time winter weather had set in and a lull in the conflict ensued, but it was only temporary. With the advance of spring, the battle was renewed and the Board of Health petitioned once more, the paper being backed by the personal appearance before the board of many of the signers.

This became tiresome, and the board finally declared that if the petitioners would go before the proper authorities and make a complaint, the township counsel ,W. R. Coddington, would secure an injunction against the place. This led Glazier to seek terms of peace; only complete removal were the terms offered him. He asked for thirty days' grace to secure another site for his factory.

A place was finally found along the Lehigh Valley Railroad near the coal storage plant at South Plainfield. As soon as the residents of that place heard of the proposed industry which was to be located near them, there was a storm of protest arised against the invasion, and Glazier had more trouble on his hands. This and other matters interfered and made it necessary to extend the truce until July 1, when, it is said, if the plant is not moved or the business discontinued, the township counsel will be asked to seek the threatened injunction, as the residents declare they will not stand the nuisance another summer.

TOOK NO CHANCES.

Board of Elections Made Certain of J. W. Murray, Jr.'s Membership.

To avoid any question that might arise owing to a new law recently passed and signed yesterday by Governor Stokes, John W. Murray, Jr., was reappointed as a member of the Union County Board of Elections, at a meeting held in Elizabeth, last night. A report was made concerning the new law, but none of the members had any definite knowledge concerning it, and rather than take any chances it was decided to reappoint Mr. Murray. He was reappointed a year ago to serve two years, but the board thought the enw law might change this.

C. Addison Swift, of Elizabeth, was also reappointed a member of the board. The other business of the meeting was of a routine character. The Plainfield members present included J. W. Murray, Jr., Andrew McCardell, Frank H. Smith and Mayor J. F. Buckle.

LADIES' AID SOCIETY WELCOMES MRS. M'CREA

TENDERED HER PLEASANT RECEPTION IN VINCENT CHAPEL YESTERDAY.

After a brief session, in which the business for the year was concluded, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church, gave an informal reception in Vincent chapel, yesterday afternoon, in honor of Mrs. McCrea, wife of the pastor, Rev. A. C. McCrea. There was a large number of the members present and a delightful social time was had.

A pleasant feature was the presence of Mrs. Samantha Draper, aged ninety-two years, mother of Mrs. Eugene A. Edgar, of Craig place. She had just returned from Brooklyn, where she attended the birthday celebration of her sister, who is ninety-four years old. Although so far advanced in years, Mrs. Draper is unusually active and her mind is as clear as that of a person very much younger and she has no difficulty in getting about. She participated in the social features of yesterday's affair with a great deal of pleasure.

Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, as president of the society, was in charge of the reception, and Mrs. George H. Whitney and Mrs. James H. Robley were in charge of the refreshments. The cordial welcome extended to Mrs. McCrea evidenced the esteem and regard for the pastor's wife in her new field.

MISSING MAN FOUND; GOING TO ALASKA

BERNARD KISSAM'S RELATIVES RECEIVE A LETTER FROM HIM.

Bernard Kissam, formerly of this city, but late of Long Island, and was about three weeks ago reported missing, has been heard from. In a letter received here by relatives, he states that he is on his way to Alaska. He adds that he met with financial difficulty at his former home, and that in following his trade of contractor he was troubled by the unions.

It seems that he was employed by a cousin to assist him in some construction work, and because he was not a union man, all the other men on the job went on a strike. This and other troubles made him discouraged and he decided to go to Alaska.

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.

Occupants of Carriage Have Perilous Ride Behind a Runaway.

Frightened by the puffing of an automobile, a horse belonging to Mrs. George P. Dupee, of Rockview avenue, ran away on Park avenue, near Front street, just before noon yesterday. It was being driven by the coachman, and Mrs. Dupee and Miss Phillips, of Washington Park, were in the wagon.

A part of the harness breaking, made it impossible for the coachman to pull the animal back, and he was forced to let it run. It went through a maze of vehicles without mishap and finally came to a standstill opposite Truell Inn. The horse ran at top speed all the way, and the escape of all three occupants of the vehicle was miraculous.

Tearing Down Old Barn.

Alexander Kane, of this city, has purchased the old barn belonging to J. A. Smith, which has stood on the Smith farm, two miles beyond Bound Brook, for many years. He is now engaged in tearing it down and moving the material to this city. The beams are 16x24, oak frame. The barn has an inch and a quarter peg floor, this method being used in olden times. The structure is 36x40 and has a hued out frame and old-time novelty ten inch siding. Mr. Smith has erected a handsome barn on his farm, the building being considered one of the finest in this section of the State. It has a tile floor and a capacity for thirty tons of hay.

A Courier-"News" Story.

J. Fred MacDonald, of East Front street, emphatically denies the Courier-News story that he has purchased the property adjoining his property, and formerly occupied by Dr. Marcus L. Clawson. He says that he represents the owner of this property and is now getting estimates for him with a view to ascertaining whether the dwelling can be converted into a store property.

Wedding Postponed by Illness.

The wedding of Charles L. D. Smith, of West Third street, and Miss Mabel Arline Fox ,of Madison, announced to take place tonight, has been postponed because of the former's illness. It is not of a serious nature and the event will in all probability be celebrated next week.

METHODISTS' INNOVATION

First M. E. May Introduce Episcopal Church Music.

CHOIR NOW VESTED.

Official Board to Take Action on Proposition Tomorrow Night —Choirmaster's Desire.

An important meeting of the Official Board of the First M. E. church will be held tonight following the prayer meeting, when several questions of usual interest will be discussed. Among these will be that in reference to adopting the processional and recessional style of music at the regular church service for the choir. It is the wish of the choirmaster, as well as many members, that this Episcopal form of music be used in this church and to decide the question the Official Board has been asked to consider the it.

The chorus choir now at the church wears the vestments used in the Episcopal church, it having been introduced when a change was made in the position of organist several weeks ago. The music seems to be giving general satisfaction to a majority of the members of the church, it being considered a help in the congregational singing.

On Sunday night, June 25, the choir will give a choral service, and a very attractive programme of sacred selections is being arranged for the occasion.

PHILADELPHIA GIANTS FOR SATURDAY'S GAME

HOT CONTEST EXPECTED BY RIVAL MANAGERS.

The contest scheduled for Saturday on Crescent Oval between the Plainfields and the Philadelphia Giants will be one of the best of the season and should be liberally supported. Manager Schlicter says that he intends to win the coming contest. The best battery will be used and Monroe, the original coach, will be out in all his glory to make fun for the crowd.

The local team is a difficult one to beat, as everyone knows and every member is putting up a gilt-edged article of ball. This should be appreciated by all lovers of the game and Manager Daab should be given loyal support in his efforts to give the town the best ball it has ever had. He is now trying to complete a series of contests with Somerville and if successful, the fans will be more than delighted. A week from Saturday the strong All-Cubans will be here. This team has not lost a game since it arrived here from Cuba a month ago and the contest will be one of the banner attractions of the year.

Argument in Lees-Wickham Case.

Before Chief Justice Gummere, in the Supreme Court yesterday, argument was concluded in the motion made by Alvah A. Clark, as counsel, for a rule to show cause why a new trial should not be granted Dr. Albert Wickham, of Newark, in the suit for damages brought against him by George Lees, of North Plainfield. It began Monday, with George W. V. Moy acting for Lees. The original trial resulted in a verdict of $780 for the plaintiff. Lees claimed that the improper application of a plaster cast by the physician made him a cripple for life.

Road Improvements in Warren.

A large gang of men under the direction of the township committee, is busily engaged in making extensive repairs to the Washington Valley road running through Warrenville. A portable stone crushing plant is being employed and the crushed stone used is taken from the rocks along the road. The length of the road under repair is about three miles, and when completed will make it an attractive road for driving.

Middle State Examinations.

Again this year the pupils at the Plainfield High School will be able to take the preliminary college entrance examinations for any college or university through the Middle-States Board, which is accepted by all representative institutions. The exams will start on Monday, June 19, and last through Saturday, June 24.

Entertained Thistle Club.

The monthly meeting of the Thistle Club was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Bowden, of West Fourth street, last night, in connection with a social. Several hours after the business session were spent with music and games, after which refreshments were served.

HITS MAYOR AND CHIEF

Deposed Cop Takes a Parting Shot at Some of the Authorities.

THANKS HIS FRIENDS.

Hamilton Gives His Version of What Took Place at Police Board Hearing.

A letter, which explains itself, is received from Peter Hamilton, the special policeman who had been doing duty as a regular at the time when Chief Kiely notified him that his services would not be needed after June 1. The matter was brought before the Common Council on petition of over 100 citizens, and the grievance was investigated by the Police Board, which recommended that no action be taken by the city fathers. The report was adopted. This is Mr. Hamilton's letter:

To The Daily Press:

Kindly permit me through your valuable paper to thank all my stanch friends for their loyalty in standing by me in petitioning the Common Council for my appointment as a regular police officer. I feel that through their efforts and support that I have been vindicated in every particular and that through no fault of mine or charges of insubordination to my superior or superiors, and in justice to you as well as myself, I will explain to you the reasons that Chief Kiely advanced to the Police Board why I should not be appointed a regular police officer. On Friday evening, June 9, I was accorded a hearing by the Police Board of the City of Plainfield, in the presence of Chief Kiely and Sergeant Frederickson, when Chairman Tyler, of the Police Board, requested Chief Kiely to ask me the following questions; the questions asked by Chief Kiely of me are:

Question 1—Were you not in Lusardi's fruit store on December 10, 1903? The chief then said he and Councilman Frank Randolph seen me in there and that they took out their watches and timed me. The chief told the board that I was in there 20 minutes.

Answer to Question 1—I claimed I was only in their about three minutes, long enough to buy a pint of peanuts and put them in my overcoat. After the meeting of the Police Board I had a talk with Councilman Frank Randolph on North avenue, and he told me he remembered the night in question, but never took his watch out and timed me. He said he left the chief at the corner of Park avenue, he (Councilman Randolph) going down Park avenue, and the chief up Front street. Mr. Lusardi, when consulted by me, stated that he remembered the night in question ,for he seen the chief talking with me at the time. Mr. Lusardi has sworn to an affidavit that I was not in his store over three minutes. The chief also claimed before the Police Board that I was not using him right for arresting one Paul Ross, an Italian, for stealing coal. In this Ross case he was tried, found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of three dollars or be committed for ten days. I claimed before the Police Board that I was fulfilling my duties, for the chief gave orders three nights before to look out for coal thieves, so I arrested this man Paul Ross. In this matter, did I do right or wrong by obeying the instructions of my superior?

Question 2—Hamilton did you not say that you was watching a gambling joint on your beat, and that you would get in the place and arrest the offenders who were gambling, and that you would break in the door?

Answer to Question 2—No, sir. I said it was my intentions to get in the place when some one of the crowd came out. I reported on my book in the morning that gambling was going on in this place, but it was never entered on the Daily Blotter at police headquarters, as is usual in all cases.

Question 3—By Chief Kiely: Hamilton, are you going to Somerville tomorrow on that colored case?

Answer to Question 3—Why, yes, I was served with a subpoena, and if I do not go I have no fifty ($50) dollars to pay a fine. In this matter, could I do anything else but go when I was subpoenaed?

The truth of the whole matter is that Chief Kiely did not want me on the force under any circumstances, and if I had acted wrong in going into Lusardi's on that night to buy peanuts, which was the first month I went on the force, why did he keep me on eighteen months as a special. I think I have been treated most shamefully by both Mayor Buckle and Chief Kiely, as I feel that I should have been appointed a regular, when he could prove no charges. Again thanking my friends for what they have done in my behalf, I remain,

PETER HAMILTON.

GET FOUCI'S CUSTOMERS

Brothers Bivona Come Here With Their Baskets of Fish.

WITHOUT A LICENSE.

But It is a Matter Easily Fixed, Yes—Neighbors of Murdered Man—Plain Tale in Court.

Lorenzo Fouci, the fish pedler who was murdered by Luigi Scadite in a dispute over the division of the territory among the Italians here, last week, lived at 120 Elizabeth street, New York. In No. 91 live Damiano and Caligiro Bivona, brothers, who are fish pedlers, too. Ever since the murder they have been thinking of the shamefulness that such a fine and rich territory should go to waste for the lack of enterprise. Of a surety, it was sad that such a black deed should make the territory to be open, but what would you? One must live, and who more entitled to get his living in the Providentially-offered field than Damiano and Caligiro Bovina?

So Damiano and Caligiro, who are young enough to love adventure, shouldered their baskets this morning and came to Plainfield. Trade was very good—of a magnificence not to be imagined by one who has not come to a territory unserved of fine fish for a week, and the baskets were half empty at 9 o'clock, when Roundsman Flynn stopped Caligiro and Damiano on Plainfield avenue and asked them for their license. They had one for New York, but one for Plainfield, no. It was that they did not know one was necessary, you understand, not that they desired to cheat the great city of Plainfield, which is a most beautiful place and reminds one much of Palermo, which, of a surety, is very beautiful. Assuredly, they would accompany Signor Captain of Police to the station house. It was but just, and they could explain.

Judge Runyon heard the explanation a half hour later. He was won by the wide smiles of the brothers, and graciously granted them permission to carry on the pedling, after they had taken out a license, without any punishment for neglecting to get it in the first place.

"I knew that man Fouci very well, yes," said Damiano, before he left with Caligiro. "He was a good man; yes ,and a brave one. He not afraid of one or a dozen, no. I knew that Scaduto, too, all know him on 'Liz'beth and Mulberry streets. He bad man, yes, very bad. All time make to fight. We—all peop' in 'Liz'beth street—think he shoot himself in face. Make appear good for him, you understand? Yes, a bad man."

Caligiro and Damiano went on their way smiling very broadly. Thinking, maybe, of the Italian version of "It's an ill wind, etc."

SOMERSET'S BOARD ALSO ACCEPTS SOME INVITATIONS.

There was a good attendance at the regular meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders in the Court House at Somerville yesterday, but no business of importance was transacted, with the exception of the passing of 198 bills.

A communication was received from Spencer Weart in reference to the good condition of the county road from Millstone to New Brunswick.

Invitations were accepted to attend a shoot on Company M's range Saturday afternoon and the celebration of July 4 by the Washington Camp Ground Association at Bound Brook.

Washington Rock Painted.

Constable William Pangborn, of the borough, who has had charge of the old landmark at Washington Rock, annually painting the rock and making it a center of attraction for visitors, adopted a new method this year of marking it. He used a composition of glue and lime, covering the large stone by means of a pump. The rock presents a bright and clean appearance and can be seen for many miles around. The work was made possible through subscriptions received by Mr. Pangborn from friends.

P. H. S. Final Exams.

Final examinations in the several subjects of the Plainfield High School were bgeun this morning. Subjects of the second and first periods were given today; those of the seventh and third will be given tomorrow, on Friday those of the fifth and sixth periods will come, and on Monday they will end with those of the fourth and eighth periods .

PLAINFIELD WOMEN QUALIFY AT BALTUSROL

MRS. N. P. ROGERS PLAYS IN GOOD FORM.

Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers, of the Plainfield Country Club, was among those who qualified in the initial play for the championship of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, begun yesterday at the Baltusrol Golf Club. She qualified with a score of 101, going out in a 52 and returning with a 49. Today she is paired with Mrs. H. B. Clark, of Apawamis, for the first round match play which started this morning.

In the consolation cup division, Miss Maud VanBoskerck qualified with a score of 116 and Mrs. Walter Gaston, also of this city, qualified with a score of 132.

An additional attraction yesterday afternoon was a driving contest in which Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers returned a score of 153 and Miss Maud VanBoskerck's score was 155.

In winning the low score medal in the qualifying round for the championship play, Mrs. Charles T. Stout made what is undoubtedly the best score ever recorded by a woman in this country. Mrs. Stout made 86, two strokes under the woman's record for the course, made by Miss Rhona Adair, the British champion, in 1903 and the best performance made by her on the trip.

RAPID PROGRESS MADE IN NEW THEATRE WORK

OPENING WILL POSITIVELY TAKE PLACE ON AUGUST 24 AS ANNOUNCED.

The work of removing the interior of Washington Hall in order to make room for the new theatre is progressing steadily and the short delay occasioned by the hold-up of the permit has already been overcome. Superintendent Kenour, acting for the Fuller Claflin Company, has an experienced force of "wreckers" on the job and they have cleared out the greated part of the first and second floors. They will reach the roof by Monday and inside of a week, the brick fire wall to separate the auditorium from the proposed lodge rooms will be in place.

Manager W. H. Gelatt expressed himself as being well pleased with the progress made when interviewed yesterday, and said that the opening would positively be on August 24 as previously announced.

"Not only that," said Mr. Gelatt, "but we will have the theatre completed and ready for inspection on August 21. It is the intention of Mr. Counihan and myself to allow those interested to see the interior from end to end before the first audience is seated."

In addition to the many high class plays already booked, Manager Gelatt yesterday completed arrangements for the appearance at the theatre on September 13 of Effie Elisler in her revival of "Hazel Kirke," one of the largest New York productions for the coming season. On September 29, William A. Brady's ever-popular "Way Down East" will be the attraction and on October 24, "Nancy Brown," will make her first local bow. The title role will be played by Miss Mary Marble, who will be remembered by Plainfielders for her clever work in Hoyt's farce, "A Milk White Flag."

For the colder months of the season, the management has several big productions in view, one of the most noteworthy already booked being "jolly" May Irwin in her last season's success, "Mrs. Black is Back."

BOY BITTEN BY DOG.

Canine Grabs Lad by the Leg.

Walter Kenyon, aged six years, son of Mr. and Msr. George H. Kenyon, of Mercer avenue, was bitten in the leg yesterday afternoon by a pet dog and it was necessary for the father to take the boy to Dr. Cregar to have the wound canterized.

The attack occurred on Grant avenue. Mr. Kenyon was in a house on business and he left his son outside with the horse and wagon. The boy was playing with the dog which had a small pup, the only one left out of a recent litter. When Mr. Kenyon got ready to leave, the boy started to run to get in the wagon and the mother dog grabbed the boy's leg, inflicting a painful injury. No serious consequences are anticipated.

PLEAD TO INDICTMENTS

Two Charged With Keeping Disorderly Houses Say "Not Guilty".

ONE ADMITS FORGERY.

George Neal and Lena Friedman Released on Bail—James Springs to be Sentenced.

George Neal, of Exchange alley, indicted by the Grand Jury with keeping a disorderly house, was arraigned in the Court of Common Pleas, Elizabeth, this morning. He entered a plea of not guilty and his trial was set down for Thursday, June 22. He was released in $500 bail. The specific charge is that he allowed gambling on the premises.

Lena Friedman, of this city ,wife of Abram Friedman, who was arraigned last week on an indictment found by the Grand Jury for illegal liquor selling, was arraigned in court this morning on a similar general charge. She entered a plea of not guilty and her trial was set down for Wednesday, June 21. She was released in $200 bail.

James Springs, colored, indicted on two charges of forgery, and who entered a plea of not guilty, last week, retracted that plea this morning to one of non vult, and he will be sentenced on Wednesday, June 28. Springs was employed at Truell Inn. He got possession of Mrs. Justine Zook's check book and forged her name to a check which he sent to a Western National Bank, accompanied by a letter, giving instructions as to where the money was to be sent. The work was bungling, and Springs was easily caught.

GIVES UP HOPE OF HIS FANWOOD LOVE

JEROME LANGER WILL WED GIRL HE WOOED IN WRECK.

Jerome Langer, the young electrical engineer attached to the Brooklyn Navy Yard, who was frustrated in an attempt to elope with Miss Madeline Uhler, of Fanwood, a year and a half ago, by Miss Uhler's father, has found a balm for his wounded heart. His engagement to Miss Annie Healy, of Brooklyn, has been announced. They will be married on June 28. Miss Healy is wealthy.

Young Langer seems to be marked for the romantic. He became interested in Miss Healy as the result of a railroad wreck on the Erie, last July, when the ill-fated Greenwood Lake excursion train rushed to destruction. Mr. Langer and Miss Healy were in a party together. Both were thrown out, and Miss Healy's head was cut. Langer tore his shirt sleeve up to make bandages for her wounds.

Since then the pair have been in two trolley smash-ups in Brooklyn. They passed through them unhurt, and they think now that they are immune.

SAW HIM IN HER ROOM, SHE TELLS THE JURY

MRS. HEATHERINGTON IDENTIFIES PRISONER IN BURGLARY CASE.

Today is the first day for the trial of criminal causes in the Union County Court, and most of the time is being taken up with the trial of James Steadham, of Newark, charged with committing a burglary at the home of Richard Hetherington, on South Broad street, Elizabeth, on the night of May 29.

The defendant makes a complete denial, while Mrs. Hetherington, who claims she saw the man in her room, before she awoke her husband, states that her indentificatron is positive. Goods stolen at the home were also found in Steadman's possession. He made his escape the night of the burglary but was arrested the following day. He is represented by Lawyer Edwards, of Newark, and the case will probably take all day.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

It has been learned on good authority that Col. Hine, speaking for the Public Service Corproation, did make the threat, in a letter, to move the terminus of the trolley from the borough to Jefferson avenue unless a franchise for a loop was granted by the council. More than that, the Colonel has declared that the loop must be permitted in the neighborhood of Apgar's hall. This letter, which is supposed to be a communication not for publication or discussion in open council unless the Colonel gives the word, declares that the company has discovered that its running time will not permit the extension of the service beyond Apgar's hall. It says bluntly that if the loop is not put there, or some point contiguous, the corporation will apply to the city for permission to send the loop around the old terminus site at Jefferson avenue. If the council finds itself confronted with this alternative, it will hardly stand in the way of the Apgar's hall location. A great howl from the citizens is likely to strike its ears if it does, for a shift of the terminus as threatened would mean a half-hour service through the length of the borough, a consummation not all devoutly desired.

The Piscataway Water Company's and the P. S. C.'s gas main franchises were passed with quietude and dispatch on their third and final reading by the township committee Monday afternoon. There was no discussion nor comment. The incidents are now closed for good, and it is supposed that the companies are satisfied. The citizens will have to be.

VAN NESS CAPTURES A CHICKEN THIEF

DISAPPOINTMENT WHEN 'SQUIRE CLARK WOULDN'T HEAR CASE.

Count J. K. Van Ness, of East Front street, who has been before the public in various ways for a number of years past, figured in a new role yesterday morning, that of capturing chicken thieves. The "Count," while talking to George Long, near his home, about 9 o'clock, noticed four negroes chasing a flock of his prize chickens that were picking in a nearby field, and Van Ness and Long, without hesitation, started in pursuit of the men.

As soon as the lovers of "white meat" found they were detected they started on a run across the field. The pursuers began to gain upon them and they separated, leaving the Count in a predicament, as he saw visions of a complete surrender vanishing. A hasty consultation of war was held, and it was decided to follow the slowest runner, as the chase would not be so tiring to the "Count" and his friend. After nearly a two-mile run the negro was captured near the water tank.

As the captors had no desire to risk losing their quarry, they tied him to a wagon before beginning their victorious march to Scotch Plains, where Van Ness intended to make a charge before Judge Clark. The "Count" has not brushed up on legal points of late, so did not know that the recent spring election law had left the Plains without a justice of the peace, and no complaint could be entertained by the judge. Nothing daunted, the 'Count" declared he intended having justice if he had to travel all over Union county. The last the Plains residents saw of the trio they were wending their way toward Westfield, where, it is said, the "Count" found a justice of the peace who had been fortunate enough to escape coming under the ban of the new law.

A half a century ago, girls, fortunate enough to go to school at all, learned only the three R's. A half a decade ago they were engrossed apparently with only geometry, trigonometry and higher mathematics, but to-day, to all of these is added a thorough knowledge of culinary art, the care of the kitchen, and the value of fuels. Gas is the ideal fuel for cooking and also for other kitchen appliances. Chief among these is the Gas Hot Water Heater. Speedy and reliable, it becomes a necessary adjunct to comfort when coal fires are out. $8.50 buys one.

True Story of Baron Rockefeller.

William Rockefeller, the only real American Baron, who is trying to conduct his Adirondack preserves as the feudal bosses of old did theirs, is finding it a difficult task to drive out of existence a little town. He is also in deadly fear of being put to death. The whole affair makes a story so un-American in its details as to make it seem impossible that it is really taking place in the United States. A reporter for the New York Sunday World has spent several days going over the ground, and the result of his investigations makes very interesting reading. See next Sunday's World.

MOTORMAN DOOLEY MYSTERIOUSLY HURT

FELL FROM PLATFORM AND FOUND IN THE ROAD.

Just how Harry Dooley, a motorman on a Plainfield car, came to be thrown from the platform into the roadway at Aldene Sunday evening, sustaining ugly bruises on the face and head and losing two teeth, has not yet been explained, nor is the conductor of the car able to tell how the accident occurred. Dooley was running his car towards Elizabeth, when suddenly it stopped. The conductor alighted and found Dooley lying in the roadway, a mass of cuts and bruises, and bleeding profusely. He hastened the car to Elizabeth, and then a message was sent to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital from Oliver & Drake Company's drug store, and in less than ten minutes Dooley was being well cared for. So swollen is his mouth that he is unable to talk coherently, and therefore cannot tell how the accident happened.

The superintendent of the Public Service said yesterday morning: "I don't know just how it happened, for I can't get anything definite about the matter. All the conductor knows is that the motorman fell off. There was a telephone wire hanging from a pole in front of the car, and the motorman hight have tried to remove it." It is also said that Dooley was struck in the face as the wire broke, but the superintendent said this was improbable, for the motorman would have to be bending down at the time.

This is the second time an accident of this character has happened. Just four weeks ago last night, John Brown, of Elizabeth, was picked up unconscious and badly injured on the Newark road, having either been pushed from the car or fallen off. He is now at the hospital and is slowly recovering. It does no tseem probable, however, that Dooley was thrown from the car. He is 22 years of age and lives on Franklin street, Elizabeth.

JERSEY IN THE EXPOSITION.

Homer Davenport, of Morristown, Represented at Exhibition.

Morristown, June 14 — Homer Davenport, the cartoonist, is attending the Lewis and Clark Exposition. He sent out several of his Arabian horses and many of his rare birds, which form an interesting feature at the exhibition. Among the horses sent across the continent is Obeyan, the famous stallion exhibited by special permission of the Sultan of Turkey at the Columbia Exposition in 1893 and now owned by Mr. Davenport. Since he left for the West, his superintendent, P. W. Geer, has arrived home from Europe, bringing with him 200 new birds, almost all of which were shipped from different Asiatic points, and met by him on the other side to see that they were properly prepared for the ocean voyage.

Besides the birds Mr. Geer brought three yak, the buffalo of Thibet; two Indian antelopes, delicate little creatures from India, and several Equues Przevalskij, the wild horse of Asia, from which the domestic animal originated. They are small, but perfectly formed horses. All of these animals are in the fields adjoining the main road passing Davenport Farms, the antelope chasing over the lawns about the house, the yak wading about the miniature lake or sunning themselves on the island in its centre, and the horses grazing behind a wire fence, apparently undisturbed by either the signt of passing automobiles.

BIG LIGHTING PLANT.

Voltage 6.600 at Perth Amboy Power House.

The Public Service plant at Perth Amboy Junction is becoming one of the largest electric stations in New Jersey. There are five large and modern boilers in use there now, which makes it necessary to have five huge stacks projecting from the roof of the plant. In the modern and powerful machinery building a brick office building will be located, which will be the offices of the central department of the Public Service. General Superintendent H. C. Richardson will have his headquarters there.

Daniel Feary, an experienced electrical engineer, is chief engineer of the plant, which promises to be one of the largest in the State. The voltage supplied at the present time reaches 6,600, and in a short time will be increased. The Perth Amboy-New Brunswick trolley will be run by power furnished by this station.

Brutal Servant.

Lucy Williams, the colored servant who is charged with attempting to poison the children of Mr. and Mrs. Manola Ysern, of No. 178 Irving place, Rutherford, N. J., Sunday, when arraigned before Justice of the Peace Collins that she "didn't intend to kill the girls, but just wanted them to get good and sick." She will be sent to the State Home.

Holt Apgar Claims That Raise is Absolutely Necessary.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

Old Members Pay Most—Five Options Are Now Allowed—Now on Solid Financial Basis.

Counselor W. Holt Apgar, member of the supreme body of the Royal Arcanum, made an address before Capital City Council, No. 392, at Trenton, the other night, on the increased assessment rates adopted at the recent meeting of the supreme body at Atlantic City.

Mr. Apgar claimed that the raise in rates was necessary to put the order on a sound financial basis, owing to the fact that in the past the insurance has been carried at rates far below its actual cost and much cheaper than the old line companies.

Mr. Apgar presented the following statements as a foundation for the necessity of the increase. For eleven years leaders in the fraternity have seen that the old rates were inequitable in that they did no tprovide sufficiently for the future. At the meeting of the imperial council in Cleveland in 1898 the executive committee submitted a report providing for a raise in the rates. The report was prepared with the help of actuaries of high repute. But sixteen out of ninety-six members favored this report. A compromise was adopted under which an emergency fund was created. By 1903 this had grown to $2,000,000.

In 1904 the order paid out in benefits $271,654.40 more than it received, and in the first five months of 1905 the deficit was $227,573.90. To meet these over drafts $300,000 worth of bonds were sold and $95,000 was paid out of the emergency fund.

Old Members Pay Most.

Mr. Apgar explained the deficits by saying that an equitable financial plan was not adopted when the order was first organized. The rates were low and only enough assessments were collected to meet immediate needs. No provision was made for a surplus, such as the insurance companies provide.

The speaker said it was charged that the new rates were unjust in the cases of the older members. He acknowledged that th erates were higher proportionately for them, but said this fact must be remembered. These members joined the fraternity when it was young, and then paid far from an equitable sum annually to guarantee the order in the future. In the first years of the organization, it was claimed, only two or three assessments were called for annually because that was all that was needed at that time.

So, claimed Mr. Apgar, these old members, during all these years of their membership, have kept in their pockets money that, had the rates been properly fixed at the start, would have gone into a surplus fund, rendering the present increase unnecessary. The argument was, therefore, that the older members, under the new rates, will pay more in the aggregate of years than they would have paid had the rates been equitably adjusted in the past. Speaking further, Mr. Apgar said:

Five Options Allowed.

"Notwithstanding the steady growth of the order during the past eleven years, each year shows a larger number of the 'fifty years and upwards class' over the preceding year; also, that there has been a steady increase in the number of deaths in such class, as well as an increased percentage when compared with the whole number of deaths. The increase in the aggregate number of deaths each year is largely due to these annually augumented classes of advanced ages.

"But not only have the deaths increased in number, as is shown, but the liability of the order is being largely increased without any corresponding income from these more hazardous risks. Thus in 1903 the amount contributed by our membership assessed at ages below fifty was approximately $6,834,329.68, and by those assessed at ages of fifty and upwards was approximately $690,556.68. The amount paid for those dying at ages actually below fifty was $2,970,500, and for those dying at ages actually fifty and upwards was $4,488,000.

"The latter class thus contributed approximately $3,792,443.32 less than it received, or, reversing the statement, this fifty years and upwards class received about five and one-half times as much as it paid in. In 1904 the amount contributed by those assessed at ages under fifty was about $7,180,198.50, and by those over fifty about $703,710.72. The amount paid for deaths under fifty was $3,045,500, and for those above fifty, $5,100,500, or more than seven times as much as they contributed."

Mr. Apgar explained the five options allowed by the new rates. He said the increased rates were based on the mortality tables worked out by expert actuaries from the records of 400,000 members of the fraternity during a period of about twenty years. He insisted that now the Royal Arcanum is on a solid financial ground, and will in future pay its own way under all conditions.

Teachers' Fund Case.

A memorandum was filed by the Supreme Court at Trenton yesterday, ordering a judgment in favor of Miss Harriet E. Ball, on the demurrer interposed by the trustees of the teachers' retirement fund. The court held that the matters set out in the pleas filed by the trustees constitute no defense to the action of Miss Ball. Since Miss Ball brought her suit to be retired the law has been amended so as to give the trustees the right to determine in their discretion under what circumstances a teacher shall be retired.

Plainfield, N. J., June 14, 1905.

You might manage a horse without a bridle—but the horse is more likely to manage you, says an advertising man. He adds that, you might manage your business without advertising—but it is more likely to manag eyou.

It has fallen to the lot of Manager Philip Daab to supply Plainfield with an article of ball that it has never seen on a local diamond. Even in the days of the old Crescents, when Billy Keeler, Tuck Turner, Wille Murphy, Chick Hofford, Freddie Jones, Eddie Daly, Billy McAdoo, Jack Martin, and other crack players wore the Plainfield uniform, no such a game was put up. A faster proposition of ball is being played today and the aggregation gotten together by Mr. Daab is probably equal to any team in the Eastern League. Saturday's attraction will be the Philadelphia Giants and the fans count on it for the eleventh consecutive victory.
